The old war relics that have been stored in the city since '69, now in a room in the Fitzgerald block, are to be moved to Lincoln, and will be used in equipping an independent military company at that point.

The contest cases pending in the judge's court of Robinson vs. Critchfield, Co. clerk, and Streight vs. Showalter, clerk of district court were withdrawn yesterday at 5 o'clock by mutual consent. Critchfield and Showalter walk into office free and undisturbed.

While going up Main St., Mr. J. C. Cummins had quite a tussle with a Polled Angus calf this morning, which, although horrid, exhibited fight. The calf was bought in Lincoln and is a very fine blooded animal. Mr. Cummins will put him with his already large herd of blooded cattle on his farm southwest of the city.

To-day the cases of Julius Pepperburg and others against Morrison & Thorburg came up for hearing before Willitt Pottinger, J. P. This is an attachment case, and the store of defendants was attached and closed up by the Sheriff. The plaintiffs are represented by S. P. Vannati, and the defendants by Ramsy & Gering. The cases were, on motion of defendants, continued till Monday next.

It has turned out just as was expected. American genius has triumphed over railroad collisions. A western man has invented what he calls an anti-railroad collisioner. It consists of a railroad track which is run over the tops of the cars and passes down at either end near enough to connect with the main track, so that on meeting a train it—that is, the other train—immediately runs up the inclined track and passes over the tops of the cars and down at the other end in perfect safety. The sensations of the passengers in both trains while this is going on must be rapturously thrilling, to say the least. All that is needed now to make the thing complete is an automatic derrick which will hoist trains over rivers and chasms when the bridges break down.—Ex.

The sale of Reserved Seat tickets for "Around the World in Eighty Days" began this morning at J. P. Young's with out any advance in price, only 75c. The entire lower floor will be 75c. and the Gallery 50c. Reorganize for Gas.

Some of our citizens talk of organizing the natural gas project, which we hope to see done at once. By examining a sectional map it will readily be seen that Plattsmouth is exactly on an angle of 45° with Jefferson, Iowa, where such a rich flow of gas was discovered recently and is now in operation. A letter written from Jefferson City, under date of Jan. 5, '88, and shown to us by a citizen of Plattsmouth, speaks as follows: "There has been no steps taken here for deep boring. All that has been done so far is at the depth of from 70 to 90 feet. In many cases the flow of gas was very fine and quality good. The trouble encountered by all so far, is this, they put down a small hole (2 inch) and the force of the gas when reached throws the sand up into the casing and packs it so tightly that we find it necessary to use the drill in order to clean the hole again. After the whole is cleaned the gas comes as freely as ever." From what we have read the most common rules for locating a well is to have it on or near the 45 degree line. The 45° theory is one of the best known, and perhaps generally accepted theories held in regard to the oil or gas belt. It is thus the gas belt in general and also the pools of the different gas and oil fields run along a 45° line, i. e., a line running half way between the north and east and south and west points, or, in other words, a line running north-west and south-east, as it may be seen by the map. This is, in general, the direction of the great gas and oil belts and is claimed that the oil and gas fields run in the same direction, north-east and south-west, so in locating wells, many seek to have them as near as possible on a 45° line drawn through some already finished and good well. Let those who are interested in this matter refer to the map and be convinced that we are on the 45° angle, and let our citizens awake and be up and doing. Now is the accepted time.

Church vs. Saloon.

The spirit of the Christian church and the spirit of the saloon are eternally unlike and antagonistic.

One builds up, the other tears down. One schools for heaven, the other educates for hell. One brings health and respectability, the other disease and disgrace. One gives present joy and glowing hope, the other destroys self-respect and shrouds the future in unmitigated darkness.

With these contradictory elements in our midst; with such overwhelming, diverging tendencies, is it not passing strange that a man can be found possessed of the least spark of virtue who will not summon every power of his being to fight this plutonic monster, this arch enemy of God and man, the saloon?

Only a few days ago a young man, perhaps about twenty years old, walked into a saloon at midday, and without apparent shame.

This may not be an unusual sight, perhaps? O, no! But this young man has "gravitated" from the Sunday school—not "graduated," for that means going higher instead of treading the downward road.

He used to be a constant attendant of a church Sunday school!

In his case is exemplified the descending progress—the mixed conditions of church and saloons—"Sunday schools for boys," the "saloons for men!"

As the young man goes forth to mingle with his fellow citizens these yawning caverns await him at every turn, and incarnate emissaries with hell's most subtle palayer seek at once to blot out his self-respect, and annihilate his manhood!

"Jesus came to seek and to save the lost." My Christian brother when you vote to "show these tares are you seeking to save the lost?" Or do you strike hands with those who strive to "lose the saved, or those for whom all heaven is interested to save?"

If these destructive "Tares" must exist let it be by the devil's sowing, not of your sowing.

Saloons have no just right to exist, and under no pretext should a Christian community furnish the shadow of approval. No good can come of evil. Truth is never indebted to a lie. No man is excused for doing evil, under the pretext that good may come.

This is an "irrepressible conflict" and no sinister or partisan consideration should be thought of for an instant, to debar direct action to destroy the saloon and its power.—News.

The illustrious five, together with their wives, viz: Dr. R. R. Livingston and wife, F. E. White and wife, Geo. E. Smith and wife, of Omaha; A. W. McLaughlin and wife, and J. B. Strode, of Lincoln, have formed a society among themselves. The object of which is to celebrate each of their respective birthdays. The one whose birthday is to be celebrated prepares an elegant banquet, and the members of the society are in attendance and leave many valuable presents as a memento of the event. Last night was the forty-second birthday of Geo. E. Smith, of Omaha. The members were all present but A. W. McLaughlin and wife. Dr. R. R. Livingston reports a very pleasant time and informs us that the next banquet will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. White on the evening of January 20.

The Y. L. R. R. A. ball was a grand success and a brilliant affair. Perhaps a more pleasant time was never enjoyed by that who step the light fantastic, than those of last night. The young ladies exhibited their ability of management, while the young gentlemen were left as wall flowers. There were from seventy-five to eighty couple participating in the dance, and seventy-one couple in the grand march, with two hundred spectators in the gallery. The music was excellent, the supper immense, and all in all the affair was one long to be remembered. The order was first class, and the ball is highly spoken of by all as being well conducted.

A woman claiming to have purchased a ticket at Omaha for Memphis, Tenn., and to have lost it after getting on the cars, was put off the train at this place last night. She applied to a citizen of Plattsmouth to show her the hotel, then changed her mind and asked to be directed to the telegraph office. While on their way to the latter place the night policeman came on the scene, and a sid citizen gave him charge. After more thorough search the ticket was found. She had put it away too carefully, and had probably indulged too freely in biters.

A meeting of the members of Cobweb hall will be held next Monday evening at their rooms for the election of officers and assessment of dues.
