Hopkins and Sperry Held.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Sherb G. Hopkins, an alleged correspondent, and Arthur B. Sperry, an Evening Critic reporter, who were instrumental last night Justice Waite receiving an infernal machine from the anarchists, are held each in $1,000 bonds to answer to the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses by selling false information to representatives of the press, and they may be indicted for using the United States mails for the transmission of explosives and what they thought a capital joke, as fake," promises to make them serious trouble. Hopkins says Sperry is in no way responsible, as he (Hopkins) made and sent the imitation machine himself and sold the stories to correspondents. But general Boynton and Robert Waynne, of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, who invested $5 for the story, do not hold Hopkins responsible and believe t'at Sperry is an accomplice. It has been demonstrated that one of the ingredients of the composition in the box was gunpowder, and although it was dampened and probably beyond the condition to be exploded at Chief Justice Waite's residence, it was an explosive when it was deposited in the mails and that one constitutes a penitentiary offense. There is only one hope left for Hopkins by tering of the birds. RATS, CATS AND SNAKES.

SOME OF THE SUPERSTITIONS BE-LIEVED BY THE COREANS.

Deference Paid to Reptiles-Tabby Not Held in High Esteem-Rodents Exceedingly Troublesome-The Legend of the Farmer and the Snake.

Corean houses are usually more than supplied with rats. They gambol about on the in circulating the report about Chief paper ceilings, if the room is supplied with a ceiling, if not they burrow in the mass of mud and mortar between the rafters and the tiles. In case the room is furnished with a ceiling the rats become very disagreeable indeed, for the thick paper is like a drumbead, and being made up of several layers held together by rice paste, the rats pull up strips of this paper and eat it. The noise is like that of an amateur brass band, and never fails to arouse a foreigner from the soundest slumber, be he ever so used to it, while upon the new comer the effect is quite exaggerated. Hopkins put it this morning, "A good By a species of drum practice upon this drumhead ceiling the rate may be so frightened that they will stay away for the rest of the

The natives do not like rats, and endeavor in carrous ways to get rid of them, as, for instance, by placing a written character on the ceiling, or many characters at times, under the popular supposition that rats, like people, so respect the written characters that they will not desecrate it by walking over it. Some rats, bowever, are said to be like some people, and the charm does not always work satisfac-

FREEDOM FOR SNAKES. Snakes are allowed free liberty in and upon a Corean house. They usually live in burrows in the mud under the tiles. These burrows are doubtless used by the rats during the winter time, and they are noticeably absent during the summer, after the proper occupants have thawed out. The snakes doubtless make it lively for the rats, but their principal food is the eggs and young of the swallows, which live under the eaves. One can always tell when the snake is visible by the excited chatgregate about where he may be sunning himself on the hot tiles, and jabber away at him with all their might. Others fly away and give Mr. Snake a sharp dig in some unprotected part. The snake usually gets the worst of the encounter and runs to Fover. The people will not kill the snakes; they have a superstition based on fear. They trace t back to a story concerning killed a poisonous snake and afterward was killed, together with his whole family, by the mate of the dead reptile. The house snakes are some three feet in length, fat, lazy and practically harmless,

One cannot help but note the absence of cats in Corea, and as the rats become more and more troublesome an occasional feline within the breast of the governor himself. | serenade becomes an appreciated favor.
