Dr. O'Leary will commence his course of lectures next week on Wednesday evening, November 17, at Rockwood Hall. The doctor was here several years ago and at that time he drew immense houses. G. H. Babbitt, the democratic candidate who has been hugging our street corners for several days past, trying to work up some democratic enthusiasts, left on the west-bound train this morning looking somewhat disconsolate. A. J. Rayanaugh fell from a building on which he was working in Omaha yesterday afternoon and died last evening. Two carpenters fell from a scaffolding on the new M. E. Church there and were seriously hurt. Such accidents are too frequent to not be the result of carelessness. The bridge on Vine, between 6th and 7th streets was widened to-day by filling in the sides of the approaches, also the one on 7th street was repaired and widened and the street car track laid across it. The force of men at work is large and things fairly buzz.

Keep Away From There.

From the Bee. Union No. 56, Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, at Los Angeles, Cal., have issued a circular of warning to the mechanic and laboring man, which should be heeded by those classes. The union sets forth in their circular that the published boom of milk and honey on the Pacific coast is fictitious, and is the work of irresponsible leeches whose living depends on an overcrowded market of laborers, and "unfortunately the poor dupe, who sacrifices his little earthly possessions to enable him to reach the Pacific coast in quest of steady work and high wages, looks in vain for fulfillment of these golden promises."

It is positively asserted that the greater number live from hand to mouth. Rents are enormously high; a cottage of four rooms rents from $25 to $50 a month. Coal is $16 a ton, butter 40 cents, eggs 40 cents, and other things in proportion. The average of wages is about 50 cents per day more than eastern wages, but the cost of living more than counterbalances. Out of door labor can be pursued for about ten months in the year; but the man who attempts it is sure to break down. Tropical climates will not permit an unceasing round of hard manual labor. There is a gradual and stealthy undermining process which the victim heeds generally too late to repair the evil.

This morning a raft with a tent pitched on a part of it for a covering was seen floating slowly down the river about nine o'clock. A story in the Omaha Bee probably concerns the same parties. From that paper it seems the occupants of the raft were two men with their wives and two children, one of the men's name is Jule Tillson. The party hailed from Niobrara county where they had squatted on claims but were crowded off by legitimate settlers, they having no money to hold the claims, and the soil being too poor to produce well, they made a raft to return to Arkansas. At Sioux City the party was saddened by a little girl who was with them and who was prone to samnambulism, who fell from the boat during the night and was of course drowned, but not missed until morning. From the Bee it appears their travel must be slow as it says they left Omaha yesterday morning and only passed here to-day.

A new musical society has been organized consisting of ten ladies and gentlemen, who are well known in the city, as musicians, and there is no doubt but what they will do themselves proud as soon as a few rehearsals are indulged in. The city can boast of several societies of this kind and we are pleased to be able to give this information. In this art Plattsmouth is able to "hold her own." The names of the persons constituting this new club are: Soprano, Miss Maud Burns and Mrs. Geo. E. Dovey; altoes, Mrs. D. A. Campbell, Miss Gertrude Kearney; tenors, Mr. R. B. Windham, Mr. Jas. B. Pollock; basses, Mr. W. A. Derrick, Mr. G. H. Pollock; accompanist, Miss Emma Johnson; director, Miss Paul.

Plattsmouth is entitled to credit for every thing she does, both at home and abroad, for it all redounds to the advertisement and benefit of the city and its interest; and certainly one of the features of our town is the Plattsmouth Glee club. Their latest efforts were at Lincoln at the reception given to the Irish members of parliament, by John Fitzgerald Esq. Their reception there was certainly a success, and was appreciated every time they sang by hearty encores. This is certainly an honor too, especially so, as the Lincoln Glee club was present and sang well. We wish the Glee club all the success possible. A state reputation they already have.

MARRIED.—Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in Council Bluffs, Iowa, Mr. Thos. H. Knotts and Miss Nellie J. Smith were united in the bonds of matrimony, Rev. W. T. Smith, father of the bride, officiating. There were present a large party of friends and relatives. The presents were elegant and useful. After the ceremony and congratulations the usual festivities were indulged in. The wedded couple have the good wishes of a large circle of friends.

In last evening's HERALD we stated that the B. & M. band would appear on Main street and play for Morrison & Thornburg, at the opening of their new restaurant. But we are sorry to say that so many of the members were at Lincoln, that they could not appear. Messrs Morrison & Thornburg were sorry to disappoint so many, but as they were not made acquainted with the fact until after we had gone to press, the mistake was unavoidable.

Magicians in South America. "The greatest place for jugglers and magicians is South America," replied the magician. "A prestidigitator went to Rio Janeiro last year, and in a four weeks' engagement made $35,000. The veneration with which they are held in some parts of Brazil and other South American countries is amusing. The ignorant classes follow them in crowds when they appear on the streets, the half bred negroes especially. They fancy every ill that happens to them during the time the magicians are there is due to them, and it is necessary for them to have police protection. I find it more profitable to manufacture than to travel and give exhibitions." —New York Evening Sun.

IN LONDON HOTELS.

NO GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN THE SYSTEM FOR YEARS.

A Place Where You Cannot Hurry Anybody—Experience of a Hungry Man. Habitual Carelessness of the Scullion. At the Scullion.

The hotel system in this country is very solemn. You cannot hurry anybody. If you drop your key at the hotel it may be an hour before you will recover it. It is like the diving bell operation. The more you enjoy these solemn personages the more they lose either their presence of mind or their method. As to the method, they have but little. In the first place, they do not rise till about or after 9 o'clock in the morning, although nature shines upon their island about 4 o'clock. Active minded Yankees, who feel the morning shins, rise and expect to get even with the country. They find that they cannot buy a pill or seditive powder or an oyster. The Briton rises as becomes him about 9 o'clock or 10 o'clock—and is then somewhat unsteady if a call is made upon his waver.

I am stopping here in a hotel which is supposed to be the perfection of recent civilization. It is built of white bricks on the inside and stone exteriorly. There is more style and method about it than is required of a country house. You come in at the front door and observe a man covered over with gilded uniform. You advance toward two or three offices near the front door. If you strike the wrong office they march you to and fro. You are requested to register. About six of these minor offices are kept up toward the front. In the course of time you learn the regimen, but if you are lame or old you may feel a little weary with this tedious office number one and office number seven. When you come down from your room you drop your key through a hole into a sort of a vat. If they neglect, as they often do, to fish your key out of the vat you may be ten or fifteen minutes recovering your way into your room.

AT THE BREAKFAST TABLE. When you go to breakfast you are required to give your number, which has been previously confided to you on a little round ticket or check. You present yourself, and in about three minutes are required to sign a schedule as to your plate of foods. They bring you a little piece of fish about two inches by three inches. When you have done with this they possibly bring you a second piece. I calculate during the present week that every meal which cost me from four shillings to seven shillings cost the house about one-half shilling at the very highest. The hotel system here has changed, as they suppose, for the better, and yet we would think in America that it had hardly changed at all. Let me give you an example of the contrast. Fifteen or twenty years ago the Langham hotel was supposed to be the finest in London; it was placed near the American minister's residence; it was built of brick, and was a very large and extensive building. They made it state and offensive and exclusive. If you go to the hotel you see a man in uniform standing before it; his business is to observe whether you are fit to come into the holy of holies. You pass through the portal, and there is perhaps a second sergeant at arms there to look out for your character. When you get within the hotel becomes very quiet, and it is not until you are in uniform standing before it; his business is to observe whether you are fit to come into the holy of holies. You pass through the portal, and there is perhaps a second sergeant at arms there to look out for your character. When you get within the hotel becomes very quiet, and it is not until you are in uniform standing before it; his business is to observe whether you are fit to come into the holy of holies.

You finally go up to a little office, which is perhaps supported by a boy. He assigns you to a room. Most of the chambermaids receive about 45s a year, or 47s. They are obliged to enter into articles of contract, if you go to the hotel you see a man in uniform standing before it; his business is to observe whether you are fit to come into the holy of holies. You pass through the portal, and there is perhaps a second sergeant at arms there to look out for your character. When you get within the hotel becomes very quiet, and it is not until you are in uniform standing before it; his business is to observe whether you are fit to come into the holy of holies.

A CARELESS SCULLION. This morning I went to the office and asked for my key. The scullion there said that it was not on his book, and would look for it. He then began to fish for it among about fifty keys in a hole underneath the place we had dropped our keys. Having hunted all these keys through, he said it was not there. He had overlooked it in the multiplicity of keys. Had he attended to his business, every one of these keys would have been hung on its place the moment it was dropped. Then their system will never stand the pressure and criticism of modern civilization. You enter the large dining room of the Hotel Metropole and find a series of pillars in the middle of the room. These pillars are all useless and unnecessary, and they separate people who eat from other people who eat. You are told that for a certain amount of money you shall have so many dishes. They bring you the first dish, and it is about once and a half an ounce in weight. If you submit this is all you will get of the first dish. If you are an independent person you will demand a second portion of the dish. They yield without remonstrance. Then when you come for the second part of the breakfast you get a little piece about two or three inches. If you tell the man to take that back and bring you something reasonable to eat he will obey like a calf. If you submit you will get no more for breakfast.

At the Langham hotel you ring a bell for something in the way of refreshments; sometimes a man will come in and sometimes he will not. You wonder where the center of these houses is, who controls them, who is responsible for them. As far as the chambermaids and labor element go they are very well attended to, but if you go to the main office you are kept in a state of apprehension, wondering whether you have a right to ask for anything or not. On my way to London I stopped at Brighton for almost a week. Every day I took my sea bath. Every night I slept under a sheet. In the course of three or four days I was afflicted with a strange kind of diarrhea. I had never felt anything of the kind before; there was a slight pain in the middle of my stomach, attended with cracking pains toward the sides of my stomach. I went to the hotel proprietor and asked where the water came from which fed Brighton. He said, with great politeness, that it was the finest water in Great Britain. One morning the main waiter in the hotel remarked to me: "Sir, you had better go to London. The sea air seldom agrees with strangers. With my own hands I disagree very much. You will never be any better so long as you stay here." So I went on to London, and in a few hours was completely restored to health.—London Letter.
