BORROWED AND STOLEN.

THE CROW INDIANS OF MONTANA GROW RESTLESS AND THREATENING.

Troops Sent to the Agency to Protect the People and the Government Property.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch from Assistant Adjutant General Vincent, at St. Paul, was to-day received at the war department, through General Terry, stating that a number of Crow Indians had just returned from a raid on the Piegiens, to their agency in Montana, and had fired into the agency buildings, and were defiant and hostile. The agent was unable to arrest them with the Indian police, and requested that military be sent. Two troops were immediately dispatched from Fort Custer, but they found the condition of affairs more serious than was expected, and were unable to effect an arrest of the Indians. The department commander was appealed to for instructions. In forwarding the dispatch General Terry makes the following endorsement: "I find it difficult to understand this action of the Crows. They have always been well disposed and well behaved, except in respect to their feuds with other tribes. In our Sioux troubles they were faithful and efficient allies. I fear there may be some cause for the present excitement that is not disclosed by the foregoing dispatch, and think it would be the best policy to delay attempts to suppress the disturbance until the cause shall have abated. The Indian bureau should send to the agency one of its most capable and trusted inspectors to examine and report upon the situation. I have instructed the commanding officer at Fort Custer to confine the action of troops, until further orders, to the protection of the agent, his employees and agency property." It is surmised that the trouble arose from an attempt by the agent to prevent the Indians from having their sun dance, when they were in a state of frenzy, following their victorious campaign against their old time foes, the Piegiens.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

Four Men Killed and Others Injured at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Oct. 3.—Four persons were killed and two seriously wounded by an explosion in George P. Pladt's flour mill this morning at 7:45 o'clock. The cause of the explosion was old boilers. Mrs. Thomas S. Rivers, wife of the foreman, was blown from the boiler room across the alley into a room sixty feet from where she was standing. She was killed, as was her husband, who was buried under the debris. Fred Kuhlman was also buried in the ruins and was taken out dead. Henry Tenne was instantly killed by steam and the force of explosion. Engineer Benjamin Myers was seriously injured. Minnie Reichman, a child of five years, had both legs broken and is so injured that her recovery is not probable. A flagman of the Iron Mountain railroad on duty two blocks from the scene was knocked down and badly bruised. A coal heaver unloading coal near the boiler house was buried beneath the debris. He was taken out half an hour after the catastrophe, badly bruised and cut about the head and three ribs broken. The residence of H. Crouse was completely demolished. The mud drum, weighing a thousand pounds, crushed through the roof to the cellar of John Burby's house. Every house in the neighborhood was more or less damaged. Engineer Carr ascribes no cause for the disaster.

MICHAEL DAVITT.

The Irish Patriot and Agitator to Visit in Nebraska.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Michael Davitt, the distinguished Irish patriot and agitator, arrived in Chicago this morning. He was driven to the Grand Pacific hotel. Patrick Egan had come on from his home in Lincoln, Neb., to meet him. The Irish champion was fatigued after his long trip, and when approached by interviewers, refused to talk for publication. He admitted, however, and the coincidence is a peculiar one, as Mr. Egan volunteered the same information, that his visit was purely on private business. Mr. Davitt said the American public would be fully informed on the condition of matters in Ireland when Arthur O'Connor and Thomas Gratton Esmond, both members of parliament, and members of the national league, arrive here. They were expected to land in New York in a week or ten days, and would tour the country in aid of the cause. Davitt's time here is limited, as he is under an engagement to appear at Dublin on Oct. 15. Both gentlemen left Chicago to-night for Mr. Egan's home in Nebraska.

And Sioux City Has Built It a Palace The Jubilee.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Oct. 3.—The corn palace jubilee, which will continue all the week, was formally opened this evening. The city is elaborately decorated, the materials used being exclusively corn and other products of the field, and there is a large attendance. The opening exercises occurred in the palace. Mayor Clelland made an address of welcome, and ex-Senator Van Wyck, of Nebraska, pronounced an oration before the great audience.

A Fatal Game of Ball.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Michael O'Connor, a youthful baseball enthusiast, confessed this morning that he was the slayer of his brother John, aged sixteen, who died last night with a fractured skull, the effect of being struck with a bat yesterday afternoon. The two brothers led rival sides in the game and so warm was the rivalry that a dispute over the umpire's decision resulted in a general fight, during which O'Connor received his death blow. Michael has not been arrested; the parents of the dead boy believing the affair to have been an accident.

They came to America as representatives of the Irish parliamentary party, to explain the condition of affairs at home, and to thank the American people for their support in the past, and to ask them to continue it.

Over forty members signed the constitution. The county fair begins tomorrow and bids fair to be a splendid success.

CORN IS KING.

A Schooner Foundered.

Attacked With Vertigo.

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 3.—Colonel F. M. Tuffs, city auditor, and one of the best known of St. Joseph's citizens, is at the point of death, having been attacked with vertigo in its worst form yesterday.

AN AUGUST TWILIGHT.

Now, while the evening mists above the ground Rise shoulder high, and spread with swift inflow steadily the twilight steals around,
Infoling all in the sweet zone of peace
One white star blinks beside the calm faced moon,
And one above the bar of silvery gray
Within the west, which, slowly narrowing, soon
Shows like a blink in the closed doors of day.
And, as for love of them, one passionate bird
Flours forth a passionate song so sad and sweet
From the near dewy brake. The leaves are stirred
With the faint pulsing airs that only beat.
And do not blow; while some sad dog's deep bay
Goes o'er the fields across the night away.

DEATH OF A MEMBER.

Brother Gardner Makes a Few Remarks Concerning the Deceased.

"It is my painful duty to announce another death among the members of this club," said Brother Gardner as the meeting opened. "Unperceived Watson, an honorary member residing at Griffin, Ga., and no more on earth. I have been notified by letter that he passed away a week ago. De steward will drop a red stool with the usual emblem of mourning, and if he decessed was behind on his dues he will be marked as such. I have been notified by letter that he passed away a week ago. De steward will drop a red stool with the usual emblem of mourning, and if he decessed was behind on his dues he will be marked as such. I have been notified by letter that he passed away a week ago. De steward will drop a red stool with the usual emblem of mourning, and if he decessed was behind on his dues he will be marked as such."

"Brother Gardner was powerful kind to his family, but at the same time he didn't lose sight of the fact that his three children were brought up in his wife's presence. He had a dollar on the table when he was buried about once a week and that dear show would wear out about so often. "Brother Gardner didn't expect too much of this world. If he traded mules unsight and unmean he went out to his stables in the morn'g prepared to see a corpse. If he put up a dollar on the table when he was buried he'd be older fellow had eighty-four chances to his sixteen. He realized that de winter brought chilblains and de summer mosquitoes, and he sought to put up wid loaf without complaint. "I shall pronounce no eulogy over his remains. While he was existing he lived in order to enjoy watermelon, green peas, 'possums and older luxuries of life, he know'd dat de sooner he died de longer he could rest Sunday mornings and de less wood he'd hev to cut to keep de cabin fish gone. It is needless to pass resolutions of sympathy for his wife. She diggers on out sympathy, while he at de same time she don't reckon on getting a cent of our money. It is needless to resolve dat our loss is Brother Gardner's gain. He took his chances. We don't know which way he went, and we probably nebbber shall."—Detroit Free Press.

Japanese Jurickishas.

And now let us take a sampan and go ashore. Landing at the junction of the foreign and native towns the first sight which presents itself to us is a row of about thirty or more jurickishas (man power carriages), the owners of which crowded around us at once and intimated that their vehicles were at our disposal. The jurickishas (originally the invention of an American) is the carriage of the country, and is used by all classes. It consists of a light body, similar to that of a baby carriage, with an adjustable top and a seat cushion on the seat under which is a receptacle for baggage. The body is frequently either finely lequered or neatly ornamented with brass. It is mounted on two light high wheels and attached to a pair of shafts which are connected at the ends by a cross piece. Stepping into one the owner lifted up the shafts and started off over the wide, smooth street at a rapid trot.

Many of these men can keep up a trot, with but an occasional short rest, that will carry them over thirty miles a day for several days, in succession; but we were informed that such of them as had steady employment in this business were generally short lived, being carried off at an early age by heart and lung troubles. In rainy weather the top is put up and a covering of oil silk drawn over the entire front. The jurickishas look very fine at night, when they all carry fancy colored Japanese lanterns. The men who draw them are old looking characters in their blue tight, loose cloaks, but with curious looking hats shaped like inverted punch bowls, but not nearly so much so as they must have been in the olden times—not so many years ago—when they were considered to be almost in full dress, with nothing on but a narrow loin cloth.—Cor. Baltimore Sun.

A Story of "Sherman's Bummers."

"Do you remember that cemetery?" said one man to another as a group sat together on the hotel piazza. "The other certainly did remember it. They were out foraging together—"Sherman's Bummers," these—and could find little. They were crossing a field near a house, when they came suddenly upon three or four headboards. They were new and bore inscriptions showing that they marked the graves of Georgia soldiers killed in battle. As they stood looking at the graves one of the foragers remarked to the other: "I say, what big fellows those must have been? These graves are ten feet long!" "It looks curious; I'm going to find out about these graves," was the comment of one, and the ready iron ramrod, the universal "trier" of the soldier, was thrust down into one of the graves where the coffin should have been; it struck something soft. "I've touched him, by gee! But he's buried mighty shallow. I'll try him again!"

The ramrod was thrust in more deeply and withdrawn. Its surface was examined. There came from it a smoky and pleasing odor. The explorer uttered but one word: "Bacon!" The grave was opened. It contained a long coffin shaped box full of the thin, delicately smoked bacon, concerning the quality of which Sherman's men became such connoisseurs. The two foragers carried off all they could, and informed others of the find. Within an hour or two the little cemetery had been horribly desecrated. There were no dead people in it, but it yielded up any quantity of bacon.—Chicago Tribune.
