CITY CORDIALS.

—Make a note of it, the Board of Trade meets tonight.

—Col. S. N. Stewart will give a very interesting and instructive address tonight at the board of trade meeting.

—"I stood on the bridge at midnight," but I never stood on a pontoon bridge. Well, then, attend the Board of Trade meeting tonight.

—"O, where is my boy tonight?" Do not fret, mother, he is in good company and enjoying himself at the ball given by the ladies of St. Luke's Guild at Fitzgerald's hall.

—The case of Sharpleigh, Cantwell & Co. vs. M. McElwain, constable, was argued and submitted yesterday. This case concerns the property of the Duke hardware stock of this city.

—"Immodest language admits of no defense, for a want of modesty is a want of sense." Paste that in your hat corner-hoodlums, and buckle your lip up two holes when ladies are passing by.

—There was a fire in Cubbison's block, Fairmount, at 2 A. M. yesterday morning. Solomon & Nathan formerly of this city had a store in the block that was burnt out. Their loss in stock is $25,000; insurance $10,000.

—Mathew Arnold, the eminent scholar of London, Eng., died yesterday of heart disease. His father died from a heart trouble medically termed Angina Pectoris, the same complaint from which Gen. McClellan died about three years ago.

—A grievous and most pathetic error, (perhaps fifty), occurred in yesterday's issue. In reference to the location of the pontoon bridge an article read: "Just north of the railroad bridge." It should have been just south of the railroad bridge.

—The Sisterhood of the Earnest Workers of B. L. F. and B. L. E. will give an Overall and Jacket ball at Waterman's opera house, Wednesday evening, April 18. Each engineer and fireman is requested to wear overalls and jackets. —Journal.

—The young ladies of St. Luke's Guild will give a leap year calico-dress ball tonight in Fitzgerald's hall, the proceeds to be devoted to the benefit of the St. Luke's Episcopal church. Admission ten cents. Supper twenty-five cents. Tickets for ball, one dollar.

—The young May moon is beaming love, and the stars are brightly peeping love, and the best of all ways to lengthen your days, is to steal a few hours from the night, my dear." If you wish to follow this prescription of Tom Moore's, attend the ball at Fitzgerald's hall tonight. Admission from ten cents to a dollar. Take supper, 25c; go without, 0.

—A peculiar incident in relation to the death of the late Wm. Tucker was the presentation of his elder son, who was living in Missouri at the time, he heard of his father's death before that sad occurrence happened. He dreamed one night that he saw his father lying dead on a bedstead with a cloth covered over his face. In the vision he saw the room and all its surroundings quite distinctly. On his arrival in this city, three weeks after he sorrowfully found his dream verified to the minutest particular.

—At a meeting of the school board a motion was carried to the effect that Prof. Drummond be authorized to take such time as he thought fit for giving appropriate exercises to the scholars for the celebration of Arbor day, Monday, April 23. A sum of money was also granted for the purchase of trees to be planted in the high school grounds. All the children from every school in the city will be present at the high school on that eventful day and as many as possible of our citizens as can attend are politely requested to be present to add a zest to the exercises by their presence.

—Ladies that are lovers of fine dresses, and a good play, should not fail to have their husbands secure reserved seat tickets for "Pearl of Savoy" to be presented at the opera house next Thursday night by the "Eunice Goodrich Company." The play is a strong society comedy-drama, and will test the strength of the entire company, and a display of fine dresses. This being the first appearance of this company in our city, the local management wishes to assure the theatre-going public that the company is first-class, and worthy of your patronage. Playing at peoples popular prices 15, 25, 35, and 50 cents. Every gentleman purchasing a reserved seat ticket, will be presented, free of charge, with one reserved seat ticket for his wife or best girl. The company will also give away during the engagement two real gold watches, one at the Saturday afternoon matinee and one Saturday night. Sale of reserved seats for Thursday night will commence today, price 50 cents. The reserved seat sale for Saturday matinee will begin Friday morning. Matinee prices 10 and 20 cents.

The Welsh Prize Singers.

The Welsh Prize Singers were very poorly patronized last night there being only about one hundred persons, nearly all of whom represented the intellect and refinement of the city. There was no excuse for any person who laid the slightest claim to artistic taste and comprehension of musical sounds to be absent from such an entertainment unless it was sickness, poverty or business. It reflects great discredit on any city when what is vulgarly called a "leg show" can fill every seat in a theatre, and a chaste, intelligent and refining entertainment cannot draw enough people to pay for the rent of the building.

The receipts from that performance will throw a damper on the future efforts on the Y. L. R. R. Association in that direction. Those ladies efforts night and day for the past three weeks, without any recompense, to make the show a success, should have met with the appreciation and support of all our best citizens.

A great deal of the singing would have been received with more favor if it had not been sung in the Welsh tongue, as it was, the soprano song "I'll show you a pathway that leads to that kingdom called home" by Miss Maggie Purvis was beautifully rendered. Every note was deliciously soft and sympathetic, the higher notes being reached with splendid ease and flexibility. Above all, and a usual exception to operatic singing, was the distinct manner in which every word was uttered.

Miss Annie Hope sang the very old ballad of "Punchinello" with its refrain, "Bravo, bravo," with marked effect and delicacy of feeling.

Miss Mary Davies sang "Me and you old Dad" in a manner that attracted intense interest and attention from every one present.

All these songs were loudly applauded, in fact, every selection met with cheerful approbation from an appreciative and critical audience.

The entertainment was par-excellence and beyond the slightest adverse criticism.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Mrs. C. E. Thornburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Tarsch, was in the city yesterday visiting her parents. About five o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Tarsch were making preparations to return with their daughter to Omaha when some friends urgently requested the party to stay in town over-night. The cause of this request was developed later in the evening at the G. A. R. hall where about sixty persons of both sexes including friends and invited guests had assembled to honor the "silver wedding" of Mr. and Mrs. Tarsch. What a noble record and fulfillment of Divine laws! Twenty-five years of happy married life with four children, two daughters and two sons, to bless their union, and gather round them in their declining days.

There were present at the party many a modest youth and blushing maiden to whom that nuptial celebration will be as a guiding star in their future lives.

Such instances of connubial love are the more conspicuous and creditable as the time rolls on and the world appears to become more selfish, as is proved by the innumerable divorce cases which fill the columns of newspapers all over the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Tarsch, may Father Time lay his hand lightly on your brows so that Providence may spare you to celebrate your diamond wedding to add more lustre to the example you set your children and those who regard your mutual course through life with admiration.

Last Saturday's Lawlessness.

We have been severely criticized today because we did not condemn the strikers more severely last night. The reason we did not, was because we wanted to give the officers a chance to arrest the guilty parties, but they were too slow and the men have left for parts unknown. Assaults last week became too numerous on the persons of new engineers, who did not dare come up town after dark without being met by a crowd of three or four strikers, the result of which would be that the engineers would be slugged with a billy by unknown parties. In view of the condition of things the mayor put on two or three extra policemen to see if the law could be enforced and about 8 o'clock policeman Buzzell caught a striker in the act of striking a new engineer, about sixty years old, with a billy; he arrested him and in return was struck by some one in the crowd with a billy, which caused him to let go of the man he had under arrest, who then made good his escape.

Later on in the evening an assault was made on two strangers, who happened to be taking in the city, their heads being badly bruised up with the billys used.

About midnight another assault was made on Mr. Buzzell by a man who sprang out of a doorway as he was passing by, at the same time receiving a shower of bricks from two men he had just met. Mr. B. opened fire on them by firing two shots, at this several parties made their appearance and Mr. B. thought it was time to look out for himself and disappeared very suddenly.

'That's my Pop, it's not Loaded.'

It was only the other day that we wrote an article about the foolishness of parents allowing their children to play with fire-arms. This morning a little boy nearly lost his life through another youngster being allowed to play with his father's revolver. The children were standing in Mrs. Jones yard on Main street and Lou Jones had a large revolver in his hand. The mother of the smaller boy (who is about four years of age) noticed Lou playing with the revolver, and thinking her child was in danger, requested Lou to put the revolver away. In return he pointed the muzzle of the revolver at her and said: "that's my pop," and Lou's mother jestingly remarked, "it's not loaded." Oh! I've heard that remark thousands of times said the other lady, you should not allow children to play with such dangerous weapons, you don't know whether it is loaded or not until it is too late." With that she went into the house leaving her little boy standing where she first saw him. In the meantime Lou had handed the revolver to his younger brother who deliberately struck the child a fearful blow on the forehead with the weapon.

The frantic mother ran out of the house on hearing her child's screams to find him pale as a sheet with the exception of the crimson life-blood that poured down his face. The mother of the boy that struck the blow, Mrs. Jones, asked her child, "What did you hit him for?" he defiantly replied, "I hit him!" If the revolver had been loaded he would have killed him.

When a person sits down and calmly meditates over these frequent occurrences he is almost forced to the conclusion that he is residing among the Hottentots or Zulus on the coast of Africa, instead of in a country which boasts of free schools.

Is there no remedy for this crying evil? If not, whose child will be killed first?

The B. & M. Assurance.

To all persons employed upon the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad:

The time has come when it seems proper that I should express to you all, who have exerted yourselves so zealously during the late strike, the sincere thanks of the President and Directors for what you have accomplished, and also their warm appreciation of the trying and difficult position in which many of you have been placed, and of the loyal feeling and devotion to duty which prompted the course you have so well taken. There have been many examples of unselfish and courageous conduct which cannot be forgotten.

For the men who have come into our family we ask especial consideration until they shall have become fully acquainted with their new surroundings, and it should be understood by all that these men are here to stay with, and to become part of us, so far as they shall prove to be of good character and competent to perform their duties. Whatever sympathy and kind feeling may exist among us toward many of those who voluntarily broke off their relations with us on February 27th, we must not be led to forget our obligation to see that complete justice is done to every new man in the service. C. E. PERKINS, Chicago, April 12, 1888. President.

A Close Shave.

Last evening, a boy about six years of age ran in front of a spirited team outside Mathews' store on Main. He was knocked down and appeared rolling about under the horses' legs. The next moment he was on his back and one of the wheels passing over his neck, at the same time he twisted his body in such a manner that the wheel passed vertically down his body. A number of persons rushed to the scene thinking him dead. They carried him into the harness shop of Dick Straight and washed his face. He was unharmed, with the exception of a few bruises and cheerily remarked "they were a'going pretty lively, wasn't they," as he left for his home. It was a most miraculous escape.

—A lady postmistress was asked, not long since, why it was that the mails were so much delayed of late. "Indeed, sir," said she, "there are so many of these postal cards for me to read that it takes my whole time, so that I can't attend to the mails." "Great heavens, woman! you don't pretend to read all the postal cards deposited in your office, do you?" said the anxious inquirer. "Why, of course I do," innocently answered the lady official, "for as nothing scurrilous, obscene, or wicked must be written on them, I must first read them myself in order to ascertain whether it would be proper to let them pass through the office. I stand here as a sentinel upon the watch tower to guard the morals of the community. Business is only secondary to purity and virtue. To read these postal cards I am determined; yes, and carefully, too."

—Aron G. Barhydt vs. Thos. Coverdale and P. A. Harmon is now on trial. This case has some connection with the Perkins house property.

Revival Meeting.

Several causes contributed to prevent meeting at the M. E. church from being as largely attended as some former evenings. Nevertheless a good audience assembled to hear the gospel as preached by Rev. Clagett, and sung by Mr. Bilhorn; and several persons stood up to indicate their desire for salvation, and to ask the prayer of Christian people in their behalf.

The sermon this evening will be especially for the young people, and all of this class are earnestly requested to come, and hear the word of God. Let each young man and young lady, who love the Lord Jesus, try and bring some unconverted friend with them. The meetings will last throughout this week and every one by doing his or her duty may contribute to the success of the work.

Strange if True.

"Grandma, they're going to build a pontoon bridge across the river."

"What did you say they were going to harpoon in the river?"

"A bridge, grandma!"

"Goodness! Gracious! What wonderful things they do nowadays, when I was a young woman they never harpooned anything only whales."
