BORROWED AND STOLEN.

DOOMED TO DEATH.

The Supreme Court of Illinois Affirms the First Court's Decision.

All Seven Must Hang.

OTTAWA, Ill., Sept. 14.—The opinion in the anarchist case was written by Judge Magruder, of the Chicago district, and is an able exposition of the law and previous interpretations thereof, by eminent jurists in the country, as well as of courts bearing upon alleged and perhaps real errors in record. In this work he was ably helped by each of the other six distinguished judges who made him their spokesman, and through him expressed their unanimous decision. The opinion covers 225 pages of closely written manuscript, and contains about 55,000 words.

THE SCENE IN THE COURT.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 14.—At 9:30 this morning Justice Magruder began the announcement of the decision in the anarchist case. Just before the opening of the court every one seemed to have a feeling that something was going to happen. Before the hour for the convening of the court, the lawyers and reporters seemed to have that feeling and converged with each other in subdued tones. Even Barker, the janitor, who has waited upon every justice of the supreme court that sat on the bench, was seen to loiter around in the opening and dusting of the court room as if he were afraid of breaking the deathly stillness that prevailed the entire building. Deputy Smith faltered, and his voice trembled, as he pronounced that "hear ye! ye!" As the justices filed into the court room, headed by Chief Justice Sheldon, they appeared more dignified than ever. The chief justice waved his associates to their seats even more stately than was his wont, and his nod to the sheriff was more stiff, and his "open court" less audible than on previous days of the term. Justice Magruder appeared flushed and nervous as he entered the court room, the cause of which was evidenced a few moments later, when Chief Justice Sheldon turned to him, and in a voice which would have been inaudible save for the deathly stillness which prevailed the room, said: "Justice Magruder, have you any announcements to make?" The flushed appearance of the justice changed to that of palor, and his voice was husky as he responded: "In August Spies and others against the people of the state of Illinois, No. 59, advisement docket." The chief justice nervously turned the leaves of the court docket to the case indicated, when the justice read the decision of the court in the "anarchist case." As he commenced reading he regained his composure. His voice was clear and distinct, until the order fixing the death penalty and date of execution was reached, when

HIS READING BECAME LABORED, his voice husky, and his manner showed that it was with great emotion that he performed the duty that he had been given by his associates to perform. Having voiced the decision of the court in the most celebrated case it had been called upon to decide, the justice who made the announcement at once left the bench and retired to his room. The oral announcement was: "The judgement is affirmed in No. 59, on the advisement calendar, Spies et al. vs. the people. In this case the judgement of the court below is affirmed, as to all the plaintiffs in error. An opinion has been prepared setting forth the reasons for the affirmation of judgement. The opinion is now handed to the clerk to be filed." Chief Justice Sheldon started to fix the date of execution, when Judge Mulkey, interruptingly said: "It is not my intention to offer a separate opinion, as I should have done. I desire to avail myself of this occasion to say, that while I concur in the conclusions reached, and also in the general views entered in the opinion filed, I do not wish to be understood as holding that the record is free from error. For I do not think it is. I am, nevertheless, of opinion that none of the errors complained of, are of such a serious character as to require a reversal of judgement. In view of the number of defendants on trial, the vast amount of testimony offered and passed upon by the court and the almost numberless rulings the court was required to make, the wonderment to us that errors were not more numerous and of a more serious character. In short, after having fully examined the record and giving the questions arising from it my very best thought, with an earnest and conscientious desire to faithfully discharge my whole duty, I am fully satisfied that the opinion reached vindicates the law and does complete justice between the people and the defendants, and is fully warranted by the law and the evidence."

Chief Justice Sheldon then made the following announcement:

THE SENTENCE.

"In this case, the court orders that the sentence of the criminal court of Cook county on the defendants in indictment—August Spies, Michael Schwab, Samuel Fielden, Albert B. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, George Engel and Louis Lingg, be carried into effect by the sheriff of Cook county on Friday, November 11, next, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 4 o'clock in the afternoon of that day."

MUNCHRATH'S DEFENSE.

His Father, Mother and Sister Testify in His Behalf to Establish an Alibi.

SIoux CITY, Sept. 14.—In the Haddock case to-day a number of witnesses were examined to show the previous good character of defendant Munchrath and his movements on the night of the murder. Defendant's father, mother, and sister testified that he was at his father's house at 10:25 when the fatal shot was fired. The report of a revolver being heard in the house, and mentioned by his mother. When he left there he was accompanied by his father and went directly home, about a block distant. Late in the afternoon Munchrath took the stand and testified that he attended the saloon keepers' meeting on the evening of Aug. 2, 1886, but nothing was said about "doing up" Haddock or any one else, the session lasted only about five minutes. He told in minute detail of his movements on the night of the murder and said he first heard of the parties going out in a hack to watch Haddock while in Junk's saloon. He hailed Murphy's hack out of curiosity to see who went, thinking that their hack. He left the crowd at Junk's and went directly east to his father's house, arriving there at the time indicated in the testimony of his parents. He did not go west from Junk's with the crowd as stated by Leayitt and Bismark, and did not know how many did go, nor did he know of any arrangement to do Haddock injury. He denied all statements by Leayitt as to the proceedings of the meeting at Heldenried's, and in this was corroborated by Simons, Arendorf and others. The cross examination was long and will probably be continued to-morrow.

A Bedecked Stock Train From Caldwell, Kan., to Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—A decorated stock train arrived at the stock yards yesterday over the Rock Island road from Caldwell, Kan. There were sixty-six cars in the train, elaborately bedecked with banners and streamers, displaying the names of the owners and consignees, and setting forth the glory of Caldwell and the extension of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad, which has just reached there. The owners of the stock came in a Pullman sleeper attached to the train.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The run of native cattle was not very heavy, but it was more than ample. There was a liberal supply of all kinds of cattle, and buyers having such a large lot to select from, were naturally very indifferent and slow to take hold. Bids were 10 to 15c lower on good ones and 15 to 25c lower on common ones. The sales were made very unevenly. Prices, as a salesman said, were just as you could catch them, and a lot of cattle at $4.25 might be better quality than a lot sold at $4.35. Prices on an average were 10c lower, but very irregular. A considerable volume of business was done and the market was not a bad one at the price. Receipts 12,000; shipments, 2,700. The market was fairly active and prices 10c lower. Shipping steers, 1350 to 1500 lbs, $4.50 to $5.30; 1,200 to 1,350 lbs, $3.90 to $4.60. Stockers and feeders, steady at $1.70 to $3.10; cows, bulls and mixed, dull and weak, the bulk of sales being at $1.25 to $3.25. About 3,500 Texas and 4,000 far west cattle were on sale. Texans sold at $1.95 to $3.00. Western rangers sold at $2.80 to $3.75 for natives and half breeds, and $2.60 to $3.60 for wintered Texans; cows, $2.25 to $2.60. Hogs—Estimated receipts, 17,000; last Wednesday, 13,900; week so far, 49,369; same time last week, 37,098. Trade was brisk with little or no variation in values as compared with the close of yesterday.

A few closely assorted heavy, nearly as good as Philadelphia, sold at $5.45 to $5.50. Nice butcher weights, $5.35 to $5.40. The best packing sorts sold at $5.30 to $5.35; coarse and medium, $5.10 to $5.25; light sorts, $5.00 to $5.35.

ABOUT PREHISTORIC FRUIT.

The Lake Dwellers Made Great Use of Apples—Pears, Grapes, Walnuts.

The prehistoric area of the apple was chiefly in the region lying between Trebizond and Gililan. The lake dwellers of Lombardy, Savoy and Switzerland made great use of apples. "They always cut them lengthways and preserved them dried as a provision for the winter," writes DeCandolle, in his interesting work on the "Origin of Cultivated Plants." Two varieties of apples seem to have been known to the lake dwellers before they possessed metals. Whether they ever solved the problem that hopelessly puzzled George III and got them into a dumpling, archaeology does not as yet inform us.

The abundance of the fruit found in prehistoric stores would seem to indicate some kind of cultivation. The pear is of less frequent occurrence, although it is found in the prehistoric dwellings of Switzerland and Italy, usually in a dried state and cut lengthways. Then, as now, therefore, the pear was a greater luxury than the apple. The abundance and variety of names testify to the very ancient existence of the latter from the Caspian sea to the Atlantic. Philology comes largely to our aid in this interesting study. The more ancient and widely spread a plant, the more numerous its names.

But prehistoric diners out possessed one of the best of all fruits—the grape. Seeds of the grape have been discovered in the lake dwellings near Parma, dating from the age of bronze; also in the prehistoric settlements of Lake Varese and of Switzerland. M. DeCandolle, moreover, informs us that vine leaves have been found in the lake near Montpelier, where they were probably deposited before the historical epoch, also in the same formation in Provence. Whether they combined the two we know not, but it is quite probable that wine and walnuts delighted the palates of primitive fasteners. The walnut is of great antiquity. Walnut leaves have been found in the quaternary tufa of Provence, and a species of walnut in some of the Swiss lake dwellings. The species possess a Sanskrit name, a fact testifying to its early cultivation in India. The tree was introduced into China about 140 B. C. Only one cherry stone has been as yet found in any prehistoric settlement of Italy or Switzerland, nor is the antiquity of the stratum quite certain.—Chambers' Journal.

The Dress of the Athlete.

It is paradoxical, but true, that athletes do not get the most enjoyment out of outdoor sport. They can thank themselves for it, too. They don't know how to dress for it. Although knowing he is to be out in the blistering sun, the average athlete will get the smallest tight fitting cap he can, which will afford the least shade of anything he can wear. Then, if he wears knickerbockers, he will have tight elastics compressing the veins either above or below the knee, and having an injurious effect upon the circulation of the blood, the improvement of which is the very end and aim of exercise. Lawn tennis players and bicyclists suffer most from the latter mistake.

It could be easily avoided and the blood given the most unrestricted flow by the use of a little common sense and the hose supporter worn by the other sex, which supports the long stockings by means of a band passing around the hips. The reason why athletes do not use this more is because they have an idea that the band compresses the abdomen. This it does not do. There is a little depression in the hip bones into which the band falls, and from which it will not slip. The inhabitants of Belgium utilize this provision of nature by suspending all their clothing for the lower limbs from the hips, leaving their shoulders free. Certainly if heavy clothes can be advantageously suspended from the hips a pair of hose can. It would seem that the athletes should try to derive the most benefit possible from the open air, and not studiously make every condition or dress tell against securing such a result.—Athlete in Globe-Democrat.

His Last Resort.

"I am poor," he said to a Chicago girl, "and you are rich; but true love levels such distinctions, and"—
She interrupted him with one of the most positive negations, if such an expression can be allowed, ever uttered in the windy city. "This, then, is my last resort," he said desperately, and he displayed a silver mounted revolver.

"You ought to get five or six dollars on it," replied the girl encouragingly.—Puck.
Ingersoll's Blank Verse.
The last two-thirds of Robert Ingersoll's tribute to the memory of Beocler is a fine specimen of blank verse, as the reader will readily discover by the simple process of scanning it. It is, moreover, a contribution to our literature which, if properly classified, will do much to raise the average of American poetry. Mr. Ingersoll, consciously or unconsciously, has fallen into this trick of metrical expression in the form of prose a number of times before.

Cause of Untrained Servants.
Omaha Bride—Dear me! you don't seem to have the first idea about cooking.
New Girl—You see, ma'am, I haven't any one to cook for me.
"Why I don't know anything about it. You ought to know; you said you had had ten years' experience."
"Yes, ma'am, but I've allers lived with young married leddies like you, an' every one ov 'em was as big a dunce as you are about things."—Omaha World.

Jay Gould's Big Car.
Mr. Jay Gould's new private railway car is the largest ever made by the Pullman company, seventy feet in length. It is particularly strong and steady, and very richly furnished, but without "glare and glitter." The finish is in satinwood, and the upholstery is blue plush. There are an observation room, bedroom, toilet room, dining room, kitchen, and berth for porter and cook.—Harper's Bazar.
