FARMERS' ALLIANCE, SOUTH.

The recent conference of presidents and other high executive officers of southern alliance organizations, which met at Birmingham, Ala., was timid in giving advice, but its address leaves no room for doubt as to its real effect. It is bound to be interpreted as a wet blanket upon independent political action. The members of that conference are democrats first and alliance men next. The states represented were Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, West Virginia, Florida, Missouri, Texas, Kentucky and Louisiana, ten in all. Virginia and Carolina were conspicuous for their absence.

The action of this conference was due to the fact that the southern democrats are afraid to divide up on any issue, national or state, for fear the republicans might slip in. "White supremacy and home rule" is still their cry. At the north the two great parties are divided on live national issues, but at the south the boggy man of an irrational apprehension stands in the way of intelligent politics. It is only because the democrats keep up the color line in politics that it continues to exist. Take Alabama, for example; there is a large element there which would be glad to go with the republicans in favor of protection, for the iron and coal of that state are better than times of gold and silver, provided only production is maintained. Many thousands of the 120,000 democrats of that state would regret exceedingly to have the free trade democracy rule congress and repeal the McKinley act, but they are so afraid of "negro rule" in the state that they can not be got away from the old party.

The Omaha convention will no doubt contain a good many delegates from the south, but the support of the Omaha ticket is not to be made a test of loyalty to the farmers' party. As well not have any farmers' alliance ticket in the south. It is none the less true that the south has far more sympathy with alliance ideas than the north. Were it not for the paralyzing fear of "negro supremacy" the alliance might carry several southern states. As it is there is not the remotest prospect of it.—Inter Ocean.

TIN PLATE.

We had no tin plate industry when the McKinley bill became a law on October 1, 1890. In the preceding twenty years we had sent $307,000,000 across the ocean to buy tin plate. The tin plate mills already built or projected under the new tariff have a capacity of 243,000,000 pounds a year, which, at the present average import value, means about $7,000,000 annually, or in twenty years $140,000,000 which will stay in this country and pay American wages, develop American mines and turn the wheels of American mills.—New York Press.

ACCORDING TO THE TOPEKA CAPITAL MORTGAGE INDEBTEDNESS IN THE STATE OF KANSAS IS BEING REDUCED AT THE RATE OF $1,000,000 A MONTH.

At the same time we hear that the constituents of Jerry Simpson are preparing to retire the Kansas statesman to private life next November. It's a bad year for the calamityites.

TAR IN THE ARTS.

In the preparation of tar, pine wood, which is unfit for use as timber, is usually employed. It is cut into billets of a suitable size, which are arranged into large conical stacks, or, as is sometimes the case in Europe, are closely packed in clay furnaces of a suitable shape. The stacks or piles are covered with a layer of earth and ignited above, and the draft is regulated so as to sustain a slow combustion without flame. The tarry products, as they are formed, gradually descend and collect in a cavity at the base of the pile. The tar as obtained by slow combustion as described above, is largely employed in the arts for various purposes, and when divided into its constituent parts is in one form or another daily prescribed by the best physicians. It has long been known for its great anti-septic and healing qualities, and for external use has been prepared by Messrs. Jas. S. Kirk & Co. in a most convenient and delightful form, in their Dusky Diamond Tar Soap. In this form it should be classed among the necessities of every household; it is equally suitable for the delicate skin of the mother or the baby and the hardened cuticle of the workman, keeps the skin soft, clear and healthy, is a sure cure and preventative of dandruff, and used once a fortnight by ladies for shampooing, adds length, lustre and strength to their hair.

THE FUTURE FOR FARMERS.

The American Agriculturist is of the opinion, after careful research and conservative investigation, that American farmers, as a class, are more prosperous and in a better condition to-day, both mentally and financially, than they were one year ago. There is thus a most hopeful outlook for farmers during the year before us. The country generally is prosperous and affluent, which means that the people have a good purchasing power. Where farmers can find a market close to hand, they generally obtain more remunerative prices than if compelled to ship their produce abroad. It is thus to the interest of all farmers to help build up their own particular sections, thereby providing markets for their own doors. If these fail, or are lacking, we have the world before us, and we believe that the exports of our domestic produce in the prospective season will approximate even those of the unprecedented season just completing. This may seem a rash conjecture, but let us analyze it.

We have still available all the markets that have heretofore been open to us, and even to a greater extent, for one result of low prices is a larger consumption, and when people once become accustomed to consuming American products, they will continue to demand them, even if prices be higher, because the quality was satisfactory. In addition, we have a larger number of new markets opened to us through the reciprocal trade relations that have but recently been established. Heretofore such markets, with their millions of people creating a large consumptive demand, were practically closed by the high tariffs imposed upon our production, but we now enter them as a favored nation and at an advantage over our competitors in the world's food supply.—The American Agriculturist.

THE FREE PASS FIEND.

He Makes the Life of a Theatrical Manager Weary.

"This," said a theatrical manager, "is a very pretty town; it ought to have a hall built around it, that might reflect in the sky so that the surrounding countries could see and admire. Between whistles, when you are not being stood upon and sand-bagged for your money, they stand you up for passes. Upon my honor I was introduced to a man on Monday and on Tuesday he buttonholed me on Fifth avenue and said he would like to come down and see us. So you shall, my boy," said I, "the box office is open from 9 to 9 and your dollars are always welcome."

"Another time I was a sort of enforced escort to a young lady who was belated and had missed her friends. I knew her slightly, and as a gentleman should, offered to see her home. There isn't a blessed relative she has that I haven't passed into this house, and on the other day the young woman met me and said her sister was going to be married, and wouldn't I give her a box for her brother-in-law-to-be could give a farewell stag party. I dined at a first class restaurant last week, where they serve second class meals, and the clerk as he struck me for two dollars, remarked, 'You might just as well get the other side of that check to make out a pass.'

"I chucked an infant under the chin the other day and said it was the living image of its mother. I got a letter from its father the next day asking for two seats at the matinee, 'and please,' he added, 'keep the third chair vacant if you can. Baby is going along, as it is nurse's day out, and the little fellow may want to have his mother's knee. Another day in a crowded street car I exchanged my seat for a strap, to which a young lady was holding on. What do you think, she came into my office one this morning and wanted to know if I wouldn't be so 'perlite' as to give her a seat in the theater also. She thought I was so much of a gentleman she didn't mind in the least asking me.

"My pastor begs for passes. My landlady demands them and pays off her milk bill with them. When I treat a man he looks as if he expected a pass at the bottom of the glass. The street car conductor thinks one ought to go with every fare I pay him. Young women present me with roses, wearing a 'won't-you-pass-me-through-the-door' sort of expression, and their brothers walk along the avenue with me and call me 'my boy' and want to know what night 'me and sis' can find a couple of seats. Then they take some other fellow's sister. But for the cock of the cake walk give me a fellow on Fifth avenue whom I asked Monday to send me down some things C. O. D.

"We don't trust theatrical people at all, my dear sir. We find it doesn't pay. I wanted the things straightaway and with difficulty made up the sum out of the change in my pocket. The next night the gentleman was at the theater door just as I came forward.

"I suppose it's all right," he said.

"What's all right?" said I.

"Oh, you know me. You did business with me yesterday. Isn't it all right?"

"I didn't wait to say a word, but I rushed home and for five minutes yelled blue devils up the chimney of my fireplace, after which I went back to the theater and for two hours couldn't break the line of people waiting for passes."

Then the manager, sighing wearily and wiping his perspiring brow, wrote on the margin of a newspaper, "Pass Mr. Jones and party to box." When he finished he whispered: "My best girl's mother's divorced husband, who at the present time is standing in again with the old lady. If things continue blooming there will be a double wedding."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Women Being Recognized in London.

Women are fast obtaining substantial recognition in the governing of London. There are women members of the board of education and various other important bodies, and if women choose there may now be women dock commissioners. In a bill before parliament dealing with the election of dock commissioners, Mr. Courtney, chairman of the committee, took a novel and, as the newspapers describe it, "praiseworthy" step by striking out the words "male persons," so that the franchise might be conferred on women. The promoters of the bill said if ladies might vote they might also become commissioners. "And why not," asked Mr. Courtney, "if they are good business women?"—London Letter.

A Fast Growing Vine.

The Kudzu vine is probably the most rapid growing plant to the world. It belongs to the bean family. The leaves look something like a Lima bean, and was once called Dolichos japonicus. It will grow easily sixty feet in three months. It was introduced into America by the Japanese during the Centennial exhibition. It is said that in its own country it has flowers like bunches of vicia. For some reason American summer do not seem long enough for it. It rarely blooms.—Mechan's Monthly.
