Mr. Bert Walters and wife nee Cassie Sparks, are in the city visiting Mrs. Walters' parents. Mr. Walters arrived last evening, having been visiting relatives in Illinois; but his wife has been here some time. Mr. Walters is well known in Plattsmouth, and is now located in Garnet, Kansas, whither they will go in a few days.

Mr. J. C. Fisher, formerly well known in Plattsmouth as a druggist, and who recently sold out his store and went to his home in Iowa on a visit, returned to Plattsmouth last evening and went on to Omaha this morning, where he will engage in the dry goods business. Mr. Fisher has many warm friends here who wish him success in his new undertaking.

SECOND NIGHT

Of the First Annual Saengerfest of the Nebraska Saengerbund.

The Grand Concert an Elaborate Success

Last evening a large and enthusiastic audience gathered in the opera house to witness one of the grandest musical concerts ever produced in Plattsmouth. It being the first annual saengerfest of the Nebraska saengerbund, and the evening had been set apart especially for the concert, and at 8 o'clock everything was in trim for a grand musical treat.

The entertainment opened with an overture, "Poet and Peasant" by the B. & M. band, which was rendered in an excellent manner.

Second, was a grand chorus, "Der deutsche Baum," rendered by the Nebraska saengerbund, in full.

Third, a song, "What beams so bright," by the Plattsmouth glee club. Here an encore broke out from all the house and they were recalled and sang another song.

Fourth, a solo, "Arie aus dem Freischuetz," by Mrs. A. Weber, of Lincoln. The solo was rendered in a beautiful manner and amid loud applause and encore she reappeared and gave a selection in English.

Fifth, a song, "Jagers Lust," by the Teutonia mænnerchor, of Seward.

Sixth, a song, "In einem Kuehlein Grunde," by the Germania mænnerchor, of Lincoln.

Seventh, a song, "Beim Lieben zu Haus," by the Nebraska City Liederkranz.

Eighth, "Phylomela waltz," by the B. & M. band.

First, a song, "Das kirchlein," by the Columbus mænnerchor. The audience had, by this time, become thoroughly warmed up with the singing and the mænnerchor was encored, to which they responded with a second song in German.

Second, a solo, "Il Bacio," by Mrs. A. Weber. In this solo Mrs. Weber's voice was clear and strong and her trills were charming, and she responded to the encore with "The last rose of summer," which was sung beautifully.

Third, a song, "Auf den Bergen," by the Omaha mænnerchor.

Fourth, a song, "Mottette," by the Plattsmouth Liederkranz. They sang well and were encored for another selection.

Fifth, a song, "An den Sonnenschein," by the Grand Island Liederkranz. They were also encored.

Seventh and last, was "25 Battalion March," by the B. & M. band. The march was played in an excellent manner, and the boys did their city credit.

The entire entertainment was of two hours duration. The songs and music were excellent and everything went off smoothly. The time and ease which the singers kept showed care in training, and their voices were good. It is not necessary to say the Plattsmouth glee club did extraordinarily exquisitely well, for they were never known to sing any other way. Every body present seemed well pleased with the entertainment, and satisfied that they had spent the evening well.

To-night is the third and last of the three great days, and a grand ball is on the programme for this evening.

$10,000 BY WILL.

A Great Grandparent Dies in Germany.

Mr. John Gossage, who was appointed administrator of the Wm. Roth's estate is now in the city. (It will be remembered Mr. Roth died last spring in rather poor circumstances, having no money.)

Mr. Gossage, who is from Lincoln, informs the HERALD scribe that he has received word from Germany of the death of one of Mr. Roth's great grandparents, who left $10,000 to Roth, and he (Gossage) is here now to see about the man's property and family and is daily expecting a letter from the judge in Germany fully explaining the will etc.

As Mr. Roth is dead the money will fall to his children, through Mr. Gossage, but as only two of the children are grown and the youngest lacks eight of being of age, it will be eight years before the money can be received directly by the family.

Mr. Gossage says he will do all in his power to hasten the money to the use of the family as they are in need of it.

It appears that Mr. Roth was the only direct relative of his great grandparent, and he being dead makes the closest relative a great great grand-children.

PLAYING MESSENGER BOY.

How a Young Chap Managed to Hear a Famous Parliamentary Debate.

"I would like to have been in London on Justice day," said a prominent business man. "It would have been great fun to have studied the people who made up the tremendous crowds on the streets that day. I was in London on the day that the Gladstone ministry resigned, a year or two ago, and I had some odd experiences. I wanted very much to be present at the session of the house of commons, because every one believed there would be extraordinary excitement. I went to Mr. Waller, the American consul, and secured a letter to Mr. O'Connor, the consul, however, assuring me that the chances were against me. He thought that if I could get the letter into Mr. O'Connor's hands I would succeed, but he did not believe that I could get the letter to Mr. O'Connor."

"I went to the parliament house to find a great crowd of prominent and distinguished people endeavoring to gain admission. The difficulty I soon discovered was, to have the three or four lines of policemen give any attention to the letters carried by persons who presented them. I noticed, however, that messengers and telegraph boys went through the lines without being questioned or detained. I am not a very large man, and I at once determined to go through the three lines of policemen in the character of a messenger. I buttoned my coat, put my hat on the back of my head, ran around until I got into the name of taking to Mr. O'Connor the letter in my hand made a dash for the door. To the first policeman who attempted to check me I showed the letter addressed to Mr. O'Connor and made vehement and hurried explanation to the effect that the letter must be in Mr. O'Connor's hands before the session opened."

"He hustled me along, the next line and the next man hustled me to the next, and I went through the door pushed forward by the man who stood on guard. Once inside I asked for Mr. O'Connor, presented my letter, explained how I got in, and he, laughing pleasantly over the incident, gave me a good seat, and I heard the famous debate to great advantage. I was one of the few Americans who gained admission that day to the house of commons, and I did it by playing messenger boy. On adjournment I fell back into my old part because I had noticed that each one of the members had written his name on a card and placed it in the seat he occupied, and it occurred to me that these would be interesting as autographs of the distinguished members. I gathered up a score or more of them, and they make a very curious collection.—Chicago Inter-Ocean "Curlstone Crayons."

An Actress' Wonderful Manner. Ellen Terry owes her fetching qualities to her wonderful manner. I never saw her face in repose but once in my life. It startled me. The light died out, and a dead, expressionless mask seemed to spread itself over her features. There was a reason for it, too. A luncheon of six covers was going on, and one of the guests had written a play that he was anxious to hear Miss Terry read. He was a veritable crank on the subject, though otherwise a genial and pleasant man, a famous yachtsman and a high light in clubland. Miss Terry did not want to hear about the play, nor did the rest of us. There was a vast amount of fencing and parrying every time the amateur dramatist lugged in his hobby by its long and asinine ears, but as the luncheon progressed we grew frayed, rattled and fatigued. I had given up the light, and was leaning back in my chair watching the light and shade in Ellen Terry's face, when there came a sudden silence, as sometimes occurs after a lot of people have been talking. It was fatal. Two or three of us started forward mechanically in a frenzied effort to fill the void, but we were too late. The dramatist seized his opportunity to express us with impunity, and he held the fort against all comers for a long and dreary period. When he was about half through with a detailed description of the heroine's emotions in a certain situation I said warmly: "That's the best climax for a last act that I ever heard; it reminds me—"

"Oh, but that's only the opening scene of the first act," he said cheerfully and eagerly, "and there are six acts in all."

I quit at that point, but glanced at Miss Terry as I went back into the comfortable recesses of my chair. The life went out of her face, and I saw it as it was in a bald physical sense. The mouth looked large, the nose short and the eyes dull. It was only for a moment. During the rest of the ordeal she was as bright and thoroughly entertained a woman as any man could desire for a listener, to all outward appearances, though she was unquestionably bored prodigiously.—Blakely-Hall in The Argonaut.

MEN WITH MARVELOUS MEMORIES.

People Whose Brains Never Forget—Phenomenal Powers of Recollection.

Parsons, the Greek scholar, could repeat Milton's "Paradise Lost" backwards.

A monk who resided in Moscow in the Fifteenth century could repeat the whole of the New Testament.

George III of England, though deficient in education, never forgot a name once heard or a face once seen.

It is said of Themistocles that he could call by their names the people of Athens, which city then numbered 20,000 inhabitants.

It has been written of the Bourbons that they never forgot a man's name nor his face, and this has been sometimes considered as a true sign of their royal natures.

A school teacher of London, whose name was Dawson, possessed a remarkable memory. He could repeat the book of Job and the Psalms, and on a wager of £200 he repeated, without the aid of a book, Spenser's "Faerie Queene," a poem of nearly 4,000 stanzas of nine lines each.

Houdin was once invited with his son to a gentleman's house to give a private seance, and as they went up stairs they passed the library door, which was partially open. In that single moment young Charles Houdin read all the names of twelve volumes and recognized the position of two books.

Boone, the blind negro pianist, who has given performances through several states, has a most wonderful memory in connection with his art. From one hearing it he was able to play Liszt's celebrated "Hungarian Rhapsody" without missing a note. Blind Tom also performed similar feats.

Mozart, when only 12 years old, played a new opera from one hearing, which had been composed expressly to test his skill. A writer, referring to this incident, says: "He not only reproduced the opera from memory—which was a very difficult piece—without missing a single note, but on a second playing threw in variations in such a manner that all who heard him were speechless with astonishment."

McKenzie tells us a most interesting story about Carolan, a blind Irish harper and composer, who once challenged a famous Italian violinist to a trial of skill. The Italian played the fifth concerto of Vivaldi on his violin; then, to the astonishment of all present, Carolan, who had never before heard the concerto, took his harp and played it through from beginning to end without missing a single note.

The Quaker Medicine Company Respectfully ask some very plain questions: Can Consumption be cured or even be benefited? Can a Cold be cured or even stopped? Can you expect to be even relieved by any medicine or physician?—No you cannot, if you simply change the temperature of your body three or four times a day—for every change you add to your cold—Mothers, your children's health and your future happiness demands of you consistent love.
