The Herald Pocketbook waiter is the way the New York Tribune puts it.

To our stock men we can recommend the Breeder's Gazette of Chicago Illinois as one of the very best stock journals published, a few extracts from which we publish today.

JOHN ROACH, the ship builder, owns a fast yacht which he offers to put up against Jay Gould's Atlanta and race Mr. Gould to Cape May and return, the winner to take both vessels. Mr. Gould, however, pays no attention to Mariner Roach.

Mr. Gould is not in the habit of risking his property unless he has a sure thing.

The statesman who is running for Governor of Iowa on the Democratic ticket is a good one; promiscuously "shooting off his mouth," as the Iowa Republican papers put it, he said he "wanted to see a saloon on every hill top, on every road side, and on every street." Finding such copper bottomed sentiments were even too much for the "new democracy" over there, he now seeks to explain such a drunken notion by saying he meant he would rather have the traffic carried on openly than in secret. Such an explanation is entirely unnecessary from a public man who could give vent to such a sentiment. In the person of Judge Kinne the new democracy of Iowa have undoubtedly found a thoroughbred free trader.

The campaign over in Iowa develops a queer bargain and sell out by the timber democracy, to the great third party of that commonwealth; it appears that Weaver, the leader of the Greenback party of Iowa, before it disbanded, but who has reorganized and is holding himself out as such party, is heading and leading the disgruntled element of both parties into the democratic camp. With the hope that by the fusion going on over there he may assist his Democratic neighbors in carrying the Iowa legislature. Should he succeed, there does not seem to be any doubt but he has been promised the shoes now worn by Senator Allison. Of course after this Democratic legislature is elected, (something which will not happen this year), the question will be can the Democratic goods be delivered to the wily Weaver? We rather guess the "hoss" would not drink.

The democratic thermometer has run so high the buses of that party cannot even quarrel without a "bar" in sight. When Judge Birdsall turned loose on the sphinx of Greystone, claiming the Sun as well as Mr. Tilden had derided and helped defeat the military candidate Hancock Mr. Dana at once offered $5,000 for a line or word in his editorial columns that could be construed as deriding Gen. Hancock; and therefore proceeded to give it to Judge Birdsall by replying that the "Judge" had a bad character, &c. At once Mr. Birdsall comes to the front with a character, or affidavits out of which he asserted one can be manufactured, and offers to put up $10,000 that Dana cannot show that his (Birdsall's) character is not good; and so we see how the "new democracy" follow in the footprints of the old so far as the "bar" is concerned.

GENERAL VANWYCK the war horse from Otse county will address our people at the forthcoming county fair. This is very fortunate as no better man can be had to talk intelligently and authoritatively to the Cass county agriculturists. Senator VanWyck will be present upon the second day of the fair, and his many admirers in Cass county will have an opportunity to meet him, and those of them who do not already know him will have an opportunity to make his acquaintance. Preparations for the fair are being energetically pushed forward; the buildings for the stock will be placed in good repair and condition, and the exposition building and grounds will be all that can be asked. The HERALD hopes to see a general attendance from all parts of the county, and a full exhibition of the grain, fruit and all other products of our rich and prosperous county. Especially do we hope to see the fruit of Cass county fully and fairly exhibited. Let everybody take hold and help hold a good old fashioned Cass county fair.

THE CORN CROP PROSPECTS.

From the Breeder's Gazette.

The condition and prospects of the corn is the most interesting and important question before a majority of the farmers of the chief live-stock rearing states. There is always some uncertainty concerning any crop until it is safely harvested; but today every favorable prediction about the corn crop for this year is necessarily accompanied with an important "if." "If the frost holds off long enough there may be a fair yield. Hard frosts must do incalculable damage. In most parts of the great corn-growing belt the season has not been favorable for rapid growth and early maturity, and the fact that much unsuitable seed was planted has made the condition still more unfavorable.

It is to be hoped useful lessons will be learned. This fall, at least, there will be need of special care in saving corn for seed. Ears gathered even before they are thoroughly dry before hard freezing weather comes will, ordinarily, give satisfaction as seed. It will be especially desirable this season to secure early-maturing corn; and there is much difference in ears of the same variety in this respect. It will be worth while to select seed corn before the general crop is mature enough to be harvested.

The desirability of having at least a small acreage of some early variety is also well illustrated this season. The early varieties are usually dry and somewhat less productive than the later ones; but we count it important to have at least a few acres of early corn, to be used in feeding early in the season. There is force in the arguments against feeding corn until it is mature, but we continue the practice of feeding both cattle and hogs the new corn as soon as it is in "hard roasting ear" stage. With the late varieties this year, this stage will not be reached until after we like to have the steers and hogs designed for sale this fall well under way on the fattening process.

We hope also that if, unfortunately, it should prove necessary another spring to buy seed corn, that this year's experience will lead to greater care on the part of many farmers in the way of selecting more suitable varieties. The early varieties are usually dry and somewhat less productive than the later ones; but we count it important to have at least a few acres of early corn, to be used in feeding early in the season. There is force in the arguments against feeding corn until it is mature, but we continue the practice of feeding both cattle and hogs the new corn as soon as it is in "hard roasting ear" stage. With the late varieties this year, this stage will not be reached until after we like to have the steers and hogs designed for sale this fall well under way on the fattening process.

MUCH interest has properly been felt in the development of the Western cattle trade by the purchase of ranches and large lots of cattle by capitalists of the Eastern States and Europe. In connection with this, and partly in consequence of it, there is an important change going on in the mode of management of the cattle, a change that will ultimately be of great benefit. In many parts of the West, the day of allowing the herds of cattle to graze on Government land is coming to be a thing of the past. Large tracts are not only purchased but are being enclosed with wire fences, and an approach is made to the system of grazing on the large farms of more thickly settled States. The days of great round ups and of the half-civilized "cow-boy" are numbered in extensive regions in which they were late, the ownership of the land and the enclosing it will make efforts to improve the character of the stock more effective. It will be more common to provide hay for use in winter, when needed. Improved bulls can be purchased with more certainty of getting a full return; and, in many cases, a much better stock of cows and heifers are bought for the same price of ranches than it was counted wise to place on the open ranges. Large portions of Kansas, Nebraska, and Texas, which were open range a few years ago, are now mainly enclosed, and the process is being rapidly continued.—Breeder's Gazette.
