CITY CORDIALS.

Frank Carruth is reported sick today.

A new iron roof will be put on the county court house in a few days.

Three or four strangers are being "shadowed" in this city today. They will be arrested tonight. Particulars tomorrow.

"Conscientiously speaking," every member of the Stuart Co. act their part "conscientiously" of the well-merited applause they nightly receive.

Words of praise are heard on all sides concerning the ability and pleasure derived from witnessing the performances now being given by the Stuart Co. in this city.

The spring examination of teachers, when those successful, will receive a certificate of competency good for one year, will take place in this city, Saturday, March 17.

In addition to the amount received for admission to the Christian church social last night, there was ten dollars that was subscribed before that event. This makes the total amount $64.70.

The Frank Carruth Canning Co., of this city are getting things in readiness for an early commencement in this line. In a few days they will erect an engine house and a two-story addition at the rear of the present building.

"Silence that bell," said Othello when he visited Cyprus. We wish he could assume mortal form again and repeat the same words with authority to the boys going around announcing the auction of Duke's hardware stock.

It makes a person constipated to see columns of matter in a newspaper devoted to such subjects as "Why your face aches," "Why your head aches," "Why your heart aches." If those writers could feel the world of poverty, sorrow and inhumanity, there would be an end to those complaints.

J. B. Stroh of Lincoln and M. A. Hartigan of this city, have been retained as counsel in the suit of Mrs. Armstrong against Webber & Breckenfeld and Fred Goos, liquor dealers and their bondsmen. It is understood that a vigorous defense will be made. The plaintiff claims damages in the sum of $1,000 for selling liquor to her husband.

M. A. Hartigan, attorney for Sarah Cole, of Weeping Water, brought two suits in the District Court on Tuesday. One against the Commercial Bank of Weeping Water for $600. The other against James M. Cole for the sum of $1,000. A money judgment is prayed in both cases.

The sociable given by the ladies of the Christian church last night was a recherche affair, highly appreciated, well attended, and a grand financial success, especially when we consider that the admission was only ten cents. Fifty-four dollars and seventy cents was received by the committee as a reward for their unostentatious and generous endeavors to promote the welfare of their church.

"Give us the job!" No, sir! you represent free trade and advocate the idea in your paper that I should be free to go anywhere and get my work done at the lowest price. I believe in protection, especially the protection of home industries, therefore, I have left my order with THE HERALD for 1,000 letter heads. This is an actual conversation that took place today in this city and needs no comment.

It would be a good idea for the two young men who broke into the engine room of the High school last Sunday afternoon, to go and pay the school authorities for the lock of the engine room door which they broke in their endeavor to imitate the actions of Vidocq, Claude Duval, Jack Sheppard and the other braves of dime novel journalism. Your names are known and you had better "square" this matter.

The gentleman representing the silverware house, made a ridiculous bluff when he wouldn't pay the peddler's license fee, day before yesterday, and then plead guilty on his trial. The license costs ten dollars—his fine was twenty. If he had not plead guilty he could have appealed the case, although the validity of the ordinance was proved in a test case brought before the supreme court some years ago by Mr. Bennett of this city.

While strolling around the city last night our reporter heard "strains of music that (he) never will forget." A lady was singing "Still so gently o'er me stealing, memory brings back the feeling." These words usually suggest thoughts of love. The last time the writer heard them was when marching past a murderer, whose limp body was swaying backwards and forwards on the scaffold that was erected on an open plain. It was a military execution, and the band played the above selection.

CONCERNING CONFUCIUS

The "Joss House" of the Modern Chloride-of-Lime Manipulator.

A peculiar and amusing pictorial contrast of paganism and Christianity, can be viewed in a corner of the rat hole used as a laundry on Main street, and rented by a gentleman bearing the euphonious cognomen of Quong Lee. A wooden frame, that resembles those in use in barber shops, but minus the mirror, hangs on the wall, and pasted on the back are pieces of red paper, on which are the usual tea-chest inscriptions. In each corner at the top of the frame are some painted Chinese paper figures. The one on the left resembles a young fellow taking his sweetheart to Rural park. It is summer, and you hear the balmy breezes waft their spice-laden essence through the branches of a-la. In this scene there is a full-blown rose, as big as the figures, on which the gent is trying to seat the young lady. In the other corner are two gentlemen. One is Confucius, who is represented in the act of shaking hands with John L. Sullivan. On each side are articles that resemble red bullrushes with a Chinese nocturne in green, picturing Pharaoh's daughter diving into a lot of red sand for a wax Moses. In front of this delirium are placed a lot of written spells and potions, rolled up so as to remind one of the modern method of adjusting pins in a pad, when offered for sale, instead of the old way of affixing them in a length of paper. In the interstices of the roll of paper are stuck pieces of red and very small red wax tapers, which have been burnt, and have the same drunken, demoralized appearance that an ordinary tallow candle has, when the wick leans over on one side and the person carrying it keeps it at an angle of forty-five degrees. On one side of this altar is an illustration of two young ladies peeping through a key-hole at another lady standing deshabille in front of a mirror (salvo pudore) admiring some article of wearing apparel. On the other side is a Sunday School card on which is printed some pretty flowers, and the inscription, "Reward of Merit." Added to this conglomeration are two kerosine lamps, which are kept burning, like the fires of the Zoroastrians, night and day. We do not presume to understand whether this form of worship will enable a Chinaman to reach the Kingdom of Heaven, because although not physically equal to the Christian, still the heathen had civilized ideas ages before christianity was known, and Dr. Watts says: "If I was as tall to reach the pole, or mete the ocean with my span, I must be measured by my soul, the mind the standard of the man." And we are certain from personal observation that the heathen worships

"With a heart as sincere as do you, Though his temple is only the forest, And it's covering, heaven's deep blue; Though his altar perchance has a victim And his rites are all barbarous, too, And the forms and legends he heedeth Are those that his forefathers knew."

Spring poems of Plattsmouth's prosperity are rapidly approaching. Two houses have been erected the last few days near Eleventh and Pearl and a good many more in the suburbs of the city.

The supreme court has given a decision in a case where the holder of a liquor license was convicted of violation of the law pertaining to the sale of intoxicating liquors, that the mayor and city council were authorized and required to revoke the license; that no notice to the licensee of such proposed action was necessary; and that such revocation could be declared by resolution, and that the passage of an ordinance was not necessary. Section 92, chapter 13, compiled statutes of 1887, was held constitutional.

The foregoing refers to one of the test cases decided by Judge Chapman in the Lancaster district court at the last term. The saloon keepers of the capital city disputed the power of the city council to revoke a license under section 92 of the law governing cities of the second class and the supreme court, it appears, uphold the decision of Judge Chapman.

As per announcement, the Plattsmouth Glee club gave an entertainment in the Congregational church at Arlington last Monday evening. This club has quite a reputation in the state, but their singing surpassed the expectation of our citizens, and should they ever visit our town again there will be a larger turnout to listen to them. The church was not packed, but it was as full as desirable for comfort. We heard but little of the singing, on account of not being able to return home from Fremont until a late hour; but judging from what we did hear and from expressions from others, we pronounce the entertainment a grand success.—The People's Defender.

Louisville Local

Louisville is looking for a boom.

DEAR EDITOR.—Thinking you might find space for a short communication from this town, I decided to venture a few lines on trial. Everything is beginning to doff its winter robe, and assume a spring-like appearance. The quarries which have been buried in their winter graves, have again resumed work to the great satisfaction of many. The pottery, also, has begun work again with a full force, and now our workmen are happy as they hear the "sweetness long drawn out" at 7 o'clock a. m. Carpenters are busy, as several new buildings are in course of construction. We welcome Mr. O. Guthman and his bakery and his bakery which is a thing greatly needed in town. Mr. Rimel's singing class is a success and is largely attended. The oyster supper under the auspices of the ladies' aid society, on Tuesday evening, was a grand success, financially. If this escapes the waste basket I will try again. SMIRK.

Tenante-Colonel Honorario do Exercito Brazilienco, O'Glorioso, Santo Antonio. That fellow has been dead for the past fourteen years, but the government pays to his heirs, through the hands of the Prior of the Monastery de Santo Antonio on the Morro, $240,000 annually. Our Sanskrit editor translates the above crack-jaw to read: "Honorary lieutenant-colonel of the Brazilian Army, the glorious St. Antony." The body of a man with such a name should be galvanized and then everlastingly used for drilling artesian wells.

She Insulted the Emperor. A little girl of Metz, 14 years old, named Louise Fuchs, has just been condemned to eight days' imprisonment for having insulted the emperor of Germany. The insult consisted in writing a private letter to one of her little friends, in which there was something disrespectful to his majesty. Such sentences are said to be quite common in Alsace-Lorraine.—Chicago News.

6. The only addition to the city reached by two established avenues.
7. The only new addition to the city reached by water mains and with a prospect of being supplied in the near future with complete water privileges.
8. New sidewalks recently constructed to within a few feet of the addition and will shortly be extended.
9. Will certainly have street car privileges at no distant date.
