THE Sarpy Sentinel printed at Papillion is a little the liveliest alliance paper that reaches this office.

ASIATIC cholera is raging in the far east with unabated vigor. This country should take no chances on becoming infected with the dreaded scourge.

A DEMOCRATIC contemporary writes: "Campbell is in the lead but strangely enough omits the rest of the sentence, "of a forlorn hope."—Ex.

A MOVEMENT is on foot among New York City colored people to raise $75,000 or $100,000 for a colored soldiers' monument. National co-operation will be solicited.

THE fellows who are trying to knockout Col. Mayfield of the Elmwood Echo, have tackled too big a job. The Echo is a credit to the town of Elmwood and deserves a hearty support.

GOVERNOR THAYER is out in the new County of Boyd trying to settle the county seat squabble fairly between the contending factions, who have worked themselves up to a white heat.

JERRY SIMPSON, the sockless statesman from Kansas, has seen the handwriting on the wall, and is now engaged in booming the state which he has injured by his recent abuse and talk of bankruptcy and hardtimes.

WHAT is the matter with the democratic and independent newspapers? They do not rise up to announce that binding twine is selling for three cents per pound less than it did last year. This is what is being done, yet the free trade papers do not say anything about it.

AS Hamilton county goes so goes Ohio—has long been recognized as a truism in that state. That Hamilton county will not support Governor Campbell is very clear, hence we may infer that W. J. McKinley will be the next governor of the Buckeye state.

THE Ohio democrats, in casting about for something to want that the present administration was not after, declared in favor of reciprocity and closer trade relations with Canada. In what particular Canada's products differ from ours, the convention forgot to state.

ASTRONOMERS have discovered two more spots on the sun. The Inter-Ocean says they are free trade spots and should not alarm the people, as they are easy to knock off. And the Inter-Ocean knows, for it has been signally successful knocking free trade spots from the body politic.

THE usual convention speech always abounds largely in buncombe. The tirade against extravagant legislation at the recent Ohio democratic state convention, however, takes the breath of the average man, who recognizes the Campbell administration as the most extravagant in the last 20 years' history of the state.

IT is claimed by the Norfolk papers that the farmers in that vicinity will realize $90 per acre for their sugar beets. If half of that amount is expended in cultivation and marketing it would still leave a net balance of $30 per acre which is nearly twice the value of the land. Sugar beet raising ought to become popular.

THE Illinois trust law seems to be the best one so far framed out of several that have been placed upon the statute books of several states within the last three or four years. The Illinois law has already smashed several trusts without the people having to invoke the aid of the courts. The life of the American trusts is uncertain at best, while under our free and liberal government they became entrenched, yet the strong arm of the law can and will reach them.

OUR COAL IN SOUTH AMERICA. Few things have probably occurred so injurious to the industries and commerce of the south, particularly that part of it fronting on the Gulf, as the failure to pass the shipping bounty bill as it was reported by Congressman Farquhar. That bill would have covered not only the Gulf coast with ship-building yards, but the bounty paid to American-built vessels would have covered the seas to the southward with schooners and steamers carrying at first coal and later, merchandise.

Possibly the editors of some southern newspapers which will again support congressmen who voted against this bill, will say to their readers whether or not they think these vessels would not soon, in many cases, build up regular lines, carrying the products of the Gulf states and bringing back the products of the countries visited? They say they want foreign trade, but they act as if the only foreign trade they wanted was the poverty-breeding trade of selling raw materials to Western Europe.

How many cargoes has Mobile, which should be a great coal shipping port, sent to Brazil, and how much coffee has she imported in return? Mobile has neither the capital nor the influence to get a single line of steamers large enough to carry the mails, so she will probably continue to get her Rio coffee through New York. But if the Farquhar bill had passed she might have used Alabama iron, lumber and cotton to build and equip vessels that would have been explorers for her trade with countries to the southward.

The English papers recognize the value of the services rendered them by the southern representatives, one of our contemporaries of the country saying:

As far as coal is concerned it is not likely that the United States will be in a position to compete with us, who have now the whole of the business.

This coal trade gives great strength to British commerce in the countries lying south of us. As all of their coal is imported, any portion of a cargo can be made up with coal, which is certain of a sale in default of competition from the United States. There is no other item in which the Farquhar bill would have so injured the trade and commerce of Great Britain, and have done so much for the Gulf coast as this one item of coal.—American Economist.

THE PROVIDENCE "JOURNAL" ON WOOL PRICES

That the literary efforts of the "Reform" Club in this city are of great value to editors of vacant or lazy minds goes without saying but there are drawbacks to the careless use of editorials sent out by even such well-trained literati as those employed on the corner of Fifth avenue and 27th street. A sad instance of this is found in the Providence Journal of a late date, where an editorial, evidently intended for a bucolic section of the country, is misplaced in the succeeding column to one intended for manufacturing community.

One editorial, after mentioning the failure of a woolen firm in Philadelphia, after carrying on business for thirty-three years, says of the senior partner:

He has found, however, that high cost of production from high-taxed raw material has cut down his market until failure became necessary.

The others says, in championship of the farmers:

They will want to know why under the advanced wool duties of the new law, the prices of domestic fleeces have declined.—N. Y. Tribune.

EUROPE is evidently trying to take lessons from the United States in the matter of husbanding commercial and industrial opportunities. The nations comprising the Triple alliance are perfecting a great customs league for their mutual advantage, and agreeing that none of the contracting powers shall make any commercial treaty with another country without the consent of the members of the league. They have admitted Switzerland into the combination, but England, France, Spain, and Portugal are regarded as outsiders. The conditions are entirely different from those prevailing amongst the free nations of the American continent, where there is a natural community of interests and where the industries are so varied that a vast system of exchange of products can be effected without the injurious competition which enters into foreign trade. It will be interesting to note the effect of the Alliance upon the trend of trade between the parties to the league and the neutral States.—Ex.

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. 2

OUR exports to Brazil during May 1891 show an increase of 80 per cent over the exports to the same country during the same month one year ago. This republican administration is ruining the foreign commerce of the country at an alarming rate. It is "stifling" and "smothering" trade whenever it has a chance.

MEIKLEJOHN for supreme judge! Rats! Meikle's head is already swelled bad enough without getting a supreme court bee to buzzing in his hat. If Walt Seelye gets interviewed again in Meiklejohn's interest, we shall ask for the appointment of a committee of Enquiry to delaminate to investigate the status of his mind; it must be failing.

THE New York Sun finds Dan Lamont an unfavorable candidate for the presidency on account of the growing sentiment against a second term. He was president during the four years in which he "acted as pilot fish to the whale," according to Brother Dana, and that rules him out, although he is a "rattling good fellow and not ineligible on account of noxious suet."

ON Chauncey M. Depew's manel in the reception room of his elegant home on Fifty-fourth street, New York, there is a miniature locomotive of burnished steel, silver, and gold, the workmanship on which is simply marvelous. It is perfect in every detail and forms the setting for a clock and barometer. It is said that Mr. Depew is particular that the clock shall be kept wound, and if he goes into the room to meet guests and finds that it is not running he will not stay there to talk with them, but has them pass into his library or parlor, while he sends for a servant and has the clock set a going.

IT is seldom that Washington has a political sensation at this season, of the year unless congress happens to be in session, but a sensation of the first magnitude was sprung here this week by the announcement that Representatives Mills and Bynum had determined to withdraw as candidates for the speakership of the house and to throw their strength as far as possible to Representative Holman, of Indiana, who had not to this time been considered as a candidate. And that isn't all. It is stated that Mr. Mills is to head an open revolt against Cleveland as a presidential candidate, and that he has assurances of assistance from a number of southern and western democrats who favor the nomination of ex-Representative ("Horizontal Bill") Morrison, at present one of the interstate commissioners, or some other western man.—Madison Chronicle

"THE state banquet at Windsor," says a London correspondent, "was the most magnificent entertainment which has been given at the castle since the visit of Napoleon III, and Eugenie, in April, 1855. Last week I estimated the value of the plate which would be used or displayed in St. George's Hall at $500,000, but I believe in reality it was worth more like $800,000; for not only was the gold service which Rundell & Bridge manufactured for George IV. used, but Indian and Chinese trophies, famous gold shields, the huge silver winecooler in which two men can comfortably sit, gold flagons, candelabra, vases, and the well-known St. George candelabra were all to be seen, the last being placed exactly opposite to the Queen and the Emperor. The floral decorations were extremely beautiful and excited universal admiration. The Queen's priceless services of Worcester and Crown Derby china were used."

HOW ENGLAND IS AFFECTED BY RECIPROCITY.

The London correspondent of the Manufacturer referring to the policy of reciprocity, says that this piece of Mr Blaine's statesmanship was not at first appreciated in England at its true value. John Bull however, is beginning to open his eyes to the consequences of a policy which threatens to take away from him many a market that he has hitherto monopolized. Mr. Blaine has hit John Bull hard on more than one occasion, but reciprocity is one of the hardest blows he has delivered. "The British exporter," writes the London correspondent to the Manufacturer, "is beginning to appreciate the seriousness of the situation. The reciprocity clause is applicable to very many English possessions. It has already been coquetted with by its West India colonies who see as clearly as possible that their interests lie with the United States and not with Great Britain. Queensland, Natal and a few other equally promising colonial dependents will, no doubt, soon be nibbling at the tempting offers held out by the United States. All English colonies producing molasses, sugar, hides, tea, and coffee will begin to ask themselves whether it would not be well to receive American manufactured goods at a preferential tariff if they can send their produce to such a free market as America. What, then, will be the attitude of England towards those colonies if they are determined to make the best bargain for themselves? Will British goods be discriminated against in British possessions? And, if so, what will become of the colonial trade? Perhaps, unknowingly, the reciprocity clause will be the corner stone upon which British Imperial disintegration will work. It would be a cruel piece of legislation if the McKinley act not only partially destroyed English trade, but acted also as a powerful lever towards destroying the British Empire itself.—Irish World
