THE Baltimore and Ohio Railroad have sold $7,500,000 of a loan mortgage in London, and it has changed the international exchange market in favor of the United States. For the next few days at least there will be no gold exports from this country.

THE cause of home rule in Ireland has lost the most influential and zealous friend which it possessed on the American continent in the death of Archbishop Lynch of Toronto. He was an Irishman by birth, and was intensely interested in every movemennt which contemplated the amelioration of the down trodden people of the Emerald Isle. He manifested always an active concern in politics and represented in the dominion the progressive element of the Catholic the throat and if allowed to continue their church. He had reached his 72nd year but his ripe age had not impaired his faculties or diminished the measure of his his great usefulness. His death is greatly lamented both in America and Ireland .- Gazette Journal.

THE Mills free trade gang are figuring on a scheme to down Randall and deprive him of his influence in the house to command votes for his bill. As chairman of the committee on appropriations immediate relief. Mr. Randall has a pull in many directions until the appropriation bills are all out of the way, and hence Mills and his friends are anxious to get the appropriation bills through before anthing further is done on the tariff bill. If this is done Mr. Randall will be shorn of one element of strength, and the free traders will breath just that much easier. But from all information obtainable the Randall faction is likely to cause trouble in the democratic camp, no difference when the final vote on the Mills bill is taken .-Lincoln Journal.

THERE seems to be no lack of harmony among the democratic press of the state in regard to the course to pursue on the Harper's Bazar. tariff question. The general verdict is to keep still; you don't want to say anything but that the tariff is a robery and stick to it. You don't need to give your reasons, and have a republican come along and knock them all over. The tari ff robs the laboring classes. It does because-you know it does, and any one that wont accept this reason don't know what he is talking about. This will be the argument of the democratic speakers and what fine argument it is. It seems to us that our friends forget that we live in a pregressive age an age of reason and a statement without principles to support it has very little effect at the present time. But our democratic friends remembering that they have a very weak plank to stand on have come to this decision, that the only thing necessary is to make the statement and not to try to brace it up with principle for if you do some republican will come along with a few words and down comes your meat house. "O consistency thou art a jewel."

DEMOCRTS IN ARIZONA.

An amusing incident is told of the Phenix convention which does not appear in any of the published reports of the proceedings of that body. A very violent storm, bordering closely on a political cyclone, was raging in the convention, when Sam Purdy, of Yuma a distinguished member of the party, who was kicked out at the back door of it about three years ago only to walk around to the front to take a leading position in the ranks, rose to speak, He had proceeded but a little way in his speech-making, when with a very pronounced dramatic gesture of his arms, he inquired, with an oratorical flourish; "Are we a mob?" A voice in the audience responded, "We are," when Mr. Purdy wilted into his seat .- Journal-Miner.

AN APPEAL FOR THE FLOOD SUFFERERS.

NEW CANTON, Ill., May 18, 1888 .- To All Charitably Disposed Persons: The undersigned would respectfully represent that the Sny Levee on the Mississippi River, that formerly protected over 100,000 acres of land, and embracing a terrritory fifty-two miles in length, has this week been broken by the great flood in the Mississippi River, thereby inundating the entire district and destroying all the crops, and driving from their homes the residents and tenants of the leves district, causing many to lose all they possessed and making a large number of families dependent upon charity; and, as the loss and distress is so great, rendering so many families destitute, we have thought it proper to ask for aid for the unfortunate ones, as their needs are beyond the ability of the district to pro vide. We ask in charity from all kindly disposed, gifts of money, provisions and supplies of all kinds. Contributions may be sent to any of the undersigned, who will carefully and equitably distribute to those whose needs are the greatest. We trust you will contribute, as our appeal is for worthy and industrious people, who will gratefully apereciate aid in this their greatest affliction.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from disease of the hroat and lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of Tubercle Germs into the system and where these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in ravages they extend to the lungs producing Consumption and to the head, causing Catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to continue will in time cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may loose you your life. DANGEROUS TO HANDLE HIDES.

Warning to Those Who Work in Leather Stores—Blood Poisoning.

The death of Thomas Young some time ago, a workman in a Spruce street wholesale leather house, from poison received in hand-ling hides, has caused talk among leather dealers. William Palen said: "I see that Young thought that he had been bitten by some insect that burrowed in a hide. I differ Real Estate Bargains from that. I have known of poisonous insects, such as the scorpion, to be found in the hides, but never knew of any men being bitten by them. Young probably raised a bundle of hides to his shoulder and it scratched his neck, causing an abrasion of the skin, through which the poison in the hide entered his system. In my father's tannery, over thirty-five years ago, I used to see men with their arms frightfully swollen through having been poisoned in handling hides. One man employed here in Spruce street lost an eye in this way. Physicians, in making an autopsy, may be poisoned similarly if any abrasion of their skin is exposed to the virus of any diseased organ of a subject they are examining. Most of the hides likely to be diseased come from the East Indies, the Argentine Confederation and other foreign ports. I have never known men to be poisoned in handling our own American hides, which are pretty sure to come from stock that has been killed."

G. B. Horton said: "There is no more dangerous illness that a man can suffer from than that of blood poisoning from coming in contact with the hide of an animal that has died of a virulent disease. If I should be poisoned in this way in the head or neck I should go home and make my will. If a man is poisoned in the hand his chance of recovery is good, but let him be poisoned in the head or neck, and it is two to one that he dies. I have known of half a dozen deaths in five years, two of them being of men in our own employ, from the same cause that killed Young. Hides include those of animals that have been killed and whose skins are healthy; those of fallen cattle, or those that have been frozen or died of starvation, whose minute blood vessels, in the fleshy part of the hide, coagulate and turn the skin black, and lastly, of those of diseased cattle, that also turn black and have patches of hair gone in places. Of course, the ordinary workman cannot make these distinctions, but they can protect themselves from danger if they would cover any abrasion of the skin at once with court plaster or wear gloves when at work. There is no danger in handling our native hides, because the men west don't remove the skin from an animal that has died of any disease. "The most dangerous hides come from countries where the workmen are very poor and labor for a few cents a day. Particularly dangerous hides come from the East Indies, Central America and Mexico. When one of our own men, Samuel McWilliams, died some years ago from blood poisoning, resulting from handling hides, it was said that he died from arsenical poisoning. This was wrong, as the amount of arsenic used in curing a hide so that insects can't eat it is infinitesimal and could not harm any one, The first symptom of blood poisoning from a diseased hide that appears in the victim is a red spot with a hard white center, similar in appearance to the sting mark of a bee. After a few hours the affected part begins to swell rapidly, and the disease speedily affects a considerable portion of the body. Handling hides will continue to be a most dangerous business until the men learn to take proper precautions in their work."—New York Sun.

He Wasn't a Woman.

There are a good many strange features in London journalism. For some years past a case of liver complaint, dyspepsia, sick writer, whose signature was "Miranda," furnished sundry columns of feminine gossip every week to The Lady's Pictorial, and now it comes as rather a shock to the readers of that paper to discover that "Miranda" was a male individual and bore the name of Archi-They are purely yegetable, and never bald McNeill. Young girls, middle aged girls. elderly girls—girls of all sorts, in fact—poured their confidences into "Miranda's" ear. They wrote asking him to expound dark points regarding stockings and feilling; they consulted him on comestics and hair washes and things that would remove pimples; they took his opinion on the subject of trimmings for delicate garments which are worn in the silent watches of the night, and "Miranda" answered them ail and breathed soft confidences into the pink ear of the public. They all gave themselves away under the impression that he was a woman, and he wasn't a woman after all.

And now "Miranda" has come to a sudden end. It would have been all right, doubtless, if he had confined himself strictly to writing woman items, as that is an occupation at which comparatively few men get murdered if they are ordinarily careful, but he went away to report the Smith-Kilrain prize fight, and a day later his dead body was found in the Seine. The man who had so long dispensed sage advice on stockings and corsets and other articles of underclothing had been robbed and strangled by some French ruffian, and the poor fellow has carried with him into eternity an extensive knowledge of how the British woman is made up.-Philadelphia Press.

An Incident in High Life. A young millionaire of this city, who inherited a celebrated grocery establishment, the revenues of which he yet enjoys, narrates an experience that he recently had in high life. The impending marriage of a member of the "upper few hundred," who had once been a schoolmate of his, and with whom he had kept up an acquaintance, was announced. He did not get an invitation to the dude's wedding, but was favored with a note from him: "You will be surprised at not receiving an invitation to my wedding, but really I must be frank with you. I have a high regard for you personally, but you are a grocer, and I regret to tell you that the appearance of a groceryman at my wedding would give offense to the society people who are to be present," etc., etc.

This awful slight has not entirely destroyed the successor of his father in the grocery line. He is rather pleased to tell that he has had a visit from a society swell who was so happy as to be favored with an invitation to the wedding and who asked the privilege of borrowing enough money to buy an outfit worthy of the occasion. The grocer loaned him the cash, and the best man at the wedding will appear in a suit that has been paid for by the grocer to whom the groom could not send an invitation.—New York Sun.

One Way to Get Rich. A story has lately been told that illustrates A. T. Stewart's noted economic spirit. He had given a dinner and theatre party. and instead of taking his guests to the the atre in carriages, as they had expected, he hailed a stage and democratically hustled them all into it. Judge and Mrs. Hilton were of the party. While paying the fares Mr. Stewart dropped a piece of money, and during almost the entire trip kept turning up the straw in the bottom of the stage in search of it. Judge Hilton, who was sitting near him, took from his pocket a nickel, and, passing it to the millionaire, said: "For heaven's sake, Mr. Stewart, put this in your pocket, and don't kick up any more dust with that straw."—New York Sun.
