A large number of the Plattsmouth young folks have arranged to attend a good old fashioned spelling school at the Jean school house to-night. A grand time is anticipated.

The wives of the members of the B. of L. F. will give a dance and supper at Fitzgerald's hall tonight for the benefit of the B. of L. F., who are preparing to give a grand ball Nov. 23rd. We are informed the admission fee will be 15c, and floor tickets $1.

The Allison Knee comedy company which returned yesterday from a trip to Louisville and Cedar Creek, report a very successful trip. In their exhibition at Louisville Wednesday night, although Mr. Knee announced the cutting of the man as not real, one old gentleman fainted and several ladies left the hall, it was so life-like. Mr. Knee intends to drill his company here for several weeks and then go upon the road again.

Oneal-Ellinwood.
A pleasant event occurred the 5th of this month at Newton, Kan. It was the marriage of Rev. Earnest Oneal, who is an estimable young minister, and somewhat acquainted in Plattsmouth, and Miss Grace Ellinwood, of Newton, Kan., at the home of the bride. The bride and groom are at present residing in Evenston, Ill.; and have the good wishes of their many friends.

A Monster Train.
No. 1 came in a few minutes late this morning but with seventeen cars. This was a monster but the six last cars were new ones, and carried no passengers and were switched off at the depot, but two sleepers added which left thirteen loaded cars. There was an excursion on board for California which occupied several coaches and the train was full from one end to the other.

Sol Smith Russell at the Opera House.
Last night Sol Smith Russell appeared at the opera house in the comical play "Bewitched," assisted by a company of able supporters. Mr. Russell's comical songs and actions were executed almost to perfection, and all present seemed inclined to praise him.

There was a fair audience present, and on account of the failure of the gas the house was lighted with lamps placed in all convenient places.

The City in Darkness.
Last evening just before dark, when the merchants began to light up their stores, it was discovered that barely enough gas to burn escaped from the burners, and as a consequence the streets were left dark and main street seemed like Sunday night, except for the people there. Several of the merchants immediately went over to the gas works to inquire the cause of the failure of the gas supply, but the information was very meager, as the exact cause could not be ascertained by Mr. Roth, who has charge of the works in Mr. Johns' absence. The only fact that could be ascertained was that something was wrong with the gas generator and the gas was escaping about as fast as made. Mr. Roth and his assistant were unable to locate or remedy the cause last night and the merchants had to substitute lamps and candles which gave the stores the appearance of away-out-in-the-country establishments. But the greatest inconvenience was at the opera house where a large audience was gathering to hear Sol Smith Russell and company. At first the gas was lighted but the light was very low and the report started that there would be no entertainment, but the opera house managers promptly hunted up a dozen or so of lamps and placed them along for foot lights and distributed them over the house, which, although they looked very odd, gave abundant light and the play went off very nicely.

Mr. Johns, who has charge of the gas plant here and understands it, is at present away establishing one some place in Missouri, but is expected back in a few days. During to-day the men at the works have been investigating the trouble and located it in the drip boxes. These were cleaned out and things were working well at 2 o'clock and a HERALD reporter was assured all would be well to-night.

A Strange Lake in Austria.

At Zirknitz in the Austrian Alps there is an intermittent lake that is a basin, which at one season of the year is filled with water, at another is dried up and cultivated by the farmers of the neighborhood. The imperial farmer, William Putick, has just examined the construction of that basin and found in one part of it an immense cave called Karloven, which, when the surface of the water in the basin has reached a certain height, begins sucking up the water until the basin is empty.

This cave leads to a long series of underground lakes, all connected with one another by a continuous current. Putick navigated the first five of them. Immense fields of sand and gravel accumulate, and alternately stop the current or are carried off by it. The roof of the cave in which this system of waters is located at many places comes very low, almost touching the water, and in such places the moving gravel beds frequently close the passage and cause the waters to rise in the higher cave. Putick, with three companions, was in one of the lakes when the entrance was suddenly closed by a mass of rubbish tumbling down from the roof. For more than eight hours they worked as hard as they could until they succeeded in opening a passage by the side of the main entrance, which was happily still found dry, and they were enabled to reach the surface unharmed. But their boat and tools were left behind, and will be recovered again after the water shall have subsided.—Chicago News.

A Beautiful Invitation.

Of the invitations to visit various cities and states extended to the president probably the most unique came from the people of Jacksonville, Fla. It is incased between lids of "curly pine," native to that state. The lids are held together by hinges with backs made of alligator skin, and are nine inches wide, fifteen in length, three-eighths of an inch thick. They are highly polished, and on the outside is painted a bunch of magnolias in full bloom. The inclosure is five pages of Bristol board, upon which the invitation is written, as well as the signatures of the committee delegated to present it. These pages are also uniquely ornamented with India ink sketches of scenes and of the flora of the state. There are pictures of the Cherokee rose, a variety native only to Florida, of sand dunes surrounded with cabbage palmetto, with sea ousds and sea shells, white cranberries, gray Spanish moss, and sketches from nature on the St. John's river, as well as on the shores of the beautiful and romantic Lake St. George, all blended in harmonious and artistic arrangement. At the top of one of the pages there is a finely drawn scene or picture of a genuine Florida "Cracker" driving his team to market through the pines. He has the regular backwoods cart, drawn by a genuine Florida mule, which he bestrides, his long legs reaching nearly to the ground.—Philadelphia Press.

Phil Armour and the Pastor.

A clergyman, who is pastor of a small church somewhere in the outlying sections of the city, went to him one day asking for a contribution for a poor girl who, he said, was sick and suffering for the necessities of life. She was so destitute that she had been unable to buy clothing for her new born babe, and was even unable to buy the medicine which a kind hearted doctor had prescribed. Mr. Armour gave him $25 and sent him on his way rejoicing, but was much surprised a few hours later when the clergyman returned and handed him his money, saying that he had found, to his regret, that the child had been born out of wedlock, and the case was, therefore, unworthy of his charity. Mr. Armour was at first surprised, and then nearly lost his temper. He called one of his clerks and told him to see that the clergyman left his office and never returned. He then sent to his own house and directed that everything which a woman in this poor woman's condition needed should be sent her at once, and that the supply should be continued until she was able to look out for herself. My informant says that Mrs. Armour took the case in hand and looked after it until no further assistance was needed.—Chicago Mail.

American Crosses in a Castle.

Beaufort Castle, which was recently rented by Mr. William K. Vanderbilt for him for a term of five years. The lease includes the adjoining forest and a salmon stream which runs through the property. The family expect to occupy the place during the fall and early winter of each year, and are within driving distance of Bel Macaan, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, and not very far from the Winans estate.

The castle, which is 300 feet long and 80 feet wide, stands on a gentle eminence on the south bank of the river Blany, and is built in the Scottish baronial style with turrets and gables, mullioned windows and many chimneys, and is of old red sandstone from the Redburn quarry, which is near by. The house is beautifully furnished throughout with both modern and old furniture, and has extensive stables and greenhouses. The stables will accommodate 100 horses, and at present Mr. Vanderbilt has only a stud of fifteen.

His steam yacht Alva is docked and will not be afloat again until after Christmas, when it will be gotten ready for the Mediterranean.—New York Journal.

A Novel "Rogues' Gallery."

Under the Bertillon system the identification of a prisoner depends on a knowledge of the following indications:

1. The length and width of the head.
 2. The length of the left middle and little fingers.
 3. The length of the left foot.
 4. The length of the left forearm.
 5. The length of the right ear.
 6. The height of the figure.
 7. The measurement of the outstretched arms.
 8. The measurement of the trunk from the top of the head to the bench, when a person is seated.
- To these measurements must be added the description of the scars and peculiar marks that almost every person exhibits; the notation of the color of the hair, beard and eyes; the shape and size of the nose, and profile and front view photographs of the face. A description embracing all these details is next to invaluable.—New York Mail and Express.

Boring for Oil, Got a Flood.

LINCOLN, Ill., Oct. 20.—For some time past a company from Ohio has been boring for gas in this city. This morning at a depth of 520 feet, the drill struck a strong vein of water which is now boiling over the curbing and threatens to inundate all the country round about. The roaring sounds like the rumble of a train.

Couldn't Fool the Little Girl.

[Omaha World.]
Omaha Mamma—Now, dear, you must invite one of your little friends in to share your candy.
Little Dot—I guess I'll invite Lucy.
"Well, that will be nice."
"Yes, candy makes her tooth ache and she never eats much."

The Difference.

Omaha teacher—"Yes, my children, remember there is no human love equal to a mother's love."
Little girl—"Womens love their children better than their husbands, don't they?"
"Very often."
"Yes indeed. When we gets the hicoughs mamma gets sorry and tries to cure 'em, but when papa gets the hicoughs she gets mad."
