RATIFICATION.

Democrats to the Front, with Assistance from Omaha.

As per announcement a ratification meeting over the nomination of Cleveland and Hendricks, was held at the opera house in this city, last night. Owing largely to the hearty support given the question of a ratification meeting by the HERALD, and the liberal advertising of the same in the columns of this paper, the best advertising medium in the city, a goodly crowd was in attendance, over one half of whom were republicans, and who participated in the applause and enjoyed the entertainment to the full extent. The most enthusiastic Cieveland men in the city are among the republicans, who realize that his nomination gives Blaine a practical surety of the election. The poverty of the democratic party in this city in the line of speakers for such occasions was never more manifest than last evening when the managers sent to Omaha to get speakers to conduct a local ratification meeting, and it was well that it was doue, for a patient and long waiting public needed something way-up, to fill the long felt want.
