—Rices Beautiful Evangeline was presented at the opera house to a fair audience. The performance was good and was appreciated by those present. The costumes and scenery were elegant. A better entertainment of the kind has never appeared here.

—Every republican in Cass county should cast his vote for Sheriff Eikenbary. His record in that office is excellent. He has been a faithful officer and has given the best satisfaction. A reelection of Mr. Eikenbary to the office of sheriff will be a commendable step on the part of the voters.

—The latter part of last week burglar made a round in the neighborhood of Greenwood, entering the residences of John Pollard, Isaac Stradley, Roger Connor, and John Dremer. At Connor's about $400 of money and notes was taken and at Dremer's $247 cool cash was obtained.

—W. L. Tucker and wife, accompanied by their son, son-in-law, and daughters left for McPaul, Iowa, this morning, where to-morrow they celebrate Mr. Tucker's forty-ninth birthday, with relatives living there. Mr. Tucker informs us he has lived in Nebraska thirty years and in the same house twenty-four years and is still satisfied with this great state.

—What might have been a very serious disaster was a collision that took place at the Union Pacific depot in Omaha shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The 11:15 dummy train had just pulled out, but stopped at the east end of the depot. Just at this time two heavy runaway flat cars, loaded with cinders crashed into the rear platform of the dummy train, completely demolishing it, besides breaking nearly every window in that car. The coach was comfortably filled with passengers, but fortunately no one was injured.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. Barr, our efficient janitor, sojourning in Greenwood last Saturday and Sunday whither he went on business. He seems to have been successful from the legal papers he has been handling since his return.

The rearrangement of teachers after six weeks of work caused some slight dissatisfaction but, thanks to Prof. Drummond, all has been happily settled and the schools are now in condition to do good work.

We learn from Mr. Chatham that the high school grades are having some interesting experiments in chemistry and philosophy this term. The pupils performing the experiments and making a great deal of the apparatus necessary.

Hereafter we hope to dish them up occasionally to you with the hope of interesting parents in our schools. Parents think because the child does not complain of his teacher she is all right and that is the end of it; but the schools would certainly be no worse and might be better should they come up and see us at least once a year.

The crowded condition of the school rooms this year tell as plainly as anything can the growth of Plattsmouth has sustained the past year. We have four new teachers and nearly if not quite two hundred more pupils in attendance at present than at the same time any previous year.

The principal changes as we get them from our informant are as follows: Miss Wiles takes the new room on the upper floor; Miss Wilson, Room 11; Miss Addie Searle, Room 10; Miss Valery, Room 7; Miss Etta Searle, Room 6; Miss Schulhoff, Room 5; Miss Murhy, Room 2; and Miss McDonald, of Greenwood, Room 1.

Immediately after school Thursday evening the janitor noticed a fire just north of the school building which he extinguished before it had caused much damage. Some boys had evidently set a match to the dry leaves collected there. Boys who carry matches for the purpose are generally the ones found loafing around the street corners, smoking cigarettes and pipes, nights when they ought to be at home, or at least where they would not learn all the slang and meanness known to the toughs of the city. Parents as you read this notice whether your boy is at home or not, don't blame the teachers or the law compelling teachers to teach the effects of narcotics and liquors upon the system if your son learns to smoke and drink.

CLARA WILSON.

A Disastrous Fire at the Omaha Fair Grounds.

A disastrous fire occurred at the Omaha fair grounds yesterday afternoon, which entailed $10,000 loss on the association. The fire, without a doubt, had its origin from a spark from an engine on the Belt line, which was switching on the track back of the north stables. The dried grass along the track first became ignited and a strong wind blowing from the north carried the fire first to a pile of ties, and then to the sheds. Almost in a flash a thousand yards of stabling was in flames, together with the commodious power hall and the group of exhibition buildings to the south. The buildings burned like so many tinder boxes, and in the heavy wind that was blowing the spectacle was one of awful grandeur. The fire department was on the scene as speedily as possible, and in the absence of water, the force proceeded to tear down the buildings, fences and stables. For a time the whole immense inclosure was a sheet of fire, and it looked as if every structure upon the grounds must go. The large crowd of sportsmen in attendance at the shooting tournament were forced to flee for their lives, and the scene for a brief moment was indescribable.

The fire department worked like troopers with pick, hook and ax, and was instrumental in saving the fine art hall, and the big barn, and in preventing the spread of the flames to the private residence just north of the grounds. The residents were in dire consternation, and probably as many as thirty families moved all their household goods into the street, when the great volumes of flames were seen leaping and rolling toward them from the fair grounds. However, outside of the fair grounds, no property of whatsoever nature was injured or destroyed.

A Sad Journey.

This morning the remains of Mrs. Sarah, wife of James Cinnamond, were taken to Nebraska City for interment. Those accompanying Mr. Cinnamond and two little children, Eddie and Cora, were Mrs. J. W. Stewart, Rev. W. B. Alexander and Mr. W. W. Jones, of Lincoln. A number of the ladies of the M. E. church and friends of the family were present at the home this morning during the ceremony, to extend their sympathies to the bereaved husband and children, and accompanied them to the depot. Also a number of the A. O. U. W., of which Mr. Cinnamond is a member, were present.

The parents of the deceased and a number of relatives of the family live at Nebraska City, and as one child of the deceased is buried there, it was thought best for her to rest there also.

County Press.

Elect Mr. Streight. He is straight goods all the way through, and will serve the people equally as well as his democratic opponent.

David Campbell is as responsible and accommodating a treasurer as Cass county has ever had. No republican can afford to scratch his name.

Mr. Showalter has been clerk of the district court eight years. He is a good man and a competent official, but we do not believe in giving a man a life-tenure on any public office. It is time for him to retire.

The republican nominee for county commissioner, Mr. Geo. Young, is a man competent to administer the duties of that office with credit to himself and the party. He is a prominent and influential farmer of Mt. Pleasant precinct, and enjoys the highest regard of all who know him. He should be elected.

JEFF DAVIS seems to be king in Georgia.

CURIOSITIES IN CLOCKS.

Timepieces Made Up in Various Odd and Unusual Designs.

"The latest thing in clocks is the imitation of machinery of different kinds," said a salesman in an importing house. "We have just received some very odd designs in this line from Paris. Here is a clock that would make a fine present for a railroad man," and he exhibited a beautiful white bronze model of a steam boiler. It had a steam gauge, safety valve and speed regulator, and a thermometer took the place of the water gauge. On the furnace door was the dial of the clock and above it was a barometer. The whole apparatus was about ten inches high and was mounted on a plain platform. The clock was running and the pendulum balls of the speed regulator were whirling around merrily and doing the work of the pendulum.

"Now, here is something that would please anybody," said the clerk, and he showed a handsome windmill in bronze and gold, with a clock face let into the side of the tower. The arms of the windmill were moving in such a natural way that one could easily imagine that he felt the breeze that propelled them. Another design was a wall clock of tiles held in place by a gilt frame, and an openwork well house overhanging, in which a bucket was hanging suspended by a chain. The bucket served as a pendulum, and swung in a circle most mysteriously, for it did not seem to have any connection with the works of the clock, which were concealed in the well.

"Here is something unique," said the clerk, calling the reporter's attention to an elaborate affair. "This is a perfect miniature of a boiler set in a brick foundation. There are all of the valves, gauges, steam pipes and connections complete. The end of the boiler serves as the dial of the clock, and the heat on one side is a steam hammer moving up and down with great regularity, and striking a bar of brass that is held by a workman. That is designed as a present for a manufacturer. It cost $65. Here is a freak of the designer that is very neat. It represents an old fashioned vertical saw at work. A workman stands at the bench pushing a board against the saw. On the front of the bench is the dial of the clock. The great beauty of these designs is the perfection to which the smallest details are carried. We cannot turn out such work in this country; it would be too expensive, as it is almost impossible to get the wages we pay our artisans these clocks would cost a small fortune."—New York Mail and Express.

New York Negro in London.

I have been living this summer in what are called in London residential flats, near Hyde park. There are several porters employed about these flats. One of them is a New York negro, who acquired his education and knowledge of mankind as porter in a Pullman car and afterwards in one of the New York hotels. He wears a double-breasted brass buttoned blue frock livery, with round flat topped cap, which has a square visor. He is a most imposing individual. He has the soft, melodious voice of the best type of his race. He is a clean, manly looking fellow. He is the hero of all the cooks and house maids of the entire flats. This porter is on duty at night. He always moves about escorted by several admiring white servant girls. He hardly ever has less than six in his company. They stand in the most admiring positions. No Bunthorne was ever surrounded by more complete postures of adoration.

But this porter likes all this admiration gravely. He evidently has a very poor opinion of white people who run after negroes. He permits the servant girls to run after him, but not much more. All of the girls speak to him with the prefix of "Mr." before his name. None of the white porters are honored in this way. They are all called by their first names, although two or three of them are men advanced in life and the heads of large families. The colored porter is always Mr. Brooks. One of the tidiest of these servant girls, born and reared in the country and who has not yet lost the fresh color acquired in her farm life, expressed the other day a fervent desire that when she had a husband she hoped he would be just such a nice black man as Mr. Brooks.—F. C. Crawford in New York World.

How to Escape from an Asylum.

I had the misfortune to be committed to an asylum several years ago. When released I thought I would write my experience. The institution I was in was a private one and boasts of being the model one of the country. My advice to unfortunate inmates in asylums who know they are sane is to begin to praise everything in connection with the institution. Then the doctors, the stewards and the attendants will report that Mr. So-and-So had a good, restful night. Had I not adopted these tactics I verily believe I should still be an inmate, although I have been successful in business since my release. Usually no credence is given to the statements of an ex-inmate, so there is little use to object.—An Ex-Loon in New York World.
