AN APRIL DAY.

A soft wind has blown all day. The sky has been now sunny, now specked with fleecy clouds, now black and threat cning. Quick showers at intervals have chased each other, followed by bursts of brightest sunshine, and g impses of ethertal blue as deep and brilliant as any summer sky can show. The earth lies bare and brown as yet, but one can almost feel it palpitate with eager longing to say "yes" to the bold sun's ardent wooing. The quickening life under its yielding crust makes itself felt, though not yet seen. We can almost hear the whispered answer of the tiny grass-blades to the impatient skies that coax and threat en them : "We are coming ! A little more sunshine, please; a few more warm and soaking showers, and you shall see our shining leat-blades stretching upward at your call."

Along the edges of the reads, and bordering every moister hollow, a faint and lovely green gives promise of swift coming verdure. The trees have taken on a new expression. Yesterday they looked dead and frozen. Today the sap is flowing, and has reached the top-most limit of the slenderest twig that trembles on their branches. A warm glow of tender color has mounted with it and the whole tree is instinct with new life. It seems to throb from root to crown with the vital current that permeates its every tissue The cattle sniff the mellow air with keenest relish. They know the signs good Mother Earth employs to herald summer plenty. The birds know too. See ! Yonder fly the robin and the meadow lark, come now to stay, and to nest and raise their brood. Who told them spring was here ? The tiny creatures know some things that man can never fathom. The mariner needs chart and compass to find his way across the ocean. These little birds fly through the broad expanse that circles earth and sea alike, across wide continents and over flowing rivers, straight to their summer homes, without such helps.

Even the flies are stirring. There buzzes one against the window, come from who knows where ? This one has doubtless slept through the winter's cold in some snug corner out of reach of broom and dust-cloth, till he, too, knew that spring was here. By what subtle instinct are flies informed of changing seasons ?

All living things rejoice in spring time. The cock crows with an exultant note as different from his winter call as sunrise is from sunset. The hens cluck with twice the usual fuss over every new laid Neb. Name this paper in your order.

Oyster Shells in Medicines.

Dr. Peter Hood, of London, in a communito The Lancet, calls attention to an published by him in the same journal ne twenty years ago, on the value of calum carbonate in the form of calcined oyer shells, as the means of arresting the rowth of cancerous tumors. In the case which he then reported, that of a lady mearly 80 years old, the growth sloughed away and left a healthy surface after a ourse of the remedy in question, as much as would lie on a shilling being taken once or twice a day in a little warm water or tea. He now reports another case of schirrus of the breast, in the wife of a physician, in which the treatment was followed by an arrest of the growth and a cessation of the pain, the improvement having now lasted for years, and no excrudescence having thus far occurred. Dr. Hood says that the remely can do no harm, and that the prima facie evidence in its favor is certainly tronger than that on which rests the use of chian turpentine, so eagerly resorted to by the profession. He would restrict the trials to well marked cases of schirrus, and no benefit should be looked for in less than three months .- New York Tribune.

Quietness of Italian Resorts.

The Italians, as a class, are most polite and good natured. They are very curious, but their curiosity is never annoying. I do not think there is any country on the continent where the visiting royalties could be as free as they are here at San Remo. When the young princesses here go out to walk they are never followed about, nor are they ever stared at by even the peasants. They look at them with kindly interest and politely tsuch their hats, but they are never obtrusive. The watering place manners of England will bear no comparison with the quietness and gentleness of the people in the neighborhood of Italian resorts. The royal princesses of England cannot visit any of the sea places of Eng.and and attempt to walk in public without being followed by such a mob as to force them at once "into retirement.-T. C.
