There will be a large number of people in the city during tournament week, at their regular meeting tonight, increase all over the city. The eight annual tournament of the Nebraska Firemen's Association opened today with flattering prospects. The grounds have been prepared with great care and the track is thought to be the best in the state. The local committee have completed arrangements in every particular so that all details will be attended with satisfaction. An electric ball will note the time of the start in each contest to the fourth of a second, and the judges will have that under control. The city is beautifully decorated. Main street is festooned with triumphant arches, streamers and profusion of bnnting. Painted on a large piece of cloth temperance and prohibition are both on and reaching across the foot of Main street are the words, "Welcome Firemen' The headquarters are at Rockwood Mall

AMENDMENT NOTES.

ANON.

As we go up and down the streets of this city we are becoming acquainted with numbers of the genteel, generous, and as a class, intelligent people of this

In the course of conversation we usual ly speak of the amendment question, which is being agitated more and more every day, and which must soon be settled by the votes of the citizens. While a great many are well read and up with the times, they do not seem to have studied logically and consistently, the amendment question.

The first objection with many is, "This is a free country and I don,t believe in and doubtless the mayor and council will making men do anything against their will." To this we say, this amendment the police force to such a number as will if passed, will be done in just the same guarantee safety to person and property | manner the other sixteen amendments have, by two thirds majority, and then how many have you forced to leave off drinking against their will? Not more than one third and the other two thirds ought to have the power to carry and enfoice the amendment. We want men to be persuaded 'hat they should vote for a right principle or quit drinking, because it is a right thing to do, and not do either against their wills.

Some people say, "What will the poor farmer do with all his grain if we have prohibition? Why, dear man, the majority of the farmers in this state want prohibition; then should you and I, who live in the city, say that two-thirds or the majority of the farmers shall not have prohibition? It seems to me that the poor farmer ought to know his own business better than we do. Another man says, "I don't care if a man takes a ments, agreed that they would reduce glass or two and goes on about his busithe rates for the benefit of the fire boys ness; and whose business is it?" "But I don't like to see men act the fool and get drunk, and I am in favor of high license for some one else will get the money anyway, and we might as well have the money as any other town.1 But, dear friends, when you vote for the high license you vote for the saloon; and when you vote for the saloon that means that there will be ardent spirits record. The boys are looking forward | sold to make it profitable for the saloen to see the best races ever run in the state. keeper, and if he sells ardent spirits drunkenness is very apt to follow, with all its evils. And so far as the money question is concerned, the saloon keeper needs send somewhere and buy his stock of spirits and in this way he sends your money away from here and more than

Then simply because some one else does wrong for money, is this any just reason for us to have high license?

Some say we could not get along without ardent spirits for medicine, etc. Well, the amendment will only prohibit the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits as a beverage and nothing else.

Now in conclusion I would say to every voter, search the records of the states which have adopted prohibition and also those who have not; not by any one else's hearsay, or by what the papers say, but search for yourself and see for yourself who pays the most taxes; which have the greatest number of criminals and outlaws; see which are prospering the most; and then stop and consider which is right from principle, pronibition or high license? Search for yourself and not for another, and see whether you are consistent, impartial, and strictly temperate, which means prohibition, for the same side of the fence. -O. T. W.

Horse In a Well.

From Tuesday's Daily. Jackson Rakes, a farmer living down in Liberty precinct, and his two boys drove up to the city this morning to see the show and tournament, and, to com bine business with pleasure, they loaded up with cord wood, came to town and sold their load to Mrs. Hart, a widow lady down on south Third street, unloaded the wood and in turning the team around on an adjoining vacant lot belonging to the railroad company, one of the horses dropped into an old well which was negligently left uncovered, falling to the bottom, a depth of about fifteen feet. This occurred at about 11:30 a. m. Word of the accident was got to Mr. Hawksworth at once, and he ordered that a derrick be taken from the shops, and an effort be made to lift the animal bodily.

About two hours were spent in trying to rescue the horse by means of the derrick, and finding this fruitless, a large force of men were put to work to dig the dirt from around the animal, and at this writing, 2 p. m. they have not reached a depth where it can be rescued, Doubtless the animal has suffered great injury, and will be valueless when taken out, as Last week a boys' base ball club of the well is small in diameter, and walled this city went down to play the boys of with stone and brick, and the horse has Rock Bluff. On arriving there, the boys done a great deal of plunging and scuffl-

When the train | 53,902 reached Bellevue, Conductor Carter telegraphed back that Eikenbary was robbed just as No. 3 left Plattsmouth.

Nothing farther has been learned up to this writing, and it is not known whether Mr. Eikenbary had a considerable amount of money on his person or not, but it is not probable that he had, as Mr. Eikenbary is a man accustomed to traveling and is not likely to be caught that way.

Lively Scuffle. Tuesday's Daily,

Just before the noon hour a lively little scuffle occurred at O'Connor's saloon door between Officer Kroeler and Edgar Carrell, a young man who has been doing day labor about the city. A HERALD reporter was informed that Carrell, being quite well acquainted with Mr. Kroeler and somewhat under the influence of liquor, addressed him in a manner common in such company, but applying to him an epithet which seemed to grate upon the officers dignity, when he siezed Carrell and made an effort to hustle him out at the door, but the unwillingness of Carrell to be led, caused the officer to summon help and finally to be escorted to the jail.
