National Republican Ticket.

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES G. BLAINE, of Maine.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
JOHN A. LOGAN,
of Illinois.

It is an elegant and impressive spectacle, the people are witnessing, of democratic maneuvering which is now progressing in the state of New York. Mr. Tilden declines a nomination, when lo, in a moment, in the "twinkling of an eye," the entire panorama changes, and the democratic organ of sight is narrowed down to a couple of obscure and practically unknown politicians, who happen to reside in the Empire State. An ex-Congressman, by the name of Flower, and Grover Cleveland, the present chief executive of New York, who until two years ago, was unknown and unnoted, even in his own neighborhood, in his native state.

We trace the democratic and the republican newspapers in vain for anything national, anything marked, anything noted, in regard to either of these gentlemen. Mr. Flower, we read, is a very wealthy, and a very brassy local politician, who was only laughed at on a count of his impudence and presumption up to the moment Mr. Tilden positively declined the nomination last week; of the other man, we only know fortuitous circumstances, brought about by the struggle for mastery between the Manning and Tammany factions of the New York democracy two years ago, happened to find in the obscure lawyer, Cleveland, an available candidate in the convention, this followed by the republican bolt on Folger, has made for Grover Cleveland all the notoriety and reputation he is now banking on for the great prize of the Presidency.

We say this is an anomalous and a remarkable state of affairs; apparently, not even a second rate statesman within the democratic party, who has rendered that party and the country service, either at home or abroad, dare raise his head in the national convention. The Paynes, Hendricks, McDonalds, Bayard's, Randall's Carhile's and scores more of men of genius and note are relegated to the dark shadows of the democratic lobby, whilst these non-descripts are trotted into the ring by the democratic managers, and the great "What is it" is sounded forth as the only live specimen of a remarkable and hitherto supposed, extinct race of statesmen.

In the democratic party alone, the "dark horse" is kept in the foreground. To intelligent democrats the contrast between the position of their party, with its obscure candidates, and the great republican party, with its famous and standard bearers, must be both humiliating and painful.

THE Omaha Republican need not squirm over this paper's objection to the foolish and very objectionable and very untrue assertion of that organ that, "The Hayes, Garfield, and Arthur Administrations were based upon the spoils system."

Says the Republican: "The HERALD must admit that neither one of the president's named was the choice of the people."

To assert this is to coolly assume that this paper is willing to "admit" the truth to be a falsehood.

This paper is not of the kind that is going to "admit" imperfections, in our form of government, but we do not promise to have any patience with any party or organ that does promise a millennium under Mr. Blaine; especially at the expense of a democratic attack upon the best administrations this country has ever had so far as the administration of our civil service is concerned since its infancy days under Jefferson and Adams.

The HERALD asserts that there is as much difference between the civil service policies and practices of Messrs. Hayes and Arthur and that of Jackson and Buchanan, as there is between the civilization of the Mexican States and our own progressive government.

The HERALD does not admit that the politicians, so-called, cheated the people by nominating Messrs. Hayes, Garfield and Arthur. On the contrary we know the fact to be that in those famous National conventions the politicians of which Mr. Blaine is one of our brightest, were badly worsted and unhorsed and, that, the civil service reformers holding the balance of power dictated those nominations.

Now, then, all we ask of the Omaha Republican is to drop its emotional insanity, come down out of the clouds, "pull down its vest," and advocate Mr. Blaine's election on national and practical grounds.

UNDER WHICH RULE?

Mr. Edmunds, who has always been a Republican from principle, speaks at the republican ratification meeting to be held in Washington city tomorrow. It will then be in order for the so-called independents to bolt Mr. Edmunds, because Mr. Edmunds certainly must be a depraved man to be in favor of Mr. Blaine for the Presidency, when Geo. William Curtis and his followers are against Mr. Edmunds' favorite.

The fact of the whole matter is that Mr. Curtis' paper "The Weekly," and the New York Times, are controlled by interests that are wholly un-American; interests that can be nothing else than unfriendly to James G. Blaine and John A. Logan. The HERALD means the same interest that has stimulated the hero from Arbor Springs lodge to cry out against the American policy of protecting home industries. The HERALD means that exactly the same fertilizer is used upon Harper's Weekly and such newspapers as the agents of the Cobden Club of London have used upon such statesmen as the one that, about every change of the moon, buds forth from Otee county, either in the Chicago Times or the The Post of Washington; in other words, that class which Sam Randall so thoroughly skinned in the speech he made last month in opposition to Mr. Morrison's moon-eyed tariff measure.

There is a very potent reason why certain subsidized organs are bitterly opposed to Mr. Blaine, which the people are coming to well understand, and our democratic friends will understand before this campaign is ended, that stalwart Americanism is at bay yet awhile on this continent. Mr. Jas. G. Blaine needs no platform as letters of credit to the American people, especially in these times, when the issues come down as to whether English manners and British gold or American patriotism and American interests shall rule and shape the future destinies of our country.

LET THEM COME.

Special to the Chicago Tribune.
Ever since the nomination of Blaine and Logan by the Republican National convention, reports have been current here that there would be a heavy defection of the Irish American voters from the democratic voters in this city, and that the Democratic bosses were doing all they could do to keep the Irish quiet and prevent their open avowal of an intent to support Blaine. The Baltimore American, in order to get at the real truth of the matter, has obtained interviews with the leading officers of various societies here, and also other prominent Irish American citizens. By these interviews it is clearly shown that, so far as Baltimore is concerned (and the Irish vote here is what gives the democratic majority) many Irishmen will vote for Blaine and Logan. P. S. Campbell, President of the Knights of St. Vincent, said: "Unless the Democrats nominate such men as Bayard or McDonald the Republican ticket will win. Many of our young men are in favor of Blaine. One said to me the other day he was going to vote for Blaine. It would be the first time he had voted the Republican ticket, but he thought he was justified in doing so when the democrats persisted in sending men like Hewitt, of New York, to Congress to betray Irish affairs to the British minister. Blaine will take care of our interests for us."

James Doyle, ex president of the Robert Emmet Association, said: "I am a Blaine and Logan man no matter what the democratic ticket is. I will vote for Blaine because he represents the true sentiment of the American people."

R. P. Gorman, President of the Knights of St. Peter, said: "James G. Blaine is my choice against the whole field, because of his bold, aggressive attitude while secretary of state. The American foreign policy adhered to for years past and carried out by both diplomatic and consular agencies, has been a standing insult to 50,000,000 of Americans. Under a Blaine administration all this would be changed. As an American adopted citizen, I owe no slavish allegiance to any party, more particularly to that one controlled by the Belmonts, Hewitts, and other pro-English hypocrites. I am satisfied that if Blaine is elected his Administration will be in marked contrast to the present one, and I feel that the rights of American citizens will be protected at home and abroad."

P. C. O'Connor, Secretary of the Knights of St. Patrick, declared he would vote for Blaine unless the Democrats nominated Butler.

Bernard Doyle: "Blaine is my choice because he is a thorough American."

John L. Mathews, Democratic ex-member of the Maryland Legislature and the Baltimore City Council, said: "There is a strong sentiment among the Irish people favorable to the election of Blaine. He is bold and aggressive, and there is an abiding faith among our people that under his Administration the rights of foreign-born citizens would be protected."

The above are the views of Irish Democrats of Baltimore, each one of whom wields considerable influence in Democratic politics here.
