

The Evening Herald. OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

A. Salisbury, Dentist, Rockwood Building, telephone No. 35. Dr. Siglin, Office in Sherwood Block, Residence Cor. Sixth and Granite, Telephone No. 42. Drs. Cave & Smith, the Painless Dentists, Union Block, over Citizens' Bank, Plattsmouth.

CITY CORDIALS.

We are pleased to learn that Dr. Black is at present on the road to recovery.

Mrs. W. Boeck is able to sit up and is rapidly recovering from her severe illness.

Twenty-eight tickets have been sold up to date, for Chicago, since excursion trains have been running.

Yesterday was about as warm as we care about having it. The thermometer registered 102° in the shade.

The tailor shop of Messrs. O'Rourke is being renovated and fitted up for a business exclusively of merchant tailoring.

The remains of Mr. Solomon arrived at Omaha last night at 6:25. They were buried there this morning about ten o'clock.

Go to J. H. Donnelly's for a straw hat, he has large and small hats, in fact, anything you want in the way of a hat, or gents furnishing goods.

The ladies aid society of the M. E. church will meet Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. Madole in Valley Place. A good attendance is desired.

Mr. John Hartigan, who has been confined to his home for the last three weeks with intermittent fever, is able to be around again and shake hands with his many friends.

The wind has been blowing from the east for the past twelve hours and the result is, our friend Val Burkel, has returned from his Ohio visit. He did not sail back, but came by rail.

Mr. O. P. Smith has received a new machine—a milk-shaker and ice-shaver combined. It is quite a complete piece of mechanism, and has every appearance of being able to do great work when a chance is afforded.

The Chicago market must have advanced to a considerable extent and a higher price set on western stock. There was a train of fifteen coaches passed through here yesterday en route for that city, and since the reduction in fare, large trains pass through every day.

We were pleased to learn this morning that Mrs. Hampton, who has been so seriously afflicted with typhoid fever for the past few weeks, is at present on the convalescent road and if her recovery continues as speedy as it has for the last few days, she will, in a short time, be calling on her many friends who will be anxious to see her once more enjoying the luxuries which are attained by good health.

Mrs. Coverdale disposed of her entire household effects by auction last Saturday afternoon, and has gone to Missouri Valley to join her husband, who is at present reaping a rich harvest from a thriving business at that city. We were sorry to lose them from our midst, as they were both well known in the city and made good citizens. They at one time had possession of the Perkins house and after leaving there made the house on the corner of Fourth and Main streets their residence and have kept boarders at that place for a number of years.

Mr. Daniel Burris has started out with a subscription paper in aid of the boy, Jedd Vance, who was so seriously injured by a locomotive some time ago. People have been very kind in offering assistance so far as nursing the unfortunate lad. We consider it no more than the duty of any citizen who is able to contribute a small amount, if not very much, in helping them to take care of him and bring him through all right. The doctor now thinks he will stand a good chance of recovery and if the citizens subscribe a little they can greatly help in that way.

The following paragraph was clipped from the Omaha World, which certainly shows that our base ball boys did themselves proud with the Council Bluffs team which played here a few days ago: "Manager Kiplinger of the Council Bluffs club is highly pleased with the ball game played by the Bluffs boys at Plattsmouth. He considers the game the best of the season so far. At the close of the ninth inning the score stood 5 to 5. Three more innings were played and the score stood 6 to 5 in favor of the Bluffs club. During the whole game the Bluffs club made only four errors. The boys were highly pleased with the manner in which they were entertained by their Plattsmouth friends. The same night they were serenaded by the Plattsmouth Glee club. With this game Manager Kiplinger severs his connection with the club, not because of any dissatisfaction, but because his business duties will be such after July 1st, as to prevent his giving the club sufficient time and attention. It has not yet been decided who the new manager will be.

Sixteen coaches passed through the city yesterday for Chicago. The people will no doubt return with brighter faces than they had when they passed through here on their way there. We are anxious to know who will be the nominees, but we feel quite confident. All that is necessary to secure a republican president is to nominate a man on that side and there will be no doubt but that he will sail straight to the White House, run out the democrats and let the people know there is something going on occasionally. Of course Grover did well enough in a way. He took in the country pretty much, shook hands with thousands because he was president, and now asks the people to send him back for a second term so he will be able to say he has attended to some business at least. We congratulate him on having had such an enjoyable time, but it costs the country too much. That a republican president will be elected, is a foregone conclusion.

A plug hat, without any resemblance to either a democrat or republican style was seen floating around Main street yesterday morning. The name which is occasionally dropped onto a freak: "What is it," could be appropriately applied to the hat. It may probably have been adopted by the individual as an independent, as it was about a half-way article. We can not accurately describe it and the color—we have never seen anything like it. He may have bought a pair of ten cent suspenders in an Omaha "hand-me-down-store" and had the head apparel furnished gratis as a slight token of the counter-thumpers appreciation of his patronage. We feel duty bound through the interest taken in the sore-eyed people who witnessed the sight yesterday, to warn him not to appear in public again with such an emblem of politics. About the only use we could assign for it would be to use it as a bread van, to secure a surplus loaf or two for his own use. It had every appearance as though it had been expanded or contracted as the head required it about the part which surrounded the cranium. As the bearer of the article dropped himself in front of one of the stylish clothing houses and did not move a nerve for an hour or so, people took him for a sign which the clothier had recently purchased and set out. This provoked the proprietor to vexation and has since caused him considerable anxiety as a gradual relaxation in business has been noticeable since the mistake. Our reporter did not remain there long enough to see how long a visit he made, but judging from the time he occupied in coming in that morning, the evening greeted him in his efforts to make his escape from the curious gaze of the citizens he came in range of.

Perhaps a sadder or more affective sight will never be furnished for the eyes of man than a great many of our citizens witnessed yesterday afternoon. It was a cortege of citizens called upon to perform the solemn duty of burying their dead. The HERALD was sorry to learn of so many being so affected over the matter, but more than a few were called upon to perform the obsequies, and many a head in the procession was hung in deep regret which made a deep impression on the spectators. Several remarked: "It's the saddest sight I ever witnessed," and many tears were seen in the eyes of the brave men who stood by and took in the solemn proceedings. Mr. Neville who has suffered untold misery on account of this death, showed the deepest marks of bereavement. It is needless to say he will retain them, for such a blow would certainly move the most heartened heart and wring from their eyes tears of sorrow. We regret very much to be obliged to chronicle such a sad affair, for it will no doubt cast a gloom over the whole mass of bright faces which our city has the honor of being blessed with; however, we extend to Mr. Neville our sympathies in his untold bereavement, and trust that as his return from a trip or visit to a healthier climate that he will return to the city again much recruited in health, and we hope that his blighted hopes through it may be revived again. Yesterday shortly after his favorite mule, which he brought only a short time ago from the farm, injured itself so badly that to kill it was necessary. Not being accustomed to the ways of the city, or not knowing how mules of the city acted, this mule got a little too frisky. It wandered up in the vicinity of "Hotel Straight," and as it probably had tired itself out during the fore part of the day, was making arrangements for lodging at that place. Mr. Straight, the proprietor, it appears, did not fancy the appearance of the intruder and fired him. He was a cruel man. But as Mr. Mule could not persuade that gentleman to admit him as a guest, took the road for a bed. He was not satisfied with the location, and soon tried to stand up again, and in making strenuous efforts to get a good footing, broke one of his legs immediately below the second joint. Several doctors were called to obtain advice as to the best kind of treatment for him. The owner of him was horror-stricken when told that death was the quickest and easiest way to put an end to the poor fellows sufferings. He was knocked in the head a short time afterwards and, as we stated before, was conveyed to the Missouri River for interment, where he now rests.

The New Daily.

The Evening News which was to have put in an appearance in our midst today did not show up. However, the proprietors, Messrs. Green, Mann and Dabb, are getting everything in readiness for operation. The paper will be a four column, four page daily, and will be furnished at the rate of about ten cents per week. Plattsmouth will surely report itself in good style now with its three dailies at her back. We would like to see the boys prosper in their new adventure, and heartily welcome the paper among us. Plattsmouth does not afford its newspapers the support it should, but when three ink fends light on her all at once, it may arouse the people to a sense of their duty.

LATER.

Since the above notice was written we have been sorry to learn that the proprietors have abandoned the idea of issuing the proposed Evening News, and it has died before its birth. The boys were dissatisfied with the support received and have come to the conclusion that Plattsmouth is not as good a newspaper quarter as they would desire a location in. We are sorry to learn of this, but we hope the boys may find a more suitable location for the employment of their talents. We did not learn whether it was their intention to start a daily in some other city or not.

THE B. OF L. E.

Written for THE HERALD.

The noblest achievement of man in this life, is to build up a home for his children and wife. When once deprived of a place to call home, he becomes but a beast, o'er this planet to roam. Take from us homes, and you take civilization, and sink into darkness our great and proud nation.

In view of these facts, though stern they may seem, Can we take to our hearts and hold in esteem A great organization, that through avarice or strife, Will unflinchingly step between man and his wife, And bid from the children their allowance of bread, At the command of the man who is placed at the head?

We will frankly admit, yes all must agree, That a strong and avowed B. of L. E., But in Feb'y last, it's limit they o'er ran, And worked an injustice upon many a man, For there were good engineers who sanctioned not the strike, But the hands of the machine were all served alike.

They were earning good wages, their families And the idea of plenty made home bright and sunny, Could the wife be more gentle and love husband more, Could she greet him more warmly when they meet, Could her face look more pleasant, or be sweeter her smile, If he earned the same money at four cents a mile?

Organized labor may be theoretically right, And for the laboring men's interest as for existence they fight, But as a matter of practice it can never succeed, And on to success the laboring men lead, For success in this life means to individually strive, And not collect in bodies, tricky schemes to connive.

The B. of L. E., though a strong organization, Represents a small part of our grand and proud nation, And though they may strive to do right by us all, Far short of the mark they inevitably fall, When they try to gain favor by becoming the aggressors, And lift themselves up by pulling down their successors.

Through the laws of our land and the officers we elect, Capital in general we must certainly protect, Our nation demands it and the B. of L. E., If like other citizens could readily see, That their power is small and men easy to get, For kill a regiment of presidents and we still have one, yet.

Where Fur is Obtained.

"The fur producing countries of the world are very few in number," said Mr. Ullmann, "and they are rapidly becoming exhausted. Forty years ago America was the great fur producer, with the Russian possessions second. Today Siberia sends out more furs than any other region, and America, with the exception of the fur seal, has greatly decreased. A few fancy skins come from Asia and Africa, but nearly the whole product is from high latitudes. Many Arctic countries are nearly destitute of fur bearing animals, Greenland, for instance, while scarcely any are found on the northern islands. The Arctic regions send none at all, the ice fields around the South Pole being too barren to support life of any kind. Thus the field is confined to North America and Asia, with a very small supply from Norway and Sweden and some from European Russia.

"The American field is most seriously denuded, although I expect Northwestern British Columbia and especially the interior of Alaska will in future immensely increase their output. In the Asiatic deserts fur bearing animals are becoming rarer every year and the time is not far distant when furs of all kinds will become a luxury attainable only by the very rich. In the northern part of the Chinese dominion and among the high mountains of Tibet thousands of bales of fine furs are shipped every year, but these are taken exclusively by the Chinese and do not constitute a factor in the European market. China is by all means the best place to dispose of very fine furs, and three-fourths of the most expensive are bought by the mandarins of that country, some of whom possess fortunes far exceeding in amount anything known in the western world. Russia probably comes next and the remainder of the high grade furs are sold all over the world. I look for a great increase in the output of Alaska, the interior of which is almost totally unexplored, but under the most favorable conditions the supply will grow smaller and smaller every year, and it will not be long before the fur trade will be a thing of the past."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Feminine Love of Fine Apparel.

Father McGlynn, the famous ex-priest and present labor agitator, said to me that the love of suitable apparel was not even eradicated from the minds of nuns and sisters belonging to the various orders of his church. Each of these sort of devotees has a particular uniform, usually somber and calculated to impair if not destroy the vanity of its wearer. But Father McGlynn cites the case of a girl who decided to renounce the world and devote the rest of her life to religion and charity in the guise of a sister. She talked with him on the subject and sought his instruction as to the different aims, objects and duties of the various orders. He told her all about them, and she went away for the purpose of deliberation. A week later she came back and said that she made a selection of three. Having narrowed her choice down thus far, she confided the fact that she meant to accept out of the three the one which provided a dress most becoming to her style. This was what the priest called the last remnant of worldliness in her. She was ready to give up a luxurious home and cut herself off from the sociability to which she had become habituated, but she still desired to dress as well as possible under pious circumstances.—Chicago Tribune.

A Good Deal has been said and written about the chestnutness of negro minstrelsy. Old jokes have been mercilessly lampooned, and the men who deal in them have come in for a large share of the abuse. It is not generally known by the public that there are not a half dozen men in the United States capable of furnishing gags or other end material to minstrels, and of these half dozen probably not one makes a really successful gag in six months. They can all write songs or fake up afterpieces or sketches, but they cannot give that delightful ring of spontaneity to a gag which makes it a "go." Minstrelsy then try the work of these professional joke makers, but it falls so flat that invariably a return to the old material is necessary. Most of the gags you hear are made by the end men themselves. Sometimes a newspaper friend furnishes them a local suggestion, but it requires the end man's experience with public taste to put it in proper shape. Since I have been in minstrelsy, which in many years I cannot recall many new jokes that have survived their birth.—Globe-Democrat.
