ONLY A FEW HOURS TO LIVE.

Warner Admits That He Went to Court House to Kill Judge—Nerved by Liquor—Talk of Lynching.

The following telegram to the Omaha Bee from Lincoln, concerning the recovery of the police judge who was shot by a former Cass county man, has little hopes for the recovery of the wounded man: Judge Borgelt is hovering between life and death, with the chances against him. At 3 o'clock this afternoon one of the attending physicians stated that his death was a question of but a few hours, and last evening the statement was made that there was no apparent change, although it was believed that the wounded man would live until morning. One-half of the split-bullet is still in the brain, lodging, it is believed, at the base of that organ. The right arm is paralyzed and all hopes of the ultimate recovery of the victim are apparently gone.

Before Warner was formerly incarcerated in the jail he was brought before Judge Lansing and questioned. He claimed to have been born in Cattaraugus county New York in 1838 and has two sons living in Toledo, O. He says his right name is Hugh Carrol, although he has gone under the name of Warner for nearly a year, or since he has been in Lincoln. He came here from Kansas City, but for five years was at St. Paul, employed as a brakeman on the Manitoba road. When asked why he shot the judge he replied that he had a crazy fit on, and besides had taken several drinks of liquor. He said further that on the morning of the occurrence he had made up his mind to kill the judge, fortified his nerve with liquor, but after he got about three feet inside the door he thought it was not right to do it and turned to go out. Just at that moment he caught sight of the judge at his desk and a flood of passion swept over his brain and he remembered nothing more until he was behind the bars.

The fact that there has never been a legal hanging in Lancaster county, coupled with the further fact that in the last three murders committed here in the past year, the Sheedy case, the Hutchinson case and the Hayes case, not a man or woman was ever convicted, has created a sentiment that the law is incapable of punishing its violators. Hence the talk of lynching Warner has gained ground. The jail has been guarded by half a dozen armed men armed with Winchester but the sheriff appears to have grown more apprehensive, of it was reported this afternoon that the murderer had been taken to the penitentiary for safe keeping.

WHY PEOPLE STARED AT HER.

Awkward Adventure of a Woman Visiting New York for the First Time.

"I visited New York for the first time in my life last week," said a good-natured western woman the other day, "though my husband, who was with me, knew the city pretty well from frequent business calls to the east. I was naturally much interested, not to say excited, by the noise and hubbub in the streets, and my husband, had amused himself by imagining in what way I would show my country breeding and give myself away for a hayseed, as he called it. I was therefore on my guard.

"I got along quite well till we entered an unpretentious restaurant, for we could not afford to spend much money. My husband said to order what I wanted, as he did not feel like eating anything. I asked the waiter for lamb. 'One lamb!' he called promptly to the cook, as he gave me a glass of water. 'Gracious,' I exclaimed, 'a whole lamb for me!' 'Leave what you don't want of it,' said my husband. 'Certainly not,' I exclaimed; such wicked waste! 'Waiter, I don't want lamb. Make it raw oysters.' 'Make that lamb one oyster, raw, raw!' he called so angrily that I was afraid to tell him I wanted a dozen. But when he brought the order I found that he had six on the plate, and thought it was a mistake, and that he would only charge me for one in the bill if I said nothing about it.

"I did not confide this hope to my husband, as I knew he would not countenance it, and he told me afterward that he admired my self-control in not showing surprise at the six oysters when I fully expected only one. As I ordered several other things besides oysters, my husband left me in order to keep a business engagement, and we agreed to meet again in one hour at Tiffany's. He paid my bill and left me eating slowly at the little table, which was near the door, so near that when I passed out into the street I did not go near the clerk.

"As I turned into Broadway alone I noticed that several people whom I passed stared at me curiously. I resented this from men, thinking it impertinence, but when some women gazed I looked down at my hands, my skirts, my shoes, etc., but could see nothing out of place, and I knew that even if my clothes were somewhat country in cut they were not far enough behind the fashion to warrant such rudeness, even in New York. Still the people stared at me and some turned to look after me. One woman made a motion as if to stop me and speak to me, I tossed my head indignantly and almost ran.

"As I reached Tiffany's panting and angry, I saw my husband afar off, and as he approached me I noticed him stare also, then grin and then burst out laughing.

"What do you mean?" said I angrily. "What's that tucked under your chin?" he spluttered as well as he could for laughing.

"I put my hand up to my throat and pulled away a horrid little table napkin, not particularly clean, with a vulgar red border around it and with the name 'Centennial Restaurant' stamped on it in big black letters."—N. Y. Tribune.

THE GERM OF THE GRIP.

A Wonderful Discovery by the aid of a Micro-Flashlight.

Dr. Robert L. Watkins asserts that he has, by the aid of a micro-flashlight, obtained negatives of the grip germ after it has been assimilated with the blood through the mucous membrane of the nasal organs. He attaches great importance to this discovery, says the N. Y. Herald. According to Dr. Watkins, the "grip" germ was photographed under the power of magnifying lenses of one thousand magnitude, the flashlight having the brilliancy of the ordinary incandescent light. The color of the germ, as seen through the lens, is white. The sides and fibrous surface were covered with fine hairs—so fine they could hardly be observed in the original micro-photograph. The germ body seemed to be undergoing constant changes, and in the meantime to rotate rapidly among the adjacent healthy blood corpuscles. The successful examination of the germ under the microscope, aided by the flashlight, proved conclusive, it is said, that the germ attacks rather the blood than the mucous membrane, as in influenza, and that the pain experienced in the various stages of the disease is caused by the wonderful activity of its minute body. I talked with a number of prominent physicians yesterday as to the importance of this discovery, and found that in their opinion it could not count for much. Dr. H. N. Heinemann said: "In searching for new bacteria, simple microscopic investigation leads to the greatest self-deception. So well established is this that no worker in the new field of bacteriology would dare quote a new germ unless he had followed the succeeding process, namely, to inoculate an animal and then to produce the disease; that is to say, to produce culture by growing the germ in gelatine, and then, by inoculating animals, to produce the disease again."

The Price of Drinks in Japan.

Four gentlemen surrounded by many bowls of punch in a cafe yesterday, and were chatting about drinking in different countries and the prices paid. "Yokohama, Japan, is the most uniform town I ever saw," said one who has travelled a great deal. "All drinks cost 25 cents, Mexican money. If you want beer, whisky, apollinaris sour, cocktail, toddy, a glass of champagne, or champagne cocktail, it is all the same. The champagne sold, which is the best, comes in small bottles. Of course, the saloons lose money on short drinks of whisky, brandy, &c. Japan beer is made by Germans, and is as fine as any made in any place in the world."—Oregonian.
