Found Floating in the Platte

An Injunction Suit Against the U. P.

Other Matters.

FOUND DEAD. Kearney, Neb., July 5.—The body of Isaac P. Chubbier was found floating down the Platte river last night. The deceased lived in the western part of the county, and has been missing since Saturday. It is supposed that he had a fit and fell in while trying to catch driftwood.

ANOTHER FIGHTING EDITOR. New York, July 5.—Col. J. Army Knox, of "Texas Sittings," and one of the principals in the impending duel, left town at 7:30 a. m., today, accompanied by his second, H. F. McDermott. He left word with the clerk of the hotel that he would be gone until tomorrow. Nothing could be learned in regard to the whereabouts of D. B. Sheehan. He is supposed to be in New Jersey. Probably a meeting will take place today in the vicinity of Hoboken.

AN IRRELIGIOUS DIVINE. Middletown, N. Y., July 5.—Rev. Carl Schwabe, of the Reformed church, of Callicoon, New York, was charged with too much drinking, and later with improper advances to a half-witted girl in his congregation. He disappeared, and Monday last came back and started to drive to Thurmanville, Pa. The next morning he was found dead by the roadside. His death is thought to have been the result of hard drinking.

AN INJUNCTION SUIT. New York, July 5.—In the suit of Arnold Leo against the Union Pacific railroad company to restrain that corporation from raising money on its bonds secured by a pledge in trust of the securities of other roads held by it to aid in the construction and operation of connecting roads not a part of its own lines, Judge Wheeler, of the United States circuit court, decided that as the case now stands, Leo does not appear entitled to a preliminary injunction.

THE COLORADO TRAGEDY. Denver, July 5.—The city is terribly excited over the startling news received last night that two of the county commissioners had been shot and killed, and the other commissioner and the county clerk mortally wounded by a masked mob. The trouble that led to the shooting was the result of an old feud, dating back to 1879, when the county was created by an act of the legislature and the county seat located at Hot Sulphur Springs. At an election in 1880, the people by a vote changed the county seat to Grand Lake. The matter was taken to the district court, and then to the supreme court. In the meanwhile the hatred existing between the two factions grew in intensity, culminating in yesterday's bloody work. Grand county has three commissioners, Barney Day, R. G. Mills and E. P. Webber, a majority of whom, Day and Webber, were in favor of declaring the vote illegal that created Grand Lake the county seat, and the removing the records back to the Springs. Last Monday the commissioners had a regular meeting at Grand Lake. Just what was done is not known, but it is reported that they decided to declare the office of the county treasurer vacant because of his refusal to file a satisfactory bond. During the meeting, Day, Webber and Dean stopped at Mrs. Young's boarding house, a quarter of a mile around the end of a small lake. The road leading from Mrs. Young's to town is through a thicket. Yesterday morning just before 10 o'clock two commissioners and the clerk started from the house to go to the place of meeting and find out the business before finally adjourning. When about midway through the thicket three masked men suddenly sprang out of the bushes and commenced firing, shooting them all down almost instantly. Before their work had been done the commissioners returned the fire, instantly killing one of the assassins. The other two masked men, thinking they had killed all three of the party, disappeared in the bushes. When the startled citizens arrived at the place of the combat, a moment later, they found Day Dead and Webber and Dean mortally wounded. They tore the mask from the other man, and found he was Mills, the other county commissioner. The two other assailants are not known. Suspicion rests upon two noted desperadoes, Bill Redman and Len Coffin. When the news was brought to Hot Sulphur Springs it produced the most intense excitement, and shortly before dark last night a party of twenty horsemen, well armed, left for Grand Lake, and a terrible fight is expected. Up to this hour, ten o'clock, no later news has been received from the scene of the tragedy. A courier riding fifty miles over the mountains is the only means of communication. It is probable that no further news will be received until morning.

NATIONAL NEWS.

The Lottery Question.

Gen. Crook's Arrival, Etc.

FONDED WHISKY. Washington, D. C., July 5.—The Attorney General has given an opinion to the Secretary of the Treasury that the exportation of bonded whisky to Canada for the purpose of delaying the payment of the tax is not an exportation in the written meaning of the law. The Attorney General holds, however, that tax due upon spirits at the time of their exportation is collectable upon return to this country. A complete copy of the opinion will be furnished the press tomorrow.

THE CASE OF THE "ROB ROY." The Secretary of the Interior decided on the case of the "Rob Roy" mineral lode at Helena, Montana, that where there are two applications covering in part the same ground, and the first application made has been abandoned, the ground in controversy comes within the purview of a second application and is subject thereto. Previous to this decision it has been held by the department that in case of the abandonment of land in controversy the abandoned tract should revert to the public domain.

THE LOTTERY CASES. The postmaster-general today heard arguments relative to the question of the legal status of lottery companies, which involved the entire lottery question in all its phases. W. W. Belknap and C. W. Moulton appeared for the Louisiana company, and Mr. Stiner will appear against that company. It is understood that he represents Robertson, of Louisiana, who made a fight in the house against the lottery company at the last session. It is claimed that the Louisiana company is enjoying privileges not accorded to others, while the company maintains that as it exists by and under the laws of Louisiana it is a legal institution, and should be recognized by the postoffice department. The company is also represented by Col. Moulton, who spoke three hours, and at the conclusion of his argument the postmaster general said that the mere fact that the lottery is recognized by the state as a legal institution, did not lessen the responsibility of the government in the premises. He seemed to think both companies should be placed on the same footing, but did not indicate what his views were concerning the legality of the institution.

ASSISTED IMMIGRANTS. Another question has arisen in the treasury department in connection with "assisted immigrants." At the port of New York several days ago, the steamship City of Richmond arrived with seven pauper immigrants. They landed at Castle Garden. The steamship soon after departed on her regular trip. The question to be decided is as to the disposition to be made of the pauper immigrant, whether to send them back to their own country by another vessel, or to allow them to remain in this country.

ARCHITECT BILL. It would seem that the investigation of the supervising architect's office has assumed a more serious aspect than expected by the defense, for this morning the well known lawyer, Enoch Totten, appeared as counsel for Hill; in addition to Thomas, who defends both Hill and Bartlett & Robinson. Coleman introduced a copy of a letter dated January 19, 1867, from Hill to Superintendent Oakshott, enclosing for certification vouchers for extra work on the New York post office building amounting to $26,669.

CROOK'S ARRIVAL. Washington, July 5.—Gen. Crook, accompanied by Capt. Brunk, of his staff, arrived late this evening. The General will see Secretary Lincoln tomorrow morning and will lay before the latter full information concerning the Apache prisoners, and upon which the further action of the department will be based.

Gov. Hale, of Wyoming, Seriously Ill. Council Bluffs, Iowa. The sad intelligence reaches us from a reliable source that Gov. Hale of Wyoming, who for years was identified with the material interests and prosperous development of western Iowa, is lying seriously ill at Council Springs. In fact his condition is reported as alarming, and his most intimate friends express no hope for his recovery. This will cause the most sincere regret, and call forth the earnest sympathy of the people of the state, as Gov. Hale is well known and highly respected, not only on the slope, but throughout the commonwealth.

The foregoing from the "Council Bluffs Nonpareil," will be read with regret by many of our HERALD readers, who have known him well. From his early boyhood days in our midst, the city of Grandwood, where he himself first himself a splendid reputation as a lawyer and a reliable business man, and also as a public spirited man of much more than ordinary ability. About one year ago Mr. Hale received the appointment from President Arthur as Gov. of Wyoming, and immediately removed to that territory from Iowa. Remembering Gov. Hale as a man of rugged health, but a short time since, the foregoing account of his serious and hopeless illness, can only be received with great surprise by his many friends and admirers in Iowa and Nebraska.

THE LITTLE EARLY PEACH.

(Burdette in the Burlington Hawkeye.) The Early Peach came to a place where four roads met. He alighted his chest with his stem and looked to the east and the south. "Bismillah!" he cried "I am the boss, and I drive the ambulance."

The little Green Apple came down the long road from the west, and heard him. He bowed to the north and he bowed to the west. "I am the son of the cyclone," he shouted, "and I travel with my own private Conner."

"By the camel of Mahomet," said the Early Peach, "I am the friend of the system, and I can stick you out in four rounds, Maquis of Tewksbury, rules."

"Come to the wake," shrieked the little Green Apple, "and you may cure the harmless pawpaw of the wilderness if I cannot do it up the man who planted you."

Then they looked down the four long roads and waited for some one to practice on. From the east came a fair young girl from Vassar college and up from the south came a grayhaired African.

"Take you the fair student," said the Early Peach.

"Not I," said the little Green Apple, "I didn't come here to attempt impossibilities. For nearly four years that girl has sat at surreptitious midnight lunches; she has broken up a score of young men with her ice cream stand and give me a chance at the African."

"I'm not on the suicide lay this morning," said the Early Peach. "I know him, and already since yestereven's sun there have reposed beneath his untrodden vest a peck and a half of my brethren, and he is even now unimpaired, as it is known as the destroyer of water-melon, and all my tribe fear him. Allah is great, but some things are impossible."

So they let many people pass by unharmed, the old, the tough, the wary, and the well reasoned. But when the day was far spent coming down the long road from the west, they saw a ruddy boy, the pride and joy of his home, and the torment of his teacher. Whistling a merry roundelay he came, his face as rosy as the growing west, his heart as light as thistle down.

He was their meat. The Early Peach and the little Green Apple set their teeth and bristled hard as he came near.

"Now!" they shrieked, and, livid with rage, they fiercely sprung upon him.

In two short minutes that boy had both of them down, and as he cracked the peach pit to get at the "gooey," he said:

"My jinnny jinks, I wish I knewed where I could get a basket of them fellows!"

The Early Peach with a dying gasp turned and said: "We were taken in." With a hollow groan the little Green Apple replied: "Oh yes!"

But the boy slept soundly all that night, and came back the next day to look for more.
