FLOWER CHANDELIER.

Tha the Aid of This Picture One Can Eastly Be Made.

The vines may droop and touch your hair or tickle your car as you cross from door to window, but there's nothing in life that's pleasanter than to live close to green things, even if they be only green things swinging in a bamboo shandelier. You can see how to make it from the picture given. The three large sections of bamboo are dovetailed together at the point of the tripod and hung by three cords or wires.

Inside the bamboo rods are tin cylinders that hold water, and the outside of the bamboo can have, if you choose, little Japanese designs of birds, butterflies or flowers cut into it with a knife that will chip the thin and brittle outer bark and leave the outlines light against a darker background. The rods ought to be five inches or thereabouts in diameter and fourteen or fifteen inches long. Vines may trail with much less trouble from baskets in which they are really growing, but with many of us the novel is always the better way .-- Chicago News.

is and out and under the caves, In and out and under the caves, Blown about like the falling leaves, Twittering swallows spend the season. Now the days are shorter and chill, There come from many a musical bill Notes of instinct that sound like reason.

Well have they dined on bug and midge. Now they are perched upon the ridge Of the old barn, that's warped and hoary There they sit, bright birds of a feather Holding twitter-talk all together,

Each telling an after dinner story. They will follow the summer bland:

To them no land is a foreign land. One exclaimed, with a joyous flitter "True cosmopolitans are we, Home is where we happen to be, And swallows understand our twitter.

Then, in soft notes I scarce could catch One spoke of a nest under the thatch Of a cottage where waves the willow Another shook his velvet head,

And with his noisy neighbors plead To fly with him o'er field and billow

They talked about all sorts of things, Bharpened their bills and preened their winge Then away, away, the tourists started. Sailing over river and main.

Will they ever return scaln To theold home from which they've parted O happy tourists of the air

Unburdened, free of debt and care, Would that I had swift wings to follow

In the flight over land and sea.

Shakespeare's Knowledge of Insomnia.

Touching upon the question of insomnia, Dr. Charcot, the great specialist, made a remark which was not only interesting in Asyalf, but which proved his thorough fromaintance with the works of England's greatest dramatist. "It is curious to note," he remarked, "how feelingly Shakespeare dwells on the question of sleep, not only in the famous passage of 'Macbeth' beginning, 'Mac-beth hath murdered sleep,' but in many other places in his plays. I made at one time a collection of fifty quotations from his works on that subject. So I am inclined to think that he suffered from insomnia."

I remarked that perhaps the death of the gr.at poet when so few years past middle age might have been caused by the vast mental strain consequent on the ryoduction of his marvelous works, and hat case insomnia would certainly L ve formed one of the symptoms of his condition. "Great genius," remarked the doctor, "is almost invariably the offshoot of ill health, either mental or physical." "That was hardly the case," responded, "with Victor Hugo, who lived to be past eighty and was always as sturdy as an oak." "But you forget, madam, that he came of a family of maniacs," was the response. "His brother died insane and his daughter is the inmate of an asylum for lunatics."-Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

HARNESS,

ANYONE can add strength and weight to his body by rubbing well with pure olive oil after a warm bath. Oil baths are particularly beneficial to delicate children.

THOSE who suffer from a sensitive skin, subject to frequent irritation and roughness, should never wash in hard water. Boiled water will often prove of benefit to delicate complexions.

EQUAL parts of cream tartar and salt petre make an excellent remedy for rheumatism. Take one-half teaspoonful of the mixture and divide it into three doses. Take one of these doses three times a day.

The Nutmeg Tree.

The nutmeg is the kernel of the fruit of severel species of trees growing wild in Asia, Africa and America. The cultivated nutmeg tree is from fifty to seventy-five feet high and produces fruit for sixty years. The fruit is of the size and appearance of a roundish pear, yellow in color. The fleshy part of the fruit is rather hard and resembles candied citron.

Within is the aut, enveloped in the curions yellowish red aril known to us as only valuable variety of the nutmeg, jealously tried to prevent the carrying of the tree or a living seed of it into any territory independent of Dutch rule .--Foods and Beverages.

The Painstaking French Soldier.

It is said that a French soldier, stationed at a picture gallery, had strict orders to allow no one to pass without first depositing his walking stick. A gentleman came with his hands in his pockets. The soldier, taking him by the arm, said: "Citizen, where is your stick?" "I have no stick." "Then you will have to go back and get one before I can allow you to pass."

As this man read his orders the intention was that, as a preliminary to inspecting the gallery, everybody was to deposit a stick-not that those who had a stick should not be allowed to carry it with them into the gallery .- Temple Bar

A Fish That Turns to Water.

A curious animal is the medusa. Writing in 1701, Reamur says: "It is a true sea water jelly, having little color or consistence. If we take one in our hands, the natural heat is sufficient to dissolve it into water." A medusa looks more like a mushroom than anything else, and is often of a pale blue or rose color, while in some localities it is violet. The tissue of a medusa is "so fragile that when abandoned by the waves on the beach it melts and disappears, without leaving a trace of its ever having existed." They are found principally in the arctic seas. and constitute one of the chief supports of the whale .- London Tit-Bits
