Shacuse, Neb., Sept. 12 .- A little rametion has just come to ight here which has brought the Beatce Insurance concern into worse re putchan ever. One year ago last month Dr. teele, of Seward county, came to this face representing himself as an agent of th Beatrice Mutual Benevolent asso his gowing represensations, procured a largenumber of applications and premium lotes. Yesterday Attorney Albert Joyctreceived for collection a number of aditional notes, of $125 each. These notesbear the signatures of parties from whor Dr. Steele secured applications, out fley one and all declare that they neve gave any such notes. There is will be investigated.

ABattle With Train Robbers.

AUTIN, TEXAS, Sept. 11 .- Great excitement prevails near here over a report from Mauchaca, a small yillage fifteen miles southwest of this city' that officers had found and attacked a band of train robbers supposed to be the same gang that perpetrated the McNeal and Flatonia train robberies several months ago. The local officers at Mauchaca attempted this afternoon to arrest the robbers, when the latter opened fire, wounding one of the officers. Two outlaws thus far have been fatally wounded. The fighting still continues. Help has been asked for from this place and sheriff Lyle and posse have just left for the scene of the conflict.

Later information from Mauchaca, the scene of the fight this morning, is to the effect that one desperado was killed and two wounded. The Haddock Case.

Nebraska City's New Postmaster. Stoux City, Ia., Sept. 11.-Nine wit-Washington, Sept. 11.—Otway L. nesses were examined in behalf of the Carter, of Mississippi, has been appointed state in the Munchrath case today. The special agent for the Indian depredation | two most important witnesses were Unitclaims. The president has appointed ed States District Attorney T. P. Murphy Donald MacCraig poatmaster at Nebraska and H. L. Leavitt. The latter testified City, Neb., vice Thomas Morton, deceas- that Munchrath was one of the most active members among the saloonkeepers who planned to assault and beat Haddock because of his conduct in the liquor prosecution. He testified further, that Munchrath was watching for the return of Haddock to the livery stable, and that he himself and Munchrath stood within arms length of each other, while John Arensdorf walked out from the crowd lying in wait for Haddock, and

Hon, T. P. Murphy testified that he was riding home in a back a few minutes before the murder, and within one-half a block from where the murder occurred the back was hailed by Munchrath, who said to Murphy: "This is not the hack I am looking for." Several other witnesses testified that Munchrath was in the crowd who are alleged to have been pre-Adjutant General Alexander detailed sent at the murder and that just five minutes before the murder he was at Junk's saloon, from which the crowd left immediately on notice that Dr. Haddock's buggy had returned to the livery stable.

To Start a Balky Horse.

A big, fine looking, high stepping, head in the air, nervous horse was driven dow: Central street attached to a buggy in which were two men. There was a blockade of teams in front of the theatre for a moment, and when the way was cleared again the horse would not budge. His driver told him to go on, but he didn't move. The other man got out and tried to lead him, but he was as immovable as though his legs had been driven into the ground. The driver began to lose his temper and took up the whip, when a horsey looking man came from the rear of the theatre, and taking in the situation at a glance said: "Hold on a minute; I'll start you."

He went to the rear of the buggy and pushed it steadily against the horse. The horse found it necessary to take a step forward, that step led to others, and he trotted off down the street as easily as

"It's no use to try to lead a horse like that, or to thrash him," said the horsey man. "He is green. He never has been driven much, and don't know what is wanted off him."-Worcester Telegram.

A Feat of Engineering. The Sukkur bridge has just been completed at the works of Messrs. Westwood, Baillie & Co., London yard, Poplar. The bridge, which is on the cantilever principle, is to be constructed over the Kohri Spanish soldiers. The latter were of railway from Kurrachee and Attock. realised leaving three of their number dot, and carrying off five who had been woulded by dynamite bombs thrown by the Cubers of the Cubers and the Cubers of the Cubers o object on the banks of the Thames at Poplar and for miles around. It is 400 sho from the soldiers. The filibusters there made their way into the interior which, if laid out, would measure 24 lineal miles, the weight of the bolts, nails and other ironwork being about 40 tons. The contract has taken about two years to complete, the bridge having to be temporarily erected at the works previous to being sent out to India.—Chi-

Wouldn't Fight a Duel.

Maj. Hinze, a retired officer of the Prussian army, has been tried before a court of honor of the army corps of the guards, and deprived of his military title riatin, and labored particularly among and uniform, because he failed to chalmemers of the G. A, R. The doctor, by lenge a political opponent who, in the heat of a general election, cast an imputation upon his military honor. He not only failed to challenge his defamer, but prosecuted him in a regular court of law and obtained his punishment. What makes this case so strange is that the criminal code of the empire forbids the challenging to a duel with deadly weapons on pain of fortress imprisonment for six months, and this applies to both military men and civilians. Maj. Hinze is rebuked for two offenses-for not violating crookedness somewhere and the matter the law, and for having resorted to the courts for redress of a wrong. This find-ing of the court of honor was approved by the emperor .- The Argonaut.

Dancing a Hum-a-Hum.

The Piute Indians at Lovelock will shortly hold a pine nut dance and a solemn "hum-a-hum" (song prayer). This is because of their thankfulness to "Pah-ah" (the good God who sends water) for the abundant crop of pine nuts with which he has this season favored his red children. The pine nuts are not at Lovelock, but far away in the mountains, where the pine orchards have escaped the ax of the white vandals. In the Table mountain range are still left many virgin groves. After the dance and "hum-a-hum" the Indians will go to the groves and gather the nuts. Formerly -before the herds of the whites took possession of the ranges—they had a dance and a praise song for the harvest of grass seed. The Piute people are very religious in their way.—Virginia En-

SHAVING A DEAD MAN.

A BARBER WHO WILL NEVER RE-PEAT THE OPERATION.

Widow Who Wasn't Satisfied-An "English" Dude's Remonstrance - A Colored Barber Badly Scared by a Corpse-A Ten Dollar Job.

"That's all right if it's only a hair cut; just sit up a little straighter. If you wanted a shave I'd have told you to take Bill's chair over there. I couldn't shave you-you look like that fellow, only you're warmer and not so white.

"Like what fellow?" "Like 'a stiff' I shaved about two weeks ago. The minute you'd shut your eyes I'd get so nervous I might make you as dead as he is. The resemblance would be so strong I couldn't stand it."

"That's funny." "Funny! Well, if you'd ever shaved a corpse you wouldn't think it was very funny. My heart jumped into my throat when you stepped into that door. It's over two weeks since I've shaved that dead man, and he's been right with me ever since. Every time I close my eyes I can see he's glaring right at me. His face is as plain before me as yours. Night and day I see it. My skin creeps every time I touch a razor. Every time I touch anything cold I shudder. I can feel his cold, clammy skin yet. I will never forget the horrible sensation of the moment I touched his face with the razor. I felt I was committing a sacrilege. I felt guilty-but of what I could not answer. If I live to be 100 years old I'll never forget that experience—and I'll never shave a dead man again."

SHAVED DOZENS OF DEAD MEN. "Oh, pshaw! Charlie, you're foolish," said

another barber, "I've shaved dozens of dead men and never saw a ghost. I'd rather shave a 'stiff' than a crank any day, for these reasons: You get paid more, they don't bleed if you cut 'em and they never grumble at your work. I've been paid as high as $10 and never less than $3. That is the regular price and I won't take less. I've seen lots of funny things in this end of our business. Less than two weeks ago I went to a house not 1,000 miles from Washington park. I had finished the job and was packing my traps when the dead man's wife-I mean widow-came in. She walked over to the corpse, examined the face closely, and was turning away with a sort of satisfied look, when suddenly she gave a shriek, and cried like a professional.

"'What's the matter, madame?' I asked. "'Why, you-you mean thing. You've p-p-parted his h-hair on the wrong s-side-

"Another time I went to an aristocratic residence on Michigan avenue; I won't tell you the number because it wasn't very long ago. The dead man's brother was in the room with me—one of these alleged English dudes, you know, who talk through their nose and lisp like a woman. The first stroke I made on the neck of the corpse caused his brother take a conniption.

"'Now, now, now; stop that, I say, stop that,' he lisped. 'Aw-aw donchuno that's not right. You musn't shave the neck up; you must shave it down. If you shave it up the hair will grow up and curl the wrong way, don't you know, and he can never part it nice again like it is now.'

"I looked at the man and saw he was in earnest, and I tried to keep my face straight, but it was pretty hard work. The idea of shaving a corpse so he could part his whis-kers nice afterward!

"A funny thing happened once when I was working in Pittsburg, Pa. One night a rich iron man died on Oakland avenue, and a colored barber went to fix him up. When he had shaved one side of the face it was necessary to turn the corpse over. I suppose there was some air in the lungs, but anyway, when he turned him over the corpse gave an awful groan. The 'coon' dropped the razor and let out a yell that brought the whole household to the spot on the run. Before anybody got there the darky was out of the house and down the avenue as if the 'old boy' was after him, and at every jump he let out a screech. When one of the men went into the room he saw the razor and nearly half of the left ear of the corpse lying on the floor. The razor had just happened to strike it when the darky dropped it and ran. A doctor was sent for, who sewed the car on, and then he sent for me. I finished shaving the man and left the house with a crisp $100 bill in my pocket."— Inter Ocean.

Standing by the Teacher. The State Register of Springfield, Ills., relates the following curious experience of Dr. Lameroux, of Eldon, Ia. The doctor is a physician about 40 years old, who in his youth was of an adventurous turn. At one time he found himself teaching school down in the Cherokee country, in a schoolhouse which his own hands had helped to build.

On one occasion, having offended a number of young Cherokee bucks by promising them a "good square lick-ing" for some infringement of his rules, he discovered that his pupils had come to school armed to the teeth, intending, as he expresses it, to "do him up," if he attempted to carry out his threat.

He immediately dispatched a secret messenger to inform the parents of the young men of the state of affairs, and ask their attendance at the school. ask their attendance at the school.

They soon came, and the schoolmaster addressed them in a few explanatory words. He said that the young men had disobeyed the rules, and must take their punishment or leave the school. The old bucks, after consulting together, agreed to stand by the teacher, whereupon the refractory pupils were one by one dis-armed and punished.

The pistols, knives and other weapons made quite a pile in the center of the room. Some time after this the school gave an exhibition, which is said to have been the first school exhibition ever held in Indian territory, at which about 1,500 Indians were present. Many of them came days beforehand, and camped on the spot to await the great event.—Youth's Companion.
