CITY CORDIALS.

CITY CONGREGATIONS.

CATHOLIC.—St. Paul's Church, Oak, between Fifth and Sixth. Father Carney, Pastor. Services: Mass at 8 and 10:30 A. M. Sunday School at 2:30, with benediction.

—For first class job work call at the HERALD office.

—The "Youth who never saw a Woman" will be impersonated by Miss Eunice Goodrich tonight.

—"Pocahontas" in which McCann is as kross-as-kan-be will be produced at the opera house tonight.

—The opera house will be crowded tonight to witness two performances for the one price of admission. Secure your seats early.

—John F. Polk vs. F. W. Welcher and E. D. Vancourt was settled in the district court yesterday. The jury returned a verdict for fifty dollars. Plaintiff pays his own costs.

—Mr. Riddle took over the Perkins House yesterday afternoon. As there is such a rush of transient trade coming into the city at present he will not close the house as he at first intended to while the improvements are being made.

—The Frank Carruth canning factory is having new additions built onto it and another floor put in. Covered sheds are also erected on the outside for the shipping and receiving of goods. They expect to have a large rush of business this season.

—The case of William D. Jones and Ed. Fitzgerald vs. The Bank of Cass county was decided yesterday in the district court. The jury gave a verdict in favor of plaintiff and five dollars damages, which neither the plaintiff, nor his attorney, had the dim perspective to ask for, but the jury, under the instructions of the court, ordered that amount paid.

—An elderly person suffering from "protrusion of the entero-epiploecle" (whatever that is) was brought in yesterday from somewhere in the vicinity of Weeping Water. The surgeon of this city who is attending the case, treats the matter lightly, and says that a mild cathartic will soon remedy the trouble and the patient will be as well as ever. "Is that so?"

—Jules Strowbery, a farmer from the vicinity of Glenwood, Iowa, was rolling around the depot last night slightly elevated and under the impression that he was playing base ball and that the switch-engines were flying spheres. He tried to catch one "on the fly," but was knocked out by a blow on his posterior—darwinus. He was picked up, slightly injured and carried to the "cooler." This morning the umpire decided against him, and fined him ten dollars and costs.

—Jas. Reed, of Ulysess, Butler county, is in the city shaking hands with many old friends and acquaintances. He is about the oldest pioneer of Plattsmouth having taken up his residence in this city about thirty years ago. He formerly ran a saloon in an old frame shanty where the Perkins House now stands and was the first man that sold forked lightning in this place. At one time he ran a brickyard and made the first brick in Plattsmouth. He left this city about eighteen years ago.

—An item is going the rounds of the press to the effect that Fred. Nye has written an article entitled "Mr. Sampson of Omaha." We wonder if Fred. is aware that there is a gentleman of that name that rents a desk in a real estate exchange next door south, of the World office. Also that that individual, who wears a dark plaid suit, toes turned out very much when walking, and head bowed down,—is a prominent gambler of the West. He has run joints in a good many towns, and plays a square game when he's winning, and a "skin" game when he's losing. Some years ago he ran two or three different places in Des Moines, Iowa, and before that a regular gambling palace on Spirit Lake, Iowa. His latest venture was over Foley & Dars's saloon, the "Phenix" on Douglas street, Omaha. Mr. Sampson is as cute and shrewd a man as there is perambulating around this mundane sphere.

—All job work of every kind done at the HERALD office on short notice.

—Two gold watches given away today at the opera house.

—Mr. J. A. Sutton, principal of the Louisville schools, is in the city today.

—Job work of all kinds at the HERALD office done cheap and neatly. Give us a call.

—The performances of the Goodrich company are elevating and refining—free from vulgar word or action.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church are requested to meet at the church at 3 p. m. next Monday to transact important business.

—O. V. English, trainmaster of Lincoln, was skrimishing around the box-cars in the yards yesterday. He left for home in the evening.

—Judge Chapman will return to this city about next Friday from Tecumseh. Next Wednesday he will hold court for Judge Applegate in Pawnee City.

—Geo. W. Vass, the jeweler, has just bought and placed in his place of business a burglar and fire-proof safe for the storing of work entrusted to his care.

—Don't miss the play at the opera house tonight, and get a chance on the $45 gold watch to be given away. You may be the lucky one to get the watch.

—J. W. Williams vs. J. C. Eikenbary, was decided in court yesterday. Verdict, $17,000 for defendant. A motion was made this morning for a new trial. Overruled.

—Cream Soda Water at Phil. Young's is delicious, did you try the Maple and Cream yet? also the great nerve food "Moxie" and "Coca Phosphates" at only 5c per glass.

—Mr. Maynard Spink, county superintendent of schools, is holding a teachers' examination today in the county court room. He will return home this evening to Weeping Water.

—Aron C. Loder, vs. H. Twilegar, which concerns the annulling of the marriage of Maggie Twilegar on account of her youth is in the hands of referee, Attorney A. Beeson. Not yet decided.

—Can anyone explain the peculiar coincidence that whenever pitchfork falls off a load of hay it nearly always alights with one end on the ground, with the tines up, on which somebody is sure to fall.

—The number of beautiful perambulators displayed for sale outside our furniture dealers stores, would suggest the following lines to a spring poet: "I'd choose to be a baby, a tiny little flower, a plaything for the ladies, in childhood's 'appy' hours."

—W. M. Callicot was arrested and charged last Saturday with "an assault with intent to kill and murder." G-whizz! The case was dismissed. He was again arrested on a charge, preferred by the county attorney, for "assault and battery." The case was heard today and the prisoner was honorably acquitted.

—All of our citizens, who can possibly find time, should go and witness the patriotic and interesting exercises of the school children in planting trees on the high school grounds in commemoration of Arbor day. That historic and eventful day comes on next Monday. Encourage the children by your presence at 9 a. m.

—It would enlighten the public, if the editor of the Journal, instead of prompting men at Board of Trade meetings to "censure" the HERALD would devote his Richelieu fertility to finding out "where" Charley Ross." When that feat is accomplished he might assume the roll of a Pinkerton detective, and tell us "What has become of the Shattuck fund?"

—There will be a meeting for the young converts this evening at the Presbyterian church, at 7:30 and evangelist services will be held in the M. E. church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock to which every body is invited and at the Opera house at 3:30 in the afternoon, to which all are invited and the address will be especially for the young converts. Services will also be held in the Opera house in the evening at 7:30. These services will close the work of the evangelists here.

—This morning, about nine o'clock, a boy named F. W. Levings, who is a nephew of John Waterman, the lumber merchant, was seated in a buggy, corner Vine and Fourth. The horse took fright at a printed "censure," dated April 20, that was flying about, and started off at a mad gallop for the Journal office, where it was stopped with the buggy overturned and slightly demoralized. The horse was not injured. The boy fortunately saved his obituary by jumping out of the buggy.

—We have just received the report of the Missouri River Commission. Thank you, gentlemen. The isosceles triangle of our serum is so warped that we are unable to fairly criticize the work. It is an expensive book and has required more brains than is in our seat-of-thought to compile it, but the diagrams representing the course of the river around rocks, snags and sandbars, reminds us of some drawings we once saw in a medical work illustrating cutaneous complaints in eruptions of the epidermis.

SENSIBLE AND CERTAIN.

Colonel Stewart's Pontoon Proposition.

The following proposition or agreement, also the matter of renaming the streets of this city, will be presented and explained at the next meeting of the city council, Monday, April 22, by a committee composed of Messrs. Skinner, Polk and Waugh. We have no doubt but that it will be approved of and our city be allowed to take another stride forward in modern progress: "If there can not be secured within 500 feet of the B. & M. bridge at Plattsmouth, I will place a Pontoon bridge across the Missouri river sufficiently large for teams, and maintain it five years for $10,000 and tolls. Tolls over and back, or one way; Single or double-team and vehicle, fifty cents; pedestrian, five cents; led horses, fifteen cents; cattle, fifteen cents; sheep and hogs, five cents.

I, to be permitted to use either a bridge or ferry from November 10th each year to April 10th of the following year. Ferry rates to be the same as bridge.

I, to forfeit ten dollars per day to the city of Plattsmouth for every day exceeding twenty days of each year (and a frozen river) that a bridge or ferry is not ready for passage. But the total forfeit of any year is not to exceed the annual payment due from the city. The $10,000 to be paid as follows: $2,000 and accrued interest to be payable annually at the close of each year of maintenance." S. N. STEWART.

Last Night's Performance.

"Dad's Boy" is a brilliant conception of romantic phases of frontier and city life illustrating incidents of everyday occurrences and full of fun and pathos.

Lotta, Anna Pixley, and Junnie Yeamess have a very favorable competitor and rival for public favor in the person of Eunice Goodrich. Her impersonation last night of the romping, generous, light-hearted tomboy, was the pink of ideality. The song "I'm so Shy," which is dedicated to newspaper reporters, on account of its appropriateness, was received with unstinted applause.

Miss Mate Steverson played the thankless part of the adventuress in a very able manner.

Miss Maud Durand, in a small part, did not have the opportunity of displaying her recognized ability as an emotional actress.

It is needless to mention of Jas. R. McCann's performance as a typical generous, bluff gold miner, with the heart of a lion and the tenderness of a lamb, for he has been, for a long time, an acknowledged star in the theatrical firmament.

Lewis M. Mabb as the drunken, dissipated "Dad" was inimitable. His "make-up" as a debauched set was marvellous. In comedy, emotion, or aristocratic bearing, many actors can excel because "they are built that way" which is an aid to them.

Mabb's part is a study without any outside aid. It was the best old-man character that we have ever seen. That is not our private opinion, but that of a medical gentleman who witnessed the true-to-life actions of the trembling hands and head, and the convulsive movements of the body which are so closely allied to long excess of drink which usually ends in delirium tremens. The "make-up" and actions of the old man in the transition from the drunkard to the demented parent, and the recovery of dethroned reason, stamps Mabb as a model for other ambitious actors to imitate. The tone of voice as it adapted itself to different sentiments, or forms of expression, showed a thorough comprehension and careful study of a very difficult part.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The theme of the afternoon service was thanksgiving to God for the blessing enjoyed during the meetings. Many of those present testified that they had personally experienced a gracious reviving, that their prayers for others had been answered and that they thanked God most heartily for awakening such a deep interest in spiritual things among so many young people.

Before the usual hour of service in the evening at the Methodist church, there was a half-hour meeting of the young converts in the Presbyterian church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Claggett. A devout enthusiasm and readiness to testify of the grace of God marked the occasion. Many gave voice to their spiritual joy and expressed the hope that they had passed from death to life.

Twenty-five expressed a desire that Christians would pray that they might experience the new birth of the soul.

During the meetings 150 persons have publicly acknowledged their desire to live a Christian life.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Court seems to have more attractions than the high school for our junior now-a-days.

The high school grounds are being graded and leveled preparatory to the tree planting Monday.

Miss McDonald has been absent for the last three days; having gone to Greenwood to attend a wedding. Miss Kate Oliver supplies her place in the school room.

We have reliable information that Mr. Chaburn will not stay with us another year. He intends to seek pastures new, where he will have more room for improvement. Mr. C. has many friends in Plattsmouth who will very much regret his departure.

Monday, Arbor day, will be celebrated in an appropriate manner by all the city schools. Nearly two hundred trees and shrubs will be planted on the high school grounds alone. We can realize the necessity of observing the day when we learn that thousands of acres of timber are cut down every day, to be used in the various manufactures of this country. Parts of the United States which were forests a few years ago have been entirely denuded of their verdure, but Nebraska is becoming more enriched with sylvan beauties year by year. Let the good work go on until the celebration of Arbor day will stand second only to the natal day of the republic.

MEDICINE FOR THE IMAGINATION.

How Paralysis May be Cured—A Hypnotized Subject—Paraplegia.

We must be permitted to dwell for a moment on this medicine for the imagination, which is entitled to the name of suggestive therapeutics. The process is as follows: Influenced by a persistent idea, suggested by external circumstances, a paralysis is developed. The physician makes use of his authority to suggest the idea of an inevitable, incontestable cure, and the paralysis is cured accordingly. This cure, as well as the development of functional disturbances, was directly effected by an idea. An idea may, therefore, be, according to circumstances, a pathogenic and a therapeutic agent. This notion is not new, but, since it was misinterpreted, it has remained unfruitful.

The most important of the organic disturbances produced by an idea is an experiment on vesication, performed by Focachon, a chemist at Charnes. He applied some postage stamps to the left shoulder of a hypnotized subject, keeping them in their place with some strips of diachylon and a compress; at the same time he suggested to the subject that he had applied a blister. The subject was watched, and when twenty hours had elapsed the dressing, which had remained untouched, was removed. The epidermis to which it had been applied was thickened and dead and of a yellowish-white color, and this region of the skin was puffy and surrounded by an intensely red zone.

It was in 1899 that Russell Reynolds first noted the existence of motor and sensory disturbances, developed under the influence of an idea. The motor disturbance sometimes consists in spasms, in ataxic or incoordinated movements, and more frequently in paralysis which affects the upper limbs. Erb gives to these symptoms the name of imaginative paraplegia. The type of this paraplegia is afforded by Reynolds's first observation, which concerned a young woman who was affected by paraplegia under the following circumstances: She lived alone with her father, who had undergone a reversal of fortune, and who became paralytic in consequence of protracted anxiety. She supported the household by giving lessons, which involved long walks about the town. Influenced by the fatigue caused by so much walking, it occurred to her that she might herself become paralyzed, and that their situation would then be terrible. Haunted by this idea, she felt a growing weakness in her limbs, and after a while was quite unable to walk. The nature of the affection was understood by Reynolds, who prescribed a purely moral treatment. He finally convinced his patient that she was able to walk, and, in fact, she resumed the practice.—M.M. Binet and Fere in Popular Science Monthly.

Need of a Technical School.

When the Pittsburg father of a bright boy wishes to make of the lad a man skilled in mechanical matters, a mechanical engineer competent to be his father's right hand man in the big workshop or factory or mill, the boy must be sent 500 miles from home to receive the education desired. This busy, industrial city is full of men with muscles and eyes trained to mechanical work. But their knowledge is superficial and their brains have not been developed as have their muscles and their eyes. They can carry out but not evolve mechanical ideas. That power must be conferred by institutions way off at Troy, at Boston, or at New York. There is not even a good industrial school at Pittsburg, a place where the sons of mill owners can acquire practical knowledge of the processes which in after life he will be called upon to superintend, or be set down as knowing less than the cheapest mechanic in his employ. There are bright boys whose fathers do not care, for many reasons, to send them to a distant institution. The alternative is to let them go right out among the workmen, and there let their feet plant firmly upon the lower rounds of the ladder leading to mechanical expertise.

One such boy, a few months ago, determined to obtain a practical mechanical education, and was encouraged by his father in so doing, and his first week's experience was among colored workers in a steel mill. He is now foreman of one department. Most boys would find this a debasing companionship, and most fathers would find it impossible to permit a son to acquire information in such a way. Meanwhile, home institutions teach boys everything except practical knowledge of their father's business. They can, leaving adjacent colleges, boast of thorough knowledge of the dead languages, but they do not know the difference between crucible and Bessemer steel, and to design an improved furnace or bit of machinery would be harder for them than the integral calculus. The founder of a school of technology in Pittsburg would rear unto himself a better monument than if he gave a costly library building to each city.—Chicago Bulletin.

F. HERRMANN & CO., CORSET DEPARTMENT.

LADIES FAVORITE WAIST

This waist is designed to meet the requirements of ladies who cannot, comfortably, wear a stiff and rigid corset, while it can be worn with as much comfort as an ordinary dress waist. It will give the same elegance of contour as the heaviest boned corset in the market, while the stays are so arranged that they will give support to the back and spine and in nowise interfere with the freedom and comfort of the wearer. The weight of the clothing is transferred from the hips to the shoulders by means of the shoulder-straps, which are adjustable to suit any form or length of waist.

We have these waists in White, Grey and Gold and the price to introduce them will be $1.00. Sizes 18 to 28.

We also Carry a Full Line of the following Corsets:

Bortrees Duplex, Bortrees Skirt Supporting, Misses Corsets, Loomers Elasting Comfort Hip, Satin Corsets, F. C. Corsets, J. C. Corsets, C. P. Corsets. Our Cleopatra is the best $1.00 corset ever shown over any counter; our 750 French Wove at $1.50 cannot be duplicated in this city; our Blanche Extra Long Corset at $1.50 is a bargain; Childrens Corset Waists at 45 and 65 cents.
