Mr. Portur's census figures show that the value of farms lands, taking the whole country over, has decreased 3352 per cent during the past ten years. And this is the net result of the policy which boast of building up a blome market? The shome mar ket" a pears to have fructified only to the building up of collo-sal fortunes for millionaire manufact urers, making squalor and wretchedness the rule among the people who do the work and pomp and elegance the lot of the pampered capitalists. produce unequal Plattemouth Journal. The first part of the above shot at random is purely hatched up in its author's miad or borrowed from some other source equally unreliable. But granting it to be the truth it does not necessarily follow that a protective system is the fault of it. The official returns for the "country over' have not been given out yet but it is plain why there might be a depreciation of the value of farm land on an average. Probably eastern farms are worth less per acre to day than ten years ago from the fact that the risizg generations of the east are leaving their old homesteads and coming west to grow up with the country and on lands that were government property ten years ago. Even old and gray headed farmers in comfortable circumstances have sold their small farms and moved upon raw lands in the west where they could get a farm for each member of the family with their former investment; such a move naturally depreciates eastern land. In the west the amount of land now con good price. The "millionaire manufacturers" have had their influence in depreciating the value of farms, and probably the greatest cause has who would otherwise be out on the farm and increased the products for exportation which are now concumed by these non-producers. Let us see how far we can trace their effects, these factories require material which comes out of the earth, from government lands in the shape of hides, horns, tallow and wool or from forests, as lumber, pitch, tar and rosin all of which requires an immence amount of labor that does not have a direct and immediate tendency to increase farm lands. But this is not all; men must be employed to seek markets either as agents or middle men, as sometimes termed, and everybody knows that it is not the millionaire manufacturers who populate the earth but farmers and laborers in general from which the manufacturers,' successors are drawn. Let us take a liberal minded view of all such questions and not lay the blame at our neighbor's door simply to be say-
