THE HERALD will insist from time to time on public improvements. If any of our people will visit Lincoln and drive tor are not only winked at, but brazenly over the district of that city where ced r upheld, is a question well calculated to block has just been put down they will cause the bravest citizen to tremble with not find any arguments against pavements. Let our people keep it before their minds that Plattsmouth must go ahead in this

THE Omaha Herald succeeded in ob taining the opinion of Governor Thayer in full, touching the fitness of Mr. Lamar for the Supreme Bench of the United States. We do not know whether Mr. Lamar is a fully reconstructed secession ist or not, and we suppose if rejected by the Senate that body will not be govern ed entirely by Mr. Lamar's treasonable record during the late rebellion. There are other arguments against him which to our mind reaches much further than the war record of the late Secretary of the Interior, and among these on his fitness for this high position; a man past sixty years of age whom every one admithas never ranked even as a good sound lawyer is hardly the man to place on the supreme bench alongside of men lik Wait, Miller, Mathews, Field, Blotch ford and Gray, and we do not think a President of the United States who has due regard for the court of last resort in this country, would nominate a southern political whose political fortunes are completely builded upon the "Mississipp plan" for that exalted position, especially when the politician is not a fair lawyer. Again, Mr. Lamar is too old a man to surrender any of his preconceived notions in regard to state sovereignty, and all those issues which he as a southerner from the manor born imbibed from his moth er's breast. He belonged to a family whose dream was the re-establishment of the African slave trade; his brother during the war devoted his whole energies and fortune in that direction; and no matter what a politician may profess in this day and age for the purpose of gaining power and place, he is not likely to turn his back on his early education and lifelong convictions, and would unquestionably be influenced thereby. Mr. Lamar is too old; is not good enough a lawyer and belonged to the wrong school of parties to make a safe supreme judge. Then again he is unquestionably under the influence of the corporations of the country. His record as Secretary of the Interior shows that the corporation rock was the one he and Mr. Sparks separated on; and that President Cleveland, true to his instincts, stood by his Secretary and snuffed the Illinois Spark (f) out. We think Governor Thayer might have added | His brain was overworked with less than several reasons to the list he gave why Mr. Lamar should not be a supreme judge.

CARLISLE'S DILEMMA.

A laboring man from the factory down in Kentuckey is after Mr. Carlisle and the seat he warms in the fiftieth congress. Mr. Carlisle is a reformer and for that matter so are all revenue reform democrats, reformers within the democratic definition of party reform; so it becomes you did not know that gentleman, and he a little embarrassing for the third officer in rank in the present administration to be wrongfully witholding a seat in congress from the very class the welfare of which, he professes such great solicitude. The showing so far made before the committee on contested elections is damaging to the speaker, to say the least of it; broad statements of fraud and crime are made in sworn affidavits, and otherwise, directly connecting Speaker Carthe disfranchisment of the electors of las district. Of course it will not do to condemn the speaker on ex-parte festimony and the worst shade of the present case against him is the claim of his opponent, Mr. Thoebe, that all he asks a democratic house to do is to bring Mr. Carlisle into court and compel him to face the music. The speaker and his friends, it appears, have been attempting to laugh Thoebe's case out of court, but that gentlemen with his counsel put in an appearance before the committe of the Mortgages.

Mortgage.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a chattel markgage dated on the 7th day of December, 1887, a duly flex of the county Clerk of Carlisle of the county Clerk of Carlisle of the county Clerk of Carlisle into seal of the present case against him is the claim of his opponent, Mr. Thoebe, that all he asks a democratic house to do is to bring Mr. Carlisle into court and compel him to face the music. The speaker and his friends, it appears, have been attempting to laugh Thoebe's case out of court, but that gentlemen with his counsel put in an appearance before the committe of the close political friends in Kentuckey with house and furtished sworn t stino y, upon which it is exceedingly doubtful whether Mr. Carlisle can further afford to meet in any other way than by the taking of testimony all over his District. Thoebe claims that he is elected by over six hundred majority, and that Mr. Carlisle conceeded his election but that the returns from the outlying counties in his District were withheld and then boldly and wholly altered and changed to meet the democratic emergency and save Mr. Carlisle's seat for him. Of the fact that no reliance can be placed on election returns in many democratic districts in the south, where it is necessary to elect a demorcatic member of Congress, we have not a particle of doubt. We don't think any intelligent, fair-minded man, who has studied southern politics since the for election returns from that locality, and herein lies a danger and menance to our free institutions greater than open refor the great city of Omaha. How Men Die.

If we know all the methods of approach adopted by an enemy we are the better enabled to ward off the danger and postpone the moment when surrender becomes inevitable. In many instances the inherent strength of the body suffices to enable it to oppose the tendency toward death. Many however have lost these forces to such an extent that there is little or no help. In other cases a little aid to the weakened lungs will make all the difference between sudden death and many years of useful life. Herbert Spencer at Tennis.

It is curious to think of Mr. Herbert Spencer's playing tennis. One would have as soon expected to see Carlyle at battledoor and shuttlecock. A few years ago, however, Mr. Spencer used frequently to lay down his pen and lift a racquet, an hour's writing, and it became quite a common thing with him to seek relaxacame so much of an invalid Mr. Spencer also went a good deal to the theatre-always to the pit, into which he enjoyed aghting his way .- Book Lore.

Naming His Drink.

Why did I ask that gentleman what he would have when I know that he has drank nothing but whisky and lemon for twenty years? Because it is our policy always to ask the question. Suppose that came in, and without saying a word I would put up whisky and lemon, what would you think? Why, you would say to yourself, "That man is an old stager here. There is no need of asking him what he wants; they know him." So we always make it a point to go through the form of asking the customer to name his driak.-Barkeeper in Globe-Democrat.

Slapping a Lady's Face.

It has gotten to be a common thing for small sums of money to be transferred by cable between New York and London. A $20 order may be flashed ander the Atlantic from New York in ample time to serve as a shopping fund in London the same afternoon. And the transfer is cheaper and easier now, not to say doubly more speedy, than it was a few years ago to send ten times the amount. Few people realize how closely the great cities of the world are connected by chained lightning and how cosmopolitan civilized humanity has become. The telegraph companies do this sort of banking business by wire every day between the cities of America. But it won't send $1, nor $1,000 at any price across the ocean. Banks wiri cable money in large amounts, or for valued customers, but only at a cost prohibitive to modern pocketbooks. The great banking houses will not transfer a smaller sum than £10, and then only at the rate of $5 per pound sterling, irrespective of current rates of exchange. After adding the cable tolls the operation becomes impracticable. But it remains a fact that much Mississippi and Carolina plan went into smaller sums are cabled across the pond effect, has any confidence in or respect daily and weekly and monthly without difficulty by people who know how to English theatrical people playing engagements in New York, or anywhere in the United States, constantly sent a regular percentage of their salaries to friends or agents in the old country for domestic use or investment. Constantly on the go, and accustomed to the use or telegraphing for every day purposes, the slow process of transmission by mail soon becomes irksome to them. They founded the system of cabling money to the other side, and it has already grown to a most interesting proportion. They do it through their steamship agency.—Philadelphia Press.

Apprentice in the Social School.

The awkward undergraduate, who has come from a farm and struggled manfully for years to gain an education, who is popular among his fellows, has mastered science and languages and been crowned victor on commencement day. finds all his triumphs turn to ashes on his lips when he enters a parlor filled with young women.

They know each other, they are at their ease together, but he is outside. He is in terror lest he shall say or do something contrary to those triffing rules of etc quette of which he is ignorant, but which they have known since their childhood.

Sometimes this dread leads him to assume an air of haughty reserve, or he tries to hide his diffidence under a familiar swagger. Both these pretenses are useless and yulgar, and make him aggressively disagreeable as well as awkward. In this, as in every difficulty in life, it is best for him to face the truth. He does the throat or lungs, give that old and labor under a real disadvantage. No matter what his acquirements or moral worth, if he does not know how to manage his hands and feet, to use his forks and glasses at dinner, to modulate his voice and control his eyes, well bred people will be prejudiced against him.

Close and quick observation will soon teach him these trivial rules. In the meantime let him be content to keep in the background. If an apprentice in the reads or hears, practical experience is social school be quiet, gentle and sincere every day teaching that the words given | in his manner, and a good listener, very with Dr. Watson's Special Cough Cure, few people will notice how he breaks his is practically relieving the physicians bread or uses his napkin.-Youth's Com-

Berby Hats a Nulsance.

"I wish you'd tell me of anything in the world," said the young man that boards on South Division street, "that is worse than the stiff brimmed hats worn by the men of this generation. "What fault have you to find with the stiff hat?" asked the Arounder.

"Well, there is one fault that outvillainies all the rest, and that is the difficulty a fellow with a stiff brimmed hat on make a sally, and when within two inches of the goal your hat brim strikes Clarissa on the forehead and stops you. Nine times out of ten your hat is knocked off and falls on the porch with a great racket, which makes you ridiculous. A fellow that has been caught so once or twice always takes care to set his hat on the back of his head before trying to kiss a girl, and then he has some chance. When a girl sees her companion push his hat to the back of his head she needs to be on her guard. He is bent on mischief."-Buffalo Courier.

Character in the Ears.

I have often felt, too, that something of a man's nature could be determined by his cars-their shape and their hang, if I may put it that way. I have noticed that wide, heavy jawed and stolid criminals, and even men of intelligence of this make up, have small ears which lie close to their heads. These men are not to be trifled with, and they only appreciate the pressure of force or of mind when they feel it. The lantern jawed and flappy eared are easily read and handled. The most desperate criminals, whether of the higher or lower order, are of the former class, while the petty thieves and men of light mental caliber are generally of the flappy eared genus. I think, too, that something can be told of a person's nature by his gait in walking. I do know that much can be determined by the carriage of the head, just the same as the jockey or horse faucier tells the nature and spirit of a horse by head poise,--Inspector Byrnes in New York World.

Unfortunately the masher is not the only ma'e nulsance in Brooklyn. A distant and much more offensive relative of his is the unknown ruffian, who, a few months ago, made his practices, although not his personality, notorious by maliciously soiling expensive gowns with tobacco juice in the neighborhood of Dr. Talmage's church. A few nights ago an equally offensive and ruffically, but much more practical and dangerous, individual made his appearance on Fulton street. His victim was a young lady who resides within easy walking distance of the bridge. She had crossed from New York in a bridge car between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening and was walking up Fulton street alone, not dreaming of insult and still less of violence on that thoroughfare at so early an hour. Less than half a block above Sands street she received a sharp, stinging slap on the face. She turned, surprised and frightened, and saw that her assailant was a well dressed, gentlemanly looking fellow. "I beg your pardon, miss," he said, "it was a mistake," and he darted off without another

A dozen men witnessed the assault, but the only one who took apparent notice of it confined his attention to the young lady and not to her assailant. "Oh, that was a terrible blow, miss; did it hart you?" he said. "Yes," replied the still frightened and confused girl, and wishing to avoid further notice she hurried away, wondering, when she began to collect her senses, if the man who slapped her face really mistook her for an acquaintance, and, if so, why he chose to greet an acquaintance in so startling a fashion. She learned all about it when she reached home, for she then discovered that the fellow had stolen from her ear a valuable earring. "Did I report the occurrence to the police?" she said to the Rambler, after he had heard her story. "No, of course I didn't. That wouldn't bring back my earring, and besides I don't think you would find many girls of your acquaintance who would care to see their names in the newspapers in connection with such an occurrence. I am glad enough that notoriety hasn't been added to my fright and my loss, but I don't think I shall ever feel safe again when I am out alone after dark."—"Rambler" in Brooklyn Eagle.

The Distance of the Stars.

The distance of the star Alpha Centauri may be stated in round numbers to be 20,000,000,000,000 of miles. Now, a billion means a million of millions, so that the distance of Alpha Centauri may be stated to be twenty millions of millions of miles. Let us now try to form some conception, however imperfect, of the amazing distance. Let us suppose a railway train to leave the carth traveling day and night at the rate of fifty miles an hour without stoppages. In six months it would reach the moon, in 200 years it would reach the sun and in 6,000 years it would reach the planet Neptune, the orbit of which forms the extreme known limit of the planetary system. The same train, however, would not reach the star Alpha Centauri in less Than 42,000,000 years.

One more illustration may be useful. Comets, in general, revolve in very eccentric orbits. When a comet is in the perihelion of its orbit it is comparatively near to the earth; on the other hand, when it is at the aphelion it is remote—in many instances very remote-from the earth For instance, the celebrated comet of 1858, known as Donati's comet, one of the greatest comets of modern times, at the time of its passage of the perihelion was distant from the sun 50,000,000 miles; but when it has attained the aphelion of its orbit (which will occur in about 1,000 years nercafter, its distance from the earth will not be less than 30,000,000,000 miles. Now our typical railway train starting from the earth would not reach the aphelion of the orbit of Donati's comet in less than 60,-000 years, and yet the aphelion distance of Donati's comet is only one seven-hundredth part of the distance from the earth to Alpha Centauri, the nearest of the fixed stars.-Good Words,

Jewish Highlanders in the Caucasus. The Caucasian Jews are inordinately fond of green stuff, consuming it in quantities that amaze a stranger. In partaking of food, as in the mode of service, the old Jewish customs are strictly followed. A wooden platter (or, if a guest be present, a handsome copper dish) is placed upon a carpet on the floor. On this are set two cakes of unleavened bread covered with a cloth-woolen on ordinary occasions, but of silk on Sabbaths and festivals. Sait, onions, garlie and fruit are ranged round the bread, and all sit down upon the floor. The master pours water over his two hands, recites a blessing, then uncovers the bread, breaks the upper loaf into as many pieces as there are males present, and gives each one piece. The pieces are dipped into salt three times and caten. The second loaf is then served in like fashion and distributed among the females. The mistress of the house brings in the first dish herself; then, if a stranger be present, veils and withdraws. Every-thing is put on table, or rather on the floor, at once; and it is customary to take a little of each dish served. When roast meats are caten, a sharpened piece of wood is employed as an aid to the fingers, but ordinarily fingers alone are de rigneur. Morning Walk in the City.

perience any intoxicating effects.—St. James' Gazette.

Somebody is always asking why business men do not more generally walk part of the way to their business every morning. There are several good reasons why they do not. First of all, they are apt to have half a bucket of water thrown on them by some beedless Jeames, who always sets apart 9 a. m., or thereabouts, as the proper time to wash the sidewalks. Then they will probably have to walk past three or four lordly gentlemen's ge tlemen who are engaged in knocking dust out of the familiar door mat striking it against a lamp post. These are the dangers that menace the morning walker in the side streets. Nor is he any better off when he gets to a business av enne. By a sort of sagred tradition, about half the shops on such avenues are violently swept out at exactly the hour when business men are going down town, and the only way to escape from the in-
