WEEPING WATER, May 12, 1884. ED. HERALD:-I thought best to say, that in regard to fruit blossoms, how being destroyed.

I will say that a year ago this May, on the 3d of May, the fruit trees were mostly in blossom, and the temperature was 24, quite heavy frost, but dry, ing stem about the start for the prize it can stand more dry than if it was fight which Omaha has been training

The blossoms were not destroyed at that temperature, excepting peaches and pear trees. But if it was wet or probably at a temperature of 30.

To save the blossoms at such times besides burning, making smoke, I would suggest dashing on water any time bewith pails, having tubs and barrels of water ready the night before in the or-

It sometimes happed that fat farmers do not have anything to burn to make smoke, but water dashed ou at such times will save them. I write this for what it is worth.

The Police Judge's report was a voluminous one, and Chief of Police's report a very short and terse one, it being simply "no arreststs" for April.

The bills in the Clerk's hands against the city were also read and referred to the finance committee.

The finance committee reported upon a large number of bills, and as exception was taken to some of them, they were taken up and discussed and voted upon separately, and in the most tedious manner possible. But it thinned out the spectators Along late in the night other business was reached.
