BORROWED AND STOLEN.
A Union Labor Ticket.
Norfolk, Neb., Oct. 22.—The union labor party held a poorly attended convention at Battle Creek today and nominated a ticket, making the fourth ticket now in the field in Madison county.

The Anarchist Case.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The United States supreme court has decided to hear further arguments upon the application for a writ of error in the case of the condemned Chicago anarchists, and has set the hearing for Thursday next, at noon. The court has also decided to allow the state of Illinois to appear in these proceedings, and has notified Attorney General Hunt to be present and make an argument in behalf of the state, in opposition to the petition for a writ of error. Further orders in the case will be made when the court reconvenes on Monday.

The Lincoln Bronze Statue Unveiled.
CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 22.—The magnificent statue of Abraham Lincoln in bronze, donated to Chicago by Eli Bates, was formally unveiled at Lincoln park this afternoon with appropriate ceremonies in the presence of many people. The act of unveiling was performed by "Little Al" Lincoln, the son of the Hon. Robert Lincoln, and grandson of the great emancipator. An address was made by Mayor Rice and an elegant oration delivered by the Hon. Leonard Sweet, for many years the friend and law partner of Lincoln. The statue is the work of St. Gaudens and cost $30,000.

ON THE WAR PATH.
Crows Trying to Get Up Trouble—Troops Sent to Quell It.
Forty Kansas Militia, Oct. 22.—Troop A, Seventh cavalry, and company E, Fifth infantry, left Saturday morning for Cheyenne agency. They took thirty days rations and 300 rounds of ammunition per man. The companies of the Fifth infantry leave tonight for Custer station by rail, and go thence overland to Fort Custer and Crow agency. The uprising among the Crows is unusual, as they have not been at war with the whites for a number of years. Swordsman, leader of the rebels, is an ugly buck, and is desirous of becoming a great warrior. Latest accounts say he has now 500 warriors at his back. The sending of troops to Cheyenne agency is more to prevent consolidation with the Crows than any expected outbreak. In fact these Cheyennes, who number nearly 600, are friendly, would make good soldiers, and are anxious to be led against the Crows. Military movements are in good hands, and no mistake will be made.

MARRIED WITH RE REASONS.
A Young Wife, for No Good Reason, Commits Suicide.
McCook, Neb., Oct. 22.—Mrs. Fannie Dailley committed suicide last night about 10 o'clock, at the residence of her husband in this place, by means of a thirty-gauge calibre revolver, placing the muzzle to her right temple. The ball passed through her head in a downward direction, lodging behind and below the left ear. Mrs. Dailley is a locomotive fireman on the B. & O., and had, about 8 o'clock in the evening, been summoned to go on an extra run. Mrs. Dailley prepared a lunch for him, and he was at the depot waiting the time to depart when the sad news of his wife's death reached him, whereupon he returned home almost frantic with grief. Shortly after Mrs. Dailley left his house to go on his trip the report of a pistol was heard in Mrs. Dailley's room by James Teasdale and Frederick Yarnick, who were in an adjoining room. They immediately entered her room and found her lying lifeless on the floor. She left a letter addressed to her husband, in which she told him that she did not think that she was the proper person to make him happy, and that in taking her own life she had done for him. The deceased was 19 years of age and had been married about three weeks. Her married life was very pleasant and agreeable. The only cause assigned is mental aberration.

Lumber Rates Reduced.
St. Paul, Oct. 23.—Commencing Nov. 1 the lumber rates from Chicago to Council Bluffs and Omaha will be reduced from 25 to 18 cents and consiguently rates from all other eastern points will also be reduced leaving the rate from St. Paul to Omaha 30 cents. To all Missouri points the rates from St. Paul are 2 cents lower than to Omaha.

The Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Omaha announced the reduction to take effect Nov 1.

Of For Washington.
Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—Attorney General Hunt received notice yesterday of the action of the United States supreme court in the anarchist case and left for Washington, accompanied by the assistant attorney general.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—In response to a telegram from Attorney General Garland, States Attorney Grinnell left for Washington this evening, taking with him the papers in the anarchist case which he used in presenting them before the supreme court of the state.

THE CANARY.
A day in June, of light, of fragrant rare,
A bird brought to a home, a bird as fair
As any bird, as sometimes women are.
Loud sings the little canary in its cage.

A day in June again, but greater bliss
Overstays may be, mayhap in heaven, than this,
That takes on a baby's face, a mother's kiss.
Loud sings the little canary in its cage.

A woman, fair and young and pale, at rest,
A dead babe laid on the mother's breast,
A tender murmur, "all is for the best."
Loud sings the little canary in its cage.

THE WHITE ELEPHANT.
All White Animals Held in Reverence by the Siamese—A King's Grief.
Miss Dows at one time attended the capture and reception in Bangkok of a white elephant. Her people, being devout Buddhists, believe in metaphysics. The soul of each successive Buddha in its zoological migrations comes in turn the form of white animals of a certain class—particularly addressed to the constantly white animals, as the swan, the stork, the white sparrow, the dove, the monkey and the elephant, all peculiar to Siam. In all the obscurity of their priests about the subject one thing is agreed—that the forms of these noble and pure animals are reserved for the souls of the good and great, who find in them redemption from the base animal life. All white animals are held in reverence, especially the white elephant, which is believed to be animated with the spirit of some king or hero. This white elephant, which is said to be captured in the Siamese country, or in Northern Siam, the king is appraised of the fact; the king, who finds the elephant is made to kneel and the elephant is deposed by a female from the jungle, led into a bamboo stockade, caught by ropes about his legs, and soon subdued. The march to the royal stable begins, and ten or twelve miles a day are traveled, which is the average elephant speed. He is brought to the Manan, fed with sweetmeats, and under a royal pavilion, loaded with golden chains, and enters Bangkok in triumph. It is a time for feasting and a week of holidays.

A magnificent white elephant was captured in 1838. The nation was wild with joy. The elephant, whose body might have contained Gamblers' and itself, suddenly died, and the "sacred king," who knew English well and could have discussed St. Paul's writings to the delight and edification of Matthew Arnold—the scientific king, who calculated with accuracy the great total solar eclipse of 1885, spent $100,000 on the scientific expedition to observe it, and even lost his life from exposure in the malarious jungle, dying like a Siamese, called by the English "the King of the jungle," and its insupportable weight, under the tutelage of American missionaries, finds the greatest progress of all oriental monarchs in his ideas of government, commerce and even religion; never hesitating to express his respect for the fundamental principles of Christianity, but cutting short his progress in the name of the Buddha, who he regarded as the more recent and approved part of the Bible, with the sentimental statement that "I hate the Bible mostly"—the king and high priest of Siam went at the death of his new white elephant.

Furnishing Compressed Air.
A company in Birmingham, England, are constructing a large central plant for furnishing compressed air through mains to the owners of small engines. Trials already made are said to have shown that the cost to construct will be considerably less than the cost of steam made on the premises. Besides doing away with the dirt and heat from the coal and the saving of room, the use of compressed air is said to furnish excellent means of ventilation. An excellent feature of the charter of this company is a clause compelling them to divide all profits over 10 per cent. with the consumers.—Public Opinion.

What is Fame?
"Der ain't no use tryin' a square snake in discher country," said a tough looking young man.
"Wha'de do matter, pleace onto you again?"
"Now, But I und'stan Jimmy de Bruiser's got de best as de p'ertest profit in de road de country as I have any body knows I stand light in de profession dat he does."

A Remedy for Diphteria.
Very considerable interest has been excited in foreign medical circles by M. Broude's successful treatment of diphteria by the use of benzoate of sodium. He asserts that of 20 consecutive cases he has not lost a single one, and, though admitting the possibility of a mistaken diagnosis in some instances, yet, even excluding 50 per cent. on this account, there remain 100 cases without a death. His method is to have the patient take, every hour, a tablespoonful of a solution of benzoate of sodium fifteen grains to the ounce, and the same time one-sixth of a grain of soluble calcium in syrup or granule; in addition to this the throat is thoroughly sprayed every half hour with the benzoate, this being done unfailingly at the regular intervals, day and night, with no other local treatment whatever. No attempt is made to discharge the false membrane. The nourishment consists of beef juice, tender meat, milk, etc., but bread and all other articles which may cause irritation of the throat are forbidden.—New York Tribune.

A Great Favor Granted.
Mrs. Breezy to daughter.—Did you tell young Mr. Walle, dear, that you would correspond with him on his return to Boston?
Miss Breezy.—Yes, mamma, he has been so polite to me while in Chicago, you know, and seemed so sincerely in earnest when he asked me if he might not hear from me occasionally, that what could I say, mamma, but "yes" he go, Gallagher! —New York Sun.

FAIR AMERICA ABROAD.

How an American Lady Did Herself of a Persecuting Parisian's Attention.

From Paris comes the story of a fair American who succeeded in ridding herself of a petty persecutor. She is a daily attendant at one of the ateliers of the grand boulevards. Her longings are some distance up the Champs Elysees, but being abundantly able to protect herself, she calls upon no one to escort her to and from her work, and often prefers to do the journey on foot rather than to take one of the omnibuses going in her direction. After a while, however, she became conscious that a certain young man, always at the same spot, overtook her and dogged her footsteps until she reached the door of her apartments. She knew enough of Paris customs not to blame the young man individually very much, as she is aware that somehow the whole race is imbued with the idea that one of its chief duties, as the superior half of humanity, is to be polite and gallant to every unprotected female; and even her small experience has convinced her of the truly grand way in which every Frenchman tries to do his duty. But in this particular case she decided that the young man's good intentions must be discarded. Especially when after a few days of silent following he attempted to address her, she made up her mind that stringent measures must be used. Her mind, a half based dream of the strong New England type, was informed of the condition of affairs, and was made acquainted with her niece's proposed tactics.

The day after their council of war the young woman was overtaken as usual by her admirer. He again who spoke soft words in her ear, and, as she seemed to smile somewhat favorable on him, he kindly and hospitably invited her to breakfast. She expressed diffidence in accepting hospitality from an utter stranger, and objected that breakfast was awaiting her at her own apartment. She, however, presumed that enough would be served for two, and if Monsieur would excuse what defects there might be, she would be very glad of his company during her solitary meal. The young man jumped with eagerness at her proposition, and walked gaily by her side. Whatever apprehension the young girl may have had as to the risk of failure was not apparent in her manner, and she succeeded in confining the talk to pleasant generalities until her apartment was reached. There the young man received his first check when the door was thrown open and disclosed the suitable proportions of the stern duchessa. He had, however, gone too far to turn back, and he allowed himself to be ushered inside, and the door to be closed upon him.

The aunt and the niece were too well schooled in the rules of politeness to carry on their conversation before the Frenchman in anything but French, so he was able to understand every word they said. "My aunt," explained the young woman to her niece, "this poor fellow is hungry, and I told him I thought we could find him something to eat."
"Oh, certainly," answered the kindhearted aunt, "I hope we need never refuse the demands of the needy. Marie," she called out to the trim maid, who immediately appeared, "take this man to the kitchen and tell the cook to give him some bread and meat."

The unhappy Frenchman, in spite of his protests and expectations, was shown through the door into the kitchen, where he was able to escape by the servant's stairway. The young American girl has since seen or heard nothing from her harmless but annoying persecutor.—New York Sun.

Some Queer German Clubs.
Very curious are some of these clubs, though all breathe a spirit we cannot but comment and might be pardoned for envying. One very curious club is called "The Humiliated Gamberians," the jolly disciples of the god of beer. It has its own club room with a grandly hospitable table around which the members sit. Incessant in a glass and lung upon the wall is a large silver tankard to be filled by every member before taking policy or presented with a girl baby by his wife. To be the father of a boy costs a member the price of a keg of beer for the club. The members are a mixed company of capitalists and wage workers, who meet once a week and on all extraordinary occasions of their own devising. They tell stories, bring the women, and dance, sing and drink beer.

Another notable east side organization is the Polish Harmonic club, formed of men and women from the Polish vineyard country. It will be "savage time" in a few weeks, and "savage time" is their time for a grand festival transplanted from the old country. The proceeds of the year are then put into a fund for this festival. At the same time, the grapes have all been gathered for the wine press.—two important reasons for rejoicing, they think. A grand ball is given. They come to it from far and near. Some are retired men of wealth, some are mechanics, some are laborers, some are keepers, some are men of letters, some are all and all on this festive night. While the ball is going on, the grapes are put into a shooting gallery garnished with paper roses, and these women and these men who desire to do so shoot to see which shall be crowned, the best marksman as queen and the best marksman as king—such to reign the ensuing twelve months. I have several times attended this affair, and have seen the lowest workman's wife crowned queen and deferred to as a sovereign by women in diamonds and silk.—Providence Journal.
