The "neutrality" that the brotherhood of engineers are talking about so much these days reminds one irresistibly of the neutrality of Kentucky in 1861.

The editor of the Journal works himself up into an unwonted frenzy over our comments about his men striking for better pay, and has the impudent gall to deny the charge, and insist that THE HERALD is lying about him etc.

It is not surprising that a tally of the House reveals a majority against the Mills tariff reduction bill. It is destined to a speedy death as soon as it comes fairly before the House, and none of its friends will be able to show that it deserves a better fate.

The new Bulgarian coinage is to be struck in England. The order is for $600,000 worth of small coins. Two English firms have tendered contracts.

THE WAIL OF FREE TRADE. The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the London breadstuffs market for 1887, calls attention to the fact that imports of flour are destroying the milling business in Great Britain.

The tables given show that the London receipts of foreign and domestic wheat were 3,036,051 quarters, while the receipts of flour were 3,322,558 quarters, and of this quantity 2,069,386 sacks of 280 pounds each add 10,380 barrels of 196 pounds were of foreign flour.

This is one more nail in the coffin of the British miller, but that does not matter much. Uncle Sam is the only man who can fasten it down.

It is to be understood, of course, that the imports at London alone differ materially from the imports into the whole kingdom. But British imports from the United States in 1887 amounted to 30,504,000 cwt., against 25,280,000 cwt., from all other countries, while the imports of flour were 14,873,000 cwt., from the United States, against 3,183,000 cwt., from all other countries.

Thus it appears that the United States has not only increased its shipments to Great Britain largely, but to some extent at the expense of other countries, at the same time increasing in shipments relatively far more in flour than in wheat.

Health Hints for Winter. An old observer says: "The secret of good health in winter lies in two things—first, in breathing through the nose, and second in keeping the feet warm."

Calcutta's Botanical Garden. The Royal Botanic garden, of Calcutta, has just completed the first century of its existence. It practically established the now flourishing tea industry of that country.

The Medical society of New York state last year hunted up eighty-five illegal medical practitioners, who were humbugging ignorant people out of their money.

WINTER REHEARSALS FOR EQUESTRIANS AND THEIR HORSES.

Mile. Throughtheoops' Daily Lesson—A Mechanical Contrivance to Save Her from Falling—Why Riders Prefer White Horses for the Ring.

There is the usual circus ring in the center of the barn like building. On two or three sides of the ring are rows of narrow box stalls, in which the trained horses have their homes.

Not a bit, my boy; bays or blacks or chestnuts would do equally well, but the riders like the white ones best. Why? Oh, because they like to keep up the illusion of the ring. See, there's the reason why white horses are used so generally.

While this explanation of the petty deception was being given, the professor's assistants had got the "mechanic" into trim. That "mechanic" looked more like a galloway than anything else.
