CITY CORDIALS.

George Malterson, of South Bend, is in the city. Mrs. T. H. Knotts, of Des Moines, Iowa, is in the city visiting relatives. Mrs. Harrison, the wife of Phil Harrison, the well-known poultry-raiser, has gone to Omaha today. Conductor B. M. Loverin and family are back from a visit East where Mr. Loverin has been visiting his brother. We were informed today that Mr. E. B. Lewis was a candidate for the nomination for City Treasurer, against Mr. Waterman. Mr. R. D. Morgan moves to Milton, Kans., next week. He will run a ferry at that place over the Arkansas river. He runs a ferry over twenty-five years ago. Intimation has been received in this city that two Evangelists, Messrs. W. A. Clegett and Bilhara, who have lately been in Kearney, will arrive in this city next week. We have been informed of two or three important items lately, but are requested not to make them public until further developments. The deal of a "scop" in regard to them, takes away our appetite. Hurry up ladies and gentlemen. Oh! Dan? We'll miss you! It's the wish of all the bachelors in town that you will acquire prosperity and happiness. The event occurs next week in Ottumwa, Iowa. Miss O'Neill the HERALD wishes you a bright and prosperous future. Don't forget to make your husband's Coffee strong and sweet. The brother of Mr. Pickens, the engineer on the Central Pacific is dead. He died before Mr. Pickens of this city arrived at Sacramento, Cal. Mr. Pickens has started from Ogden with his brother's body, which will be buried in Chicago. We feel the deepest sympathy for Mr. Pickens in his sad afflictions. We met a gentleman yesterday who had formerly been in the lumber business. He had tried to work out the telegraph pole problem that we published in Tuesday's issue. He said that he had measured wood in almost every shape but that problem puzzled him. He made the answer 7 1/2 feet. We should like to hear from someone else that is not a professional teacher. The music for Roland Reed performance will be exceptionally first class, entirely new, having been procured by I. Kalisky for the occasion. Repertoire being as follows: "Eureka Overture" by Weigand, "Standard Overture" by Weigand, Comet Solo viola and piano accompaniment, Madley, "Hush little baby, don't you cry," Galop. The company has a very fine leader to assist the orchestra. Don't fail to secure your tickets, as present prospects indicate a large house. A minister and a lawyer, both residents of this city, were joking the other day. Said the minister, addressing the lawyer: "If everyone were to settle their differences among themselves, what would become of all the lawyers?" "We would act like St. Paul, arise and fight in the cause of the Lord," was the lawyer's witty reply. To understand the point of this joke, it was intended to convey the meaning that the ministerial ranks would be over crowded, then what would become of the ministers. St. Paul, before he became an apostle, is credited by historians with having been a very able lawyer. Mr. Roland Reed is the second of the tractions this handsome new theatre has had. As the central figure of Marsden's "Check" he took immensely well with a large audience last evening. He has elaborated this creation to a point which makes it practically a new thing. When he is on the stage there is no dull moment in the piece. His amusing and natural impudence convulses the house. The supporting company have been well selected as to personnel, and there is in particular one lady who plays a designing adventuress so well that it is life-like in its fidelity, and almost ranks as a well-studied portraiture with that of the star. -New York Morning Journal. Quite a number of persons in this city have had notices served upon them to lay down new sidewalks. The first notice that should have been served should have been to the property holders near the northwest corner of Fourth and Main. None have yet been served at that point which is the worst place in town. The responsible parties have hitherto borne a good reputation for keeping the sidewalk in good order and say that they will put down a walk as soon as the sewerage and paving is done. Well, gentlemen on behalf of the feminine gender, repair the walk, so that it won't give a lot of hoodlums the opportunity to guff away at the discomfort of ladies when they step on that water-trap.

Only a Washboard. In our wanderings down Main street, yesterday, we passed a second-hand store, outside of which was placed a washboard, on which was chalked: "10c." If that washboard could be sold at a profit for ten cents it would have been bought for about five. And what a vista of misery and suffering does such an item suggest. Washerwomen and laundry women, as a rule, are looked down upon with contempt by those who do not follow that business. But there is no class that is more deserving of a good name than those "who take in washing."

The business is not inherited, it comes about by a natural progression of inevitable laws, commonly termed poverty. The woman may have held a high position in society, been wealthy and courted for her intellect. The husband, in many cases, may belong to a noble family, be educated, and a smart man. But poverty gives him and his family a smack in the face, and what is the alternative? He can't procure work; the wife says, "We'll take in washing." They do so. Their patrons "stand them off." Want comes in at the door of their miserable abode and they sell their furniture, including the "washboard."

Oh! ye, who have never felt the pangs of hunger, and adversity, do you ever realize the sufferings of worthy poor. In the depths of winter you throw off your dirty, and in many cases, disgusting linen, for the washerwoman. Articles that you are ashamed to expose to the view of your most intimate acquaintances. The washerwoman leans her weary shoulders over the washtub, inhaling the fumes arising from the rags she is washing. She retires to rest about midnight. The work is finished,—the child requires medicine—the family want food. Knock at the front door. "Go round to the back, we've visitors to night." She goes round to the back. They count the pieces. Say there is one short and complain generally about the appearance of the articles at fifty cents a dozen, and wind up by saying "call round Saturday and I will pay you."

The woman returns home without perhaps a mite, and as it is late at night, she is insulted once or twice by hoodlums. Her husband or child asks her if she got any money, no, she answers, "They told me to call, Saturday." If there is any human being who proposes to be a Christian, who expects that they will enter the Kingdom of Heaven, that beats their washerwoman with indifference or contempt or "stands them off," then such a person is a foul blot on the face of human nature. There are such people, and they will exist in spite of newspaper articles and biblical teachings, but our mission is to expose them if possible, and we will exert our best efforts to do so, for when a person can witness such an advertisement in a "free country" and the "glorious west" as "washboard 10c" it proves there is something rotten in the state of Denmark.

A Brave Engineer. "None of the passengers killed? That's good; lay me down; good-bye, boys." Such were the last words of Engineer Robert Gardner, who died at his locomotive throttle on Sunday night last in the railroad collision near Huntington. He could have saved himself, but he was charged with the safety of many passengers and he died at his post to save those whose lives were entrusted to his care. When he saw that a fearful collision was inevitable, he thought only of the responsible duty he had accepted, and he stood to his throttle and gave his own life to lessen the peril to the strangers who were in his care. He weakened the crash of the collision by standing heroically at the post of duty, and when he was extricated from the wreck, mortally crushed and mangled, he thought only of the others committed to his care. When told that none of the passengers were killed, his last words were: "That's good; lay me down; good by, boys."

We keep green the memories of those who seek and win fame on the field of battle, but where in all the bloody conflict of armies is there exhibited the grander courage that gives life to duty and to the safety of others, when life should be saved by peril to others? In all the stories of heroism there is none more illustrious than the hero of the throttle, who, having saved his passengers by sacrificing his own life, when told of the safety of those entrusted to his fidelity, sank to rest saying: "That's good; lay me down; good by, boys." -Philadelphia Times.

F. W. Riddle, of Wahoo, is in town with the object of purchasing the Perkins House. There are two persons in town now with the same object in view, namely, the starting of an hotel. There's money in it. Its a Riddle who will get there first.

A Story for Vivisectionists. A physician, who was also a professor in a medical college, was engaged for a great part of his time in the vivisection of animals. He had a little daughter of whom he was very fond, who was tenderly devoted to him. He resorted to all sorts of methods to prevent her from learning of his chief occupation. She grew to the age of 14 without any knowledge of the fact. One day she was visited by another girl, of her own age, who, with tears in her eyes, said she had lost her white greyhound. "What shall we do to find her?" the visitor asked. "Oh, I know," said the doctor's daughter, "we will go to the college and get papa, and he will help us find her, for you know there's no time to be lost."

The two girls started for the Medical college. A careless doorkeeper let them into the laboratory where the professor was at work. They saw two students standing over a table, and the young girl's father, the doctor, was engaged in the work of dissection upon a living dog, which was none other than the lost greyhound. "Leda!" screamed the dog's mistress. The poor animal heard the call, roused itself and sprang away from its tormentors. It was unable to stand and sank again to the floor. The dog's mistress screamed and rushed away from the room. But the professor's daughter remained, a still as death, her eyes wide open and staring at her father. Just as he, looking up, perceived what had happened, he saw his daughter sinking down in a faint. He sprang to her and seized her in his arms. She did not recover consciousness for two days, and was then in a terrible fever. Recovering from the fever, it was found that she had well nigh lost her reason. She will, the narrator of the story says, probably always be the victim of monomania. -Boston Transcript

Manufacture of Cheap Shirts. Shirts wearing a decent air are seen in many a window marked at fifty-nine cents. An inquiry was made of a shirtmaker as to how it was possible to make and sell a shirt with linen bosoms and cuffs for so low a price. Here is the paradoxical answer: "It is and is not possible. It is possible when the work is done in institutions. Beautiful work is done in the great charitable institutions. Manufacturers are glad to employ them. Shirts they can have made there for twenty-five cents a dozen. This cheap work done by institutions is one of the greatest evils that the working woman has to contend against. Shirts are also made by women in their homes for twenty-five cents a dozen. Such women are not self-supporting, but they eke out their husbands' incomes in this way, and can afford to work for less than the working woman. These cheap shirts are also sold work. The cotton is weighted with lime, and when washed could be used for a strainer. The bosoms are made of what is called union linen, which is not linen at all, but a French cotton that can be bought for twelve cents a yard, and is accessible only to great manufacturers. It takes a high polish when laundered, and cannot be detected. Of course, it doesn't wear. But no manufacturer producing shirts in his factory in the regular way can afford to make and sell shirts for that price. -New York Evening Sun.

The British Magazine Rifle. The magazine rifle selected for the use of the British army was recently put through a series of tests to measure its accuracy, penetration, range, etc. The dilatoriness of the English seems to have stood them in good stead this time, for while the Germans are discarding the "Mauser-70-86" magazine rifle scarcely a twelve month after its adoption, because of its caliber (11 mm.), they have benefited by the experience, and pin their faith to a caliber nearly one-third smaller. The new gun weighs no more than the Martini-Henry, which, modified more or less, has been in continual use in the British army for seventeen years. It has a detachable magazine placed in front of the trigger guard and holding eight rounds, with one more rammed home in the breech, making nine. When one magazine is exhausted it is detached with a single movement and another snapped on. The powder is compressed on the Swiss system, with the result that smaller and lighter bullets may be used. The soldier will be able to carry 115 rounds, where before he had only seventy. Still better, the trajectory is flat and the range much greater than that of the old style rifle. -Scientific American.

6. The only addition to the city reached by two established avenues.
7. The only new addition to the city reached by water mains and with a prospect of being supplied in the near future with complete water privileges.
8. New sidewalks recently constructed to within a few feet of the addition and will shortly be extended.
9. Will certainly have street car privileges at no distant date.
10. If you wish a fine view of the river, locate on a lot in South Park.
11. If you wish a slightly and picturesque view of Plattsmouth, it can be had from a South Park lot.
