PERSONAL.

—M. D. Polk went to Greenwood to-day.

—Sheriff Eikenbary was in Greenwood to-day.

—Mrs. Dr. Livingston and daughter Anna went up to Omaha to-day.

—Gen. Geo. Smith and family, of Omaha, were in the city yesterday.

—Judge Chapman returned to Lincoln this morning where he is holding court.

—Miss Ella Gabler, visited in the city yesterday with the Misses Weck-buch.

—Geo. Mann went to Omaha this morning where he expects to take employment.

—Judge Cooley, of Omaha, was in the city Saturday and Sunday and returned home last evening.

—Mrs. Moore, of Burlington, Iowa, who has been visiting friends here for the past three weeks, left for her home this morning.

—Will Sampson, who has been located at Lincoln in the B. & M. paint department for some time has been transferred to Beaver City to touch up some buildings there.

—Rev. W. G. Miller, D. D., presiding elder of the Lincoln district, occupied the M. E. pulpit last evening, delivering an able address. He left this morning for Lincoln.

—Council meeting tonight.

—The confectioner, Mr. Kranhse, was in Omaha to-day.

—We are now prepared to print wedding invitations on short notice.

—Invitations to weddings and parties a specialty at the HERALD office.

—The thermometer registered 24° above at 7 o'clock this morning.

—Call at the HERALD office and see our fine line of wedding invitations.

—A license to wed was to-day granted to Max Babl and Miss Viktoria Welser.

—J. G. Royal has purchased R. B. Windham's handsome cottage in South Park.

—The Carruth canning company shipped 540 cases of their canned beans to Chicago to-day.

—We have just received a fine assortment of dance and ball programmes. Call and get our prices.

—A sidewalk located on the east side of 6th street, extending from Oak street south to the alley, is the source of considerable complaint.

—Another horse was stolen last night at Louisville, this time the looser is Rev. C. H. Gilmore, and Sheriff Eikenbary left this morning, to investigate it and get on the track of the thief.

—The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church will meet at the home of Mrs. Ballinger, on 6th street between Vine and Oak, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. A good attendance is desired.

—Reserved seat tickets for "Evangeline" next Friday, will go on sale tomorrow morning at J. P. Young's, and the following is the scale of prices: First three rows in parquet $1.25; balance reserved seats, $1.00; general admission, 75c; gallery, 50c; children, 25c.

—In the language of the second reader: Today has been very cold and chill which makes it pleasant to sit by the fireside, and the sun shone a cold shine all day and the slick ice formed in the shade. The school boy ran with his cap on, and the merchant had a brisk sale of winter goods. The frosty air makes it well to be out.

—W. W. Tilton's Burlesque Company of over 40 people will appear here on Friday evening at the opera house, in the "Beautiful Evangeline," which has undergone so many marked improvements this season. As now presented it is materially different from the original production. The present company is made up of such eminent artists as Misses Annie Boyd, Alice Butler, Messrs. Geo. K. Fortescue, James L. Moffitt and others. As a whole the present company is said to be a much better one than has ever before been seen in the play here. The music was composed expressly for "Evangeline," by Mr. Edward J. Rice, words by Mr. J. Cheever Goodwin. One of the most amusing features is that of the "Dancing Heifer." This unique characterization has been the stepping stone to fame and fortune for many of the most famous comedians of the present day—notably, Henry S. Dixey, Richard Golden, etc. During the evening Miss Boyd sings Fay Templeton's great song, "I like it, I do," and is usually encored until her stock of verses are exhausted. The beautiful Amazon March led by Miss Hindie Harrison is received nightly with tumultuous applause.

Hogs Must Go.
Editor HERALD:—During the past summer a large majority of the people of this city have desired and by personal effort and newspaper articles endeavored to induce the law-making powers of the city to abate that terrible nuisance, so annoying to every person of taste and refinement, to say nothing of the annoyance and damage done to the poor man's garden,—we mean the allowing of stock running at large within the city. The pressure was brought to bear so heavily that the council were compelled to pass an ordinance to restrain stock from running at large within the city limits, hoping and believing that it would be enforced, but the mayor appointed a man that done his duty faithfully and soon rid the city of stock. The opponents of the ordinance not willing to put themselves on record in favor of repeal, concluded to break down the effect of the ordinance by refusing to support the pound master, and thereby compelling him to resign, and no man is willing to take the position unless he is sustained as he should be by the mayor and council, and to-day the streets are full of hogs, cattle and horses.

I would like to see an ordinance passed and enforced such as was passed and enforced some years ago when Pottenger was mayor and Dr. Geo. Black was in the council, it was called the "Self Sharpener" in which the marshal was authorized to sell hogs to the highest bidder, the buyer to take them as they run. It was said that Pottenger and Black got up the ordinance because they were too lazy to scratch where the fleas bit them. However that may be, the town was soon rid of hogs, and it is a note-worthy fact that the millions of fleas that went with them have never returned, but the hogs have.

It is a shame and a disgrace that a city having seven or eight thousand inhabitants, will permit it to become a hog yard and stock pasture.

Gentlemen of the council, brace up; have some style about you; put away your selfishness; put your stick in pen or pasture or sell them to some one that will do so.

You compel lot owners to put down sidewalks and keep them in repair and then allow stock to run over them and break them down, and some person falls over it and breaks his arm and a pettifogging lawyer goes into court and makes the city pay a thousand or more damages of which the pettifogger pockets one-half.

Come gentlemen of the council, in severing and paving the streets don't forget to abate one of the worst nuisances of this or any other city.

Also the best violin "E" strings in the market, each string warranted to stand concert pitch, or money refunded. Give Phil a call if you want any thing in the musical line, sheet music or musical books.

—Charles Selby, the minor who was unable to give bail and was confined in the county jail as a witness in the case of the hog thieves, who escaped several weeks ago, was discharged this morning by Judge Russell on his recognizance to appear at the trial if the parties were captured. He appeared before the judge Saturday with a writ of habeas corpus, which obtained his discharge.

FIRE WILL NOT BURN IT.
A Valuable Invention Which Prevents Lace Curtains from Taking Fire.
"Look out, that curtain will surely take fire."
A gas jet was burning in close proximity to a lace curtain in the rear end of a downtown lace importing store.
"I'm not worried about it," replied the merchant to a reporter who had called his attention to the circumstance.
"You are not the first man that light has frightened."
"Why don't you turn the light-out, then, or move the curtain?"
"Because there is really no danger."
"You are taking great chances."
"You wouldn't think so if you knew what that curtain is made of. It is a new French invention that has been put on the American market recently and I am the agent. The lace is dipped in a solution which makes it incombustible. Experiments are now being made to determine whether dyed goods can be so and cotton fabrics can be treated in that way."
"What is the preparation?"
"I can't tell you exactly, but there are sulphate of ammonia, carbonate of ammonia, boric acid, borax and starch in it. The goods are dipped in this while it is boiling hot and become thoroughly impregnated with it. Then they are dried and ironed as ordinary starched fabrics."
"A great invention, truly."
"Indeed it is. And if it can be used on all goods there is no telling how many fires may be avoided. If curtains, carpets, bedclothes and garments were incombustible many lives would be saved."
"Do you think it will ever be perfected?"
"I can't say; but I do know that paper can be treated that way, and if dyed goods can be it will not be long before they are, for no money is being spared in making the experiments."—New York Mail and Express.

An Absurd Bird.
Kiwi-kiwi is the creature's real name, but scientific men call it apteryx, which is a Greek word meaning wingless, because, though a bird, it has no wings. If not only has no wings, but it has no tail—not even so much as an apology for one. And, as if that were not enough, it has no feathers worthy of the name. Its quills are covered with soft down for about one-third of their length, and then are fringed with hairlike wools out to the ends, which are sharply pointed. It is only as large as a common domestic fowl, but it has much stronger and stouter legs and longer feet.

When it sleeps in the daytime—for naturally it is odd enough to choose the wrong time for sleeping—it rests its long bill on the ground, and so makes itself look like a strange sort of three legged stool. Most other birds use their beaks or their wings or their spurs to fight with, but it would be foolish to expect any such natural proceeding from the kiwi; and, in fact, its plan of fighting is to kick. It is very fond of earth worms, and one of its ways of procuring them is worthy of so odd a bird. It thumps the earth with its big feet and if there are any worms in the vicinity, up they come to discover what is the matter.

It is a cousin to the ostrich, and though its plumage has no such value for us as its large relative's has, it is very highly valued by the natives of New Zealand. The kiwi has a very tough skin, which, when it is properly dressed, makes a good leather.—St. Nicholas.

A Big Bar of Bullion.
The second largest bar of bullion ever melted in the United States assay office in Helena was handled the other day by Metz Meyerson. It came from the Jay Gould mine, weighed about 2,500 ounces, was a little over 500 fine in gold and was worth about $27,000. The gas furnaces were not nearly large enough to handle it, and one of the great coke furnaces, now seldom used, was heated up. When it was thoroughly reduced to a liquid, molten mass, a set of grippers was attached to the melting pot, and by the aid of chains and pulleys it was lifted out of the bed of burning coke and charcoal and dumped into a mold. When it had changed from a liquid into a solid bar, the red hot bar it was immersed in water until it had sufficiently cooled to be handled. The operation, which included several interesting features other than those detailed, was intently watched by a small party of visitors, who were much interested in seeing $27,000 changed from a solid to a liquid form and then to a solid again. The only larger bar ever handled in the office was one of about 3,300 ounces, but several have been melted of larger value. Since Jan. 1 the office has received about 1,000 deposits, many more than for the corresponding period of last year, and of considerably larger aggregate value.—Helena Independent.

Tardy Legislation.
At last the game butchers of the great west have stopped killing buffalo. The buffalo are all dead! The time has now arrived for the territories to enact stringent laws against the killing of these animals, and I am pleased to see that the Montana legislature has just rushed through a bill to that effect—only ten years behind its time! Next year, when the last buffalo of the eighty-head still alive in the Panhandle of Texas is hunted down and killed, it will be time for the Lone Star state to frame a bill for his protection; but its final passage can hardly be expected until 1897.

While the territories are passing laws against the killing of buffalo, they ought also, by all means, to make the killing of mastodons between Aug. 15 and Dec. 1, punishable by a fine or imprisonment. They should also pass laws against the shipping of mastodon carcasses out of their respective territorial limits.—The Cosmopolitan.

Vanished Like a Dream.
A writer in the Nineteenth Century mentions the case of a man who, while addicted to the morphine habit, fell in love with a girl. With a view to marrying her, he placed himself under medical treatment for the habit, but found when restored to health that his love had vanished so that he did not at all care for the girl. Whether he relapsed and then married his dream love is not stated.
