AN exchange says there was only one reaping machine in the world that beat Mr. McCormick's, and that was the one that took him away.

TOMORROW the democrats will select ten delegates to go to Chicago and vote for Tilden and Hendricks; the old ticket and the old barrel.

GOV. McENERY, of Louisiana has been duly inaugurated, and that State may be safely counted for from 75,000 to 200,000 democratic majority, as occasion may require.

THERE is no reform in the democratic party. Congress has refused to remove the tariff on art, and Dr. Miller's plea for nude figures shipped from Italy, is not even listened to.

SENATOR VAN WYCK is delving down into the railroad land grant business, and the day is cold when he does not stir up some new point of attack upon the land grant syndicates.

THE twelve jurors of Copiah county Mississippi, who tried the case of Wheeler, for the political murder of Matthews, have issued a manifesto that they were directly inspired to clear their man. They ought to be shut up in a penitentiary until they had a little less of that class of inspiration, and could know and see a little justice.

As the time for holding the democratic convention draws on, the fact becomes the plainer that the old ticket will be at least nominated. Whether the ancient and decrepit sage of Gramercy Park will consent to pose as a figure, and open a barrel is not yet a settled question; there is no issue in the nomination of Mr. Tilden this year, there is not a fair prospect that he will live to formulate a policy were he elected; hence, it shows the poverty of the democratic party in material when they have to run a campaign on sounding brass and the lucre of a decrepit millionaire.

GIVE US A CHANCE.

The Farmer enters his solemn protest against the present mode of getting up state fair premium lists. There are four or five pages of advertising to one of state fair business, and it is so badly mixed up that it is next to impossible to find anything but advertisements. There is little saved to the state board, even though no charge is made for printing, as it costs two cents for sending out each list, when one cent would do were it not for the large amount of advertisement. About $100 in extra postage is required, and by putting from $50 to $100 more with that, it would pay for printing a decent premium list.—Neb. Farmer.

AT RANDOM.

What a chimera is man! What a confused chaos! What a subject of contradictions! A professed judge at all things, and yet a feeble worm of the earth! The great depository and guardian of truth, and yet a mere bundle of uncertainties! The glory and shame of the universe.

A new book is entitled, "What can woman do?" An answer to the great question can be found by asking any bald headed man.

Men are women's playthings; women are the devil's.

When two young ladies kiss each other they fulfil a Gospel injunction. They are doing unto each other what they would that men should do unto them.

Nowadays enthusiasm is accounted folly; dissimulation, self-control; truth, cynicism; stiffness of manners, dignity; deception cleverness; hypocrisy, decency; selfishness, economy; freedom of thought, effrontery; and supersition, the prop of human morals. What progress in language.

"Why is courting called sparking?" asked a Brooklyn young lady of the married aunt. "It must be because the real fire doesn't begin to flame 'till after marriage," was the reply, as one speaking from experience.

Written on a skull: Lamp, what hast thou done with the flame? Skeletos, what hast thou done with the soul? Deserted cage, what hast thou done with the bird? Volcano, what hast thou done with the lava? Slave, what hast thou done with thy master?

"Shall I help you to some butter, Mr. Smith?" asked the host.

"No, thank you."

"Don't you eat butter?"

"No not now. I used 'o, but I have reformed you know. I am proud to say I am now a temperance man."

"I know; but don't see why that should interfere with your eating butter."

"I don't take anything strong."

Coolness and absence of heat and haste indicate fine qualities. A gentleman makes no noise; a lady is serene.

To remain virtuous, a man has only to combat his own desires; a woman must resist her own inclinations and the continual attack of man.

The young people of a New Hampshire church society had met together for a supper and entertainment, and at the close of the repast toasts were in order. The worthy young man who was called upon to respond to the sentiment, "Our Sexton," let himself out in the manner following: "Our Sexton! He it is who sweeps and garnishes the interior of our Sabbath house, and sets ringing the joyful bell that calls our willing feet hither. He it is who hangs upon the marriage altar the bright garlands of earth's choicest flowers, and when the scene changes and the wedding garment has given place to the funeral pall, it is he who furnishes the bier." The worthy young man was as quick as any one to notice the unfortunate but unintentional pun conveyed in the last three words of his speech, and blushed deeply as he sank into his seat. But the others laughed real irreverently.

Beware of him who meets you with a friendly mien, and in the midst of a cordial salutation, seeks to avoid your glance.

A Nashville man was fined $800 for kissing a school teacher. If it had not been for two or three of the scholars who caught them at it, she would not have charged him a cent.

Life often seem but a long shipwreck, of which the debris are friendship, glory and love; the shores of our existence are strewn with them.

How many women would laugh at the funerals of their husbands, if it were not the custom to weep!

A boy who had been sent to carry a silver card basket to a young lady as a bridal present, was asked on his return to the office "if he had found the right place." "Oh, yes." "See the girl herself?" "Yes." "Did she seem surprised?" "Very much so." "Say anything?" "Why yes; she told her mother she presumed it was plated, but it would be good enough for her aunt out the country.

Weak minded men say "money can do anything," hence they are willing to do anything for money.

Men commonly inquire one another without cause, and simply to do something; as an idle promenade in a garden, breaks the young branches, and strips off the leaves of the most beautiful flowers.

"Yes, sir," said the liquor dealer, "it is a good law that prevents anyone from opening a school within 500 feet of a liquor-saloon. School houses are the ruin of the trade anyway.

"I do wish ladies could vote," said a Philadelphia woman. "We'd certainly make it very hot for a man who doesn't get up in a street car and give us a seat, if he ever became a candidate."

If much reason is necessary to remain in celibacy, still more is required to marry. One must then have reason for two; and often all the reason of the two does not make one reasonable being.

Men always say more evil of women than there really is; and there is always more than is known.

A clergyman's daughter looking over the MSS. left by her father in his study chanced upon the following sentence. "I love to look upon a young man. There is a hidden potency concealed within his breast which charms and pains me." She sat down and blushing added: "Them's my sentiments exactly papa; all but the pain."

Women of the world never use harsh expressions when condemning their rivals. Like the savage, they hurl elegant arrows ornamented with purple and azure, but with poisoned points.

Stylish young ladies are wearing little gold kangaroos on their watch chains. Oh, the artful things. The moment that a man sees a kangaroo he can't help remembering that it is leap year.

A Cedar Rapids editor wants any young lady who jumps at conclusions, to consider him a conclusion.

Philadelphia refuses to admit women to the bar, but the saloons will sell to them if they will bring a pitcher to the gate.

The life of a woman is a long dissimulation, candor, beauty, freshness, virginity, modesty—a woman has each of these but once. When lost she must simulate them the rest of her life.

A merchant in Boston is under three hundred dollars bail for keeping a monkey in his show window. The line had to be drawn somewhere. The authorities never complained as long as he kept the monkey behind the counter, which is a very common occurrence in dry good stores; but when it comes to parading them in a show window, it's a mean corporation that won't kick.

The more honest a man is, the less he affects the air of a saint.

Silence has been given to woman to better express her thoughts.

A little child who was playing near a bonfire, suddenly tripped and fell into the flames. A sportsman happened to be passing and his high-bred dog jumped into flames, and pulled the child out. The frantic mother came swooping down from the house screaming: "Is he hurt? Is he hurt?" "Dang it, yes ma'am!" exclaimed the sportsman, who arrived on the spot just before she did; "don't you see all the feathering is burnt off his tail?"

The world is divided into two armies. Men make offensive war, women defensive. Love exalts and excites the two parties. They meet hand in hand. Love throws himself into their midst, agitating his torch. But the struggle differs from other battles—instead of destroying, it multiplies the combatants.
