Lecture to-night. Frank Carruth was in Omaha to-day. E. B. Lewis went up to Omaha to-day. W. B. Shryock, of Louisville, is in town to-day. Dr. T. P. Livingston went to Lincoln this morning. L. C. Stiles and Geo. A. Rassen were in Omaha to-day. Mr. A. C. Powell, of Omaha, was in the city yesterday. Dr. O'Leary's lecture to-night is exclusively for men. Mrs. Coe, of Nebraska City, is visiting Mrs. J. D. Simpson. Miss Minnie Maddern will appear at the opera house Saturday night. F. D. Leuhof's brick residence on Granite street is nearly completed. W. G. Smith, of Nebraska City, is in the city visiting his brother, O. P. Smith. Mr. J. G. Hathway and daughter Lillian of Lincoln is in the city visiting friends. Mrs. R. B. Windham and Mrs. J. M. Patterson were passengers to Omaha this morning. Mrs. Kelly Fox went over to Pacific Junction this morning to visit her mother. Fred Gorder, W. H. Newell and Jerry Farthing, went to Cedar Creek this morning. Mr. Lewellen Moore, of the greenhouse, was a passenger to Omaha this morning. The lecture to-night is for men only, the one to-morrow night will be addressed to the ladies. D. A. Campbell is greatly improving and beautifying his residence property on the corner of Locust and Fifth streets. Chief Justice, of the state, Samuel Maxwell, arrived in the city this morning to visit his farm, a few miles south of town. The ladies of the Presbyterian Sewing Circle are requested to meet at Mrs. Perry Walker's, Friday Nov. 18, at two o'clock p. m. Miss McGaff, of Osceola, Iowa, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Ollie Jones, returned home this morning by way of Omaha. Every young man in Plattsmouth should hear Dr. O'Leary's lecture at Rockwood hall to-night, it will not fail to be of benefit. The man charged with assault and battery by J. P. Ford, appeared before Judge Mathews and plead guilty. He was fined $1 and costs. Mrs. Fisher and Miss Wilcox, of Omaha, who have been visiting Mrs. Harry Ritchie, left this morning for Hamburg, Iowa. A couple of men pulled in considerable money from an auction sale of wolf robes and overcoats on Main street this afternoon. Dr. O'Leary's lecture last evening on "Culture, Manners and Beauty," was heard by a large audience, and was rich in advice and instruction. The changing of hands of real estate in Plattsmouth is quite steady and those dealing in realty anticipate the opening of a lively season of lot and land transactions about February. Don't fail to secure your tickets for Minnie Maddern in her new play, "In Spite of All," at the opera house next Saturday night. Seats are going fast and indications point to a big house. Tuesday night A. P. Loring, civil engineer for the B. & M. at Lincoln was robbed of $100 in cash. The burglars entered his sleeping apartment and carried his clothes to the door where they were searched. All members of the Y. L. R. R. A. are requested to meet at the reading room, Friday Nov. 18 at 4 o'clock p. m., to complete the arrangements for the appearance of the "Chinese Students" Monday evening, Nov. 25. The young ladies of the Presbyterian church and Sabbath-school are requested to meet at Miss Cranmer's rooms on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock to dress dolls. Please bring thimble and needle and pieces that will make cloth for small or large dolls. The young ladies of the reading room society have lately added to the beauty and convenience of their rooms by the purchase of a handsome new book case. They are constantly adding new books etc., and there certainly is not as comfortable and pleasant a room in the city where an evening may be spent. They also have a circulating library and rent their books at very reasonable rates. Give them a call.

BURTON-HENDRICKSON. Geo. F. S. Burton and Mrs. Letitia E. Hendrickson joined in Wedlock. Last evening occurred the wedding of Mr. Geo. F. S. Burton and Mrs. Letitia E. Hendrickson, at their future home on Chicago Ave. The ceremony was performed about 8 o'clock, Rev. H. B. Burgess of the Episcopal church officiating. A large number of friends were present to witness the marriage of the estimable couple, and after congratulation had been extended by the guests, all participated in the elegant wedding feast which had been prepared. The groom is quite well known in Plattsmouth and his friends hold him in high esteem. He is employed as a secretary in the E. & M. shops. The bride has lived in this city for many years and has many friends. The home at which the ceremony occurred has been provided and elegantly furnished by the groom, to afford comfort and happiness for the future. A large number of presents were given, which were costly and useful.

The Longest Railroad. The Russian transport Russia, which lately arrived at Hong Kong, carried eleven engineers, sent to survey a line of railroad sixty or seventy miles long from Vladivostok inland. This is to be the first link in the great trans-Siberian road, which is to put St. Petersburg within fifteen days by rail of the Pacific. The scheme is the most gigantic in history, but not the most difficult. The Siberian road will be twice as long as our Pacific lines, but instead of bringing a solitude to connect two civilizations it will traverse a more or less settled country all the way. For the most part it will be laid in a plain, and the engineering difficulties will be principally confined to protecting the line from snow and frost. The road can be built slowly, and the local traffic will support the completed sections. The part now to be surveyed, from Vladivostok inland, will do a good business in transporting the products of the coast region to the ocean. The road is next to be extended to Lake Baikal, where it will secure the important trade of Irkutsk and its tributary country. The Russian government has already contracted with the volunteer fleet to carry the rails and rolling stock, and the scheme seems to be fairly under way. It is now time to revive the suggestion of an American genius to run a line up our side of the ocean and bridge Behring Straits.

What Sara Bernhardt began in America, Miss Minnie Maddern, who appeared last night at the Boyd in "In Spite of All," is continuing. Of course the actresses differ—real excellence is seldom exactly duplicated—but the similarity is nevertheless distinct, and the artistic standing of both is practically the same. Criticism is never so weak or useless as when it is forced to appear as eulogy. One may say that a thing is perfect—but what more? Are elements of this perfection demanded? Well, then; Miss Maddern's laugh, a real sound of mirth—her walk, a real, womanly walk—her voice as natural as the voices of the "women folks" at home—her passion, quick, sudden, of few words, of terrible intensity, exactly reproducing the passion of sensitive human existence—her gestures, apparently unstudied, more human than graceful, but still graceful enough—these are doubtless the chief components of her greatness. She is an apostle of dramatic reform—a woman whose every artistic act is a protest against the artificialities and errors of the old, and at once a justification and a prophecy of the new. The company supporting Miss Maddern has no discernible weakness.—From last evening's Omaha World.

A Herald scribe was this morning treated to a drive beyond the shops and past the old O'Neal estate. Here is a beautiful section of residence property indeed. Just beyond the O'Neal estate lies a forty acre tract of beautiful land belonging to P. L. and W. S. Wise, which is rapidly being sold in half-acre lots; while to the east lies Palmer's addition, and to the west the beautiful South Park where a number of comfortable residences have just been erected. The choice of residence lots in these tracts is due to their beauty and nearness to the shops.

Austrian Army Notions. Titles of nobility are likely to become cheap in Austria before long. A new army minute provides that every officer of irreproachable conduct who has worn the imperial uniform for thirty years uninterruptedly, and has gone through at least one campaign, will, upon demand, be ennobled by the kaiser and the fees usually payable upon ennoblement will be remitted. Another regulation established by the same minute deals with a very different matter—the easy recognition of officers and men who fall in battle. In future, whenever the Austro-Hungarian army is mobilized, each combatant is to have delivered to him a small strip of parchment inscribed with his name, rank and regiment, and this ticket of identity is to be kept in a pocket which will be purposely made in every pair of breeches. After a battle the tickets would be taken from the bodies of the dead and forwarded to headquarters. Some such system has long been in operation in the German army.—St. James' Gazette.

The Yosemite on Trust. Have you ever done the Yosemite? If not, postpone your departure until the latest possible moment, and then stay where you are. Go to an art gallery and buy some views of the valley; they will give you more satisfaction than taking the journey and you will save money. Although we went under the most favorable conditions—our party of ten just filling the stage, with no outsiders and no over-crowding—still, unless one is blessed with a perfect digestion, no nerves, the patience of Job, the amiability of an angel, and the constitution of a gorilla, one had better take the Yosemite on trust.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Perfumes from Mummies. Mummies beaten up into a powder and mixed with a little oil made for the artists in Egypt richer tones of brown than any other substance. Modern perfumers used to prepare the perfumes and spices found inside of mummies in such a way as to make ladies "dote on it." Paper manufacturers have used the wrappings of mummies to make coarse paper, and the cloth and rags have been used as clothing.—New York Sun.

CHAT ABOUT A SINGER. P. T. BARNUM'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THE "SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE." Jenny Lind's Kindness of Heart Illustrated—Her Daughter's Voice—Teaching the Great Showman a Lesson—Profits of Her American Trip. P. T. Barnum, who is spending a few weeks in the city, gave a reporter some interesting reminiscences of Jenny Lind a few days ago. "My autobiography," said the veteran showman, "gives nearly all that I can say about Jenny Lind. Her natural impulses were most noble and good. I never met a person so susceptible to the wants, needs or sufferings of others. I could at any time make her tears flow by relating some case of want, and her dollars would flow freely with her tears. She could not bear the thought of 'passing by on the other side,' when she could relieve the sorrow of any being, however humble." Mr. Barnum told a touching story of an incident that occurred when Jenny was singing in Boston. "A poor working girl," he said, "thrust $3 into the hands of the ticket seller at the Boston Temple for a back seat at Jenny's concert. On receiving the ticket she said: 'These give my wages for one week, but I must have that poor child's Jenny's concert.' The ticket seller, Max Goldberg, heard the remark and immediately went to the green room and laughingly told it to Jenny. I shall never forget how she jumped to her feet and exclaimed: 'Oh, this must not be! Poor girl, she shall not lose her money! It is wicked! Max, take this money—handing her a twenty dollar gold piece—search out that poor creature and put it in her hands with my love. God bless her! Cousin Max found the girl, gave her the money and message, and witnessed a flood of grateful tears from the working girl's eyes. If she is alive today she will remember it."

HER KINDEST REMINDERS. "When I was sailing against the Jerome clock des, in 1857," Mr. Barnum went on, "I took my wife and children to London. One day Jenny's husband, Otto Goldsmith, called on me and said: 'Miss Lind, hearing of your financial straits, desired me to call on you and say if a few hundred pounds, or a thousand, will serve to relieve your present wants, I am to hand it to you with her kindest regards. Write now living in Dresden, and my wife says if you will take your family there she will gladly find you nice apartments at a low rent, and we shall both be glad to under your service we can.' The kind offer was declined with thanks, but it shows the charitable character of this almost angelic woman.

"She has two children, the older one, the daughter, has a voice which the Judge Brandist told me he believed I cultivate; I would prove equal to her mother's. But," he added, "her parents are deaf and have no ambition to have her attain musical renown, which would involve such arduous study and practice.

"Ten shares of profits in our musical campaign, in 1870 and 1871, was $375,000.00. She sang in ninety-three concerts. She was worth over $1,000,000 when she left the United States in 1851, and this sum has been increased by occasional concerts in Great Britain, and by the judicious investments of her husband.

"Kind and lady like as Jenny Lind was, she had a horror of meeting strangers, and I will tell you this story, though it is painful myself. During the first few weeks of our engagement I introduced to her numbers of ladies and gentlemen who desired to see her. She frequently intimated to me that it was displeasing to her, but I was anxious to gratify the people who so persistently sought an introduction.

INTRODUCING A STRANGER. "One morning at the Continental hotel in Philadelphia, an esteemed lady friend called on me and asked for an introduction to the 'Swedish Nightingale.' I told her how glad I would be to gratify her, but these introductions of strangers were very annoying to Miss Lind and that I really desired to go away and ask her permission. 'Oh, do please do so for this once, for I am dying to speak to her,' urged my friend, and at last I reluctantly consented to ask her permission.

"Miss Lind," I said, "I know you dislike to have me introduce strangers simply because they are friends of mine, and I please your such requests daily, but a particular friend of my family is waiting in the reception room, very anxious to speak a few words with you."

"Jenny surprised me by saying with a pleasant smile, 'Dear Mr. Barnum, how can I refuse you anything? Bring up your lady friend immediately by all means.'

"I hastened down stairs, brought up the lady, and was delighted to introduce her. Jenny bowed and received her graciously, then pointed to a chair and they both were seated. Jenny's face as she glanced at her guest aspect as she said: 'Madam, I do not know what to say to you, we were perfect strangers. You have come only to gratify my idle curiosity; what can I say?'

"I was shocked to hear this, and to see my friend turn as red as beetroot when she tried to make some excuse. 'Oh, do not apologize,' said Jenny; 'I do not blame you half so much as I do Mr. Barnum. I have warned him often, and now I am compelled to give him this severe lesson, which I am sure he shall never forget.'

"It is needless to say that I never did forget it, nor seeing the justice of Jenny's position, did I ever repeat the offense."

"How long has it been since Jenny Lind gave any concerts?" was asked.

"I think it is most likely five or fifteen years," Mr. Barnum replied. "She gave many for charities in England that were never known to the public. The tickets were sold privately, always at a guinea each, and the hall was always filled. During the last year that she sang, all her concerts were for the benefit of poor clergymen."—New York Tribune.

The Brewery of New York. As a realm of unswerving and light the Bowers cannot be surpassed. From the Cooper Union to Park row it is all gold, grace and glitter. Go over that track on a Saturday night particularly and you will find Dickens' descriptions of low London realized at every turn. A long street of shops, cheap lodging houses, bawmams and knaves, with the dirt and dirt and self-interest. There are the fruit stand, the corn man, the laundry, the chestnut man and the collar button fiend. You begin at the Cooper Union with bananas and lager beer and end at Park row with anatomy and opium.—Nathan M. Levy in New York Graphic.
