A Mother's Advice to Her Son.

Sit down by the side of your mother my boy, you have only a moment I know, but you'll stay till I give my parting advice-it is all that I have to bestow. You'll leave us to seek for employment my boy; by the world you are yet to be tried, but of all the temptations and struggles you make, may your heart in right! hold fast to the right! wherever your footsteps may roam, but forsake -Our advertisers gets the benefit once not the truth of salvation, my boy, that merning. you've learnt from your mother at home. You'll find in your satchel a bible, my boy, 'tis the book of all others the best, it helps you to live, it helps you to die, it leads to the gates of the blest. Your father is coming, to bid you good-bye. O, how lonely and sad we shall be, when far from the scenes of your childhood and youth, you'll think of your father and me. Now, I want you to feel every word that I've said, for it came from the depths of my love, and, my boy, if we never behold you on earth, will you promise to meet us above.

A Penitentiary Sollloquy.

It's curious, now isn't it Billy, the changes that twelve months may bring; last year I was at Saratoga as happy and as rich as a king, I was raking in pools on the races, feeing the waiters with X's, nipping my juleps by twilight, and today I'm here in the pen. What led me to do it? Ah! what always leads men to destruction and crime, the "prodigal son" whom you've heard of, has altered somewhat in his time. Last night as I sat and pondered, on the end of my evil ways, there 'rose like a plantom before me, of my childish and boyhood days, I stood on the hill, then again I thought of my mother-of my mother who taught anticipations of manhood are blasted at

Spring, Beautiful Spring

The following essay on spring was wrote by a little boy, but his remarks about the dollar and larg family contain more common sense than many an older head is capable of comprehending. Such spontaneous outbursts of youthful hearts and minds are far more preferable to pedantic or studied phrases :

SPRING

Winter comes before Spring, and when Spring comes flowers, mosses, and nearly everything becomes alive again, and then it gets warmer and warmer untill it gets so warm that we can hardley stand it, and also when spring comes farmers can plow their ground and sow their crops, and when it gets too warm some folks move north and in winter go south again but those folks who go from north to south must have many a dollar to move so far, but I don't think any one who has a very large family does not do such

Last Night's Zezo.

Geo. H. Adams' agility and puns on words were very amusing and novel. Joseph M. Doner beats the world for amusing contortions and grimaces. He would make Widow McCree laugh. Och! hone! The school girl scene was a fine piece of subtle acting. The drill of the young ladies in black costumes was splenformed with exact precision without any whistle-or word of command. The transformation scenery was lovely. The whole performance was chaste and amusing without any rude suggestion or vulgar action. There might have been a little more drapery to suit prudish minds, though "to the pure, all things are pure." Paint your buggy for one dollar, the The house was crowded from pit to the
