Collision Between Trains.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 7.—A wreck occurred on the Pennsylvania railroad near Nanticoke this morning between two passenger trains. One of the firemen in jumping was seriously bruised about the body; the others escaped without injury. The passengers on both trains were badly frightened and shaken up. Some thirty of them are slightly injured, though none fatally. The accident was due to the blunder of a train dispatcher.

Coats Killed by Lightning.

EL PASO, Tex., July 5.—Last night El Paso and vicinity was visited by a thunderstorm, which in the amount of electricity discharged has never been equaled in this section. The lightning did damage in various places in the bottom addition just beyond the International Smelter. A flash of lightning struck a cottonwood tree, under which a flock of goats had taken shelter. Fifty-two of them were killed. The tree itself showed but slight traces of having been struck.

Dynamite on the Track.

CRESTON, Ia., July 7.—A dynamite cartridge exploded under the front trucks of passenger train No. 6, about a mile east of the Creston yards, at 11:30 causing a loud report and a perceptible shock to the engine. An examination showed that a piece of the truck flange had been blown off, but the engine was not so disabled but that it could proceed with the train. The cartridge had been securely fastened to the rail. No clue has been discovered as to the conspirators.

Three Young Men Murdered.

CHICAGO, July 7.—A Times special from Wichita, Kansas, reports the murder on the Red Fork of the Arkansas river in Indian territory of Ed Freley, H. Haliday, and J. Merwell, all of Springfield, Ill., and all under 20 years of age. A few days ago they missed some money and accused a half-breed Indian named Evans of having stolen it. The day following this Evans was found murdered in his cabin and the three boys had disappeared. Evans' friends supposing the boys had murdered him started in pursuit and coming up with them murdered them in a shanty which they were occupying. No trace of the gang has been discovered.

A Fair Runaway Captured.

TEXARKANA, Ark., July 6.—Miss Frankie, daughter of Squire Linn Whitehead, the wealthy planter, desiring to change her cosy home among the moaning of the pines for college life, yesterday, without the consent of her parents, made the purchase of half a dozen traveling trunks, filling them with silks, lawns, fine muslins, shoes and other ladies' wearing apparel, selected from one of the best stocks of goods in one of the extensive dealers in ladies' dress goods in the city, had the same charged to her father, and directed that her purchases be shipped to her address at one of the leading ladies' seminaries North. The father was duly notified of the purchases made by his fair daughter, who had already boarded a north-bound train and was rapidly speeding away to join the Vassars. The father, not being pleased with the extensive purchases at his expense and the loss of the winsome girl, wired for her to be arrested and sent one of the salesmen of the house from which the goods were purchased after her. Mr. Sanderson, the gentleman sent in her pursuit, returned this morning, accompanied by the beautiful Miss Frankie. She was turned over to the kind care and keeping of her father, who has promised that his pet and idol shall be permitted to go to school to her heart's content. She takes her arrest good naturedly, and with blushing smiles asserts that she's bound to have an education.

BAD BLOOD.

There is not one thing that puts a man or woman at such disadvantage before the world as a vitiated state of the blood. Your ambition is gone.
Your courage has failed.
Your vitality has left you.
Your languid step and listless actions show that you need a powerful invigorator, one bottle of Beggs' Blood Purifier and Blood Maker will put new life in a worn out system, and if it does not it will cost you nothing. O. P. Smith & Co., Druggists.

PARAGRAPHS FROM EVERYWHERE.

Brooklyn bridge has been opened to the public five years.

Silver has turned up in South Africa to a degree to produce a new mining fever.

The Alexandria, a woman's club, is but four years old, yet has 600 members.

A peasant has just died in Austria Hungary who was 142 years of age. He left a son aged 115 years and a grandson of 85.

A Nevada ranchman shot, trapped and poisoned 4,200 rabbits in four months, and then figured that above 5,000 new ones had come to fill their places.

The Austrian government has abandoned its intention of renewing the anti-Anarchist law, and will henceforth fight the Anarchists by administrative decrees.

The Russian general Suwarow, after the seizure and destruction of Warsaw, cruelly butchered 30,000 Poles of all ages and conditions in cold blood, Nov. 4, 1794.

The South American agent for some extensive manufacturers of harvesters at Chicago has been two years at Montevideo, and has sold mowing and reaping machines all over the River Plata region.

Taverns may be traced to the Thirteenth century. According to Spelman, "In the reign of King Edward III only three taverns were allowed in London." Taverns were licensed in England in 1753.

A West Morris boy was arrested recently for shooting an eagle contrary to the law. He was in a fair way to be fined or imprisoned, when a commiseration, composed of a clergyman, a justice of the peace and an editor, sat on the dead body of the bird and declared it to be a fish hawk.

A Nuremberg inventor has produced a shoe sole composed of wire net overlaid with a substance resembling India rubber. These soles, which cost but half the price of leather, have been tested in the German army and found to be twice as durable.

They are having hard work finding hard pan for the foundations of the new bridge across the Thames at East New London, Conn. They have put piles down 113 feet, and have not got to solid earth yet. It is thought that bottom will be reached at about 130 feet.

A writer in London Truth suggests a sensible occupation for women who like sewing, but do not wish to become either dressmakers or seamstresses, and desire to live in their own homes. It is the overlooking and repairing of women's wardrobes. After a clientele had been established it would undoubtedly bring in very fair wages.

A firm of pyrotechnists in England have at their factory a Newfoundland dog which positively revels in fireworks. He rushes into a shower of sparks with as much delight as in a cold bath, and on a lighted squib being thrown within his reach he will run after the smoldering stump as if it were a bone and trample it out with his paws.

M. Achille Poincelet, in his lecture at the Hall of the Boulevard des Capucines in Paris the other day, discussed the qualities of blondes and brunettes, the differences in their love, their role in private life and in history, linked with the philosophy of beauty, and the question, which was the superior type of woman, the Parisienne or the Georgienne? He ignored entirely the red headed girl.

Fred Marsden, the playwright, consulted a well known physician a few days before his death as to the easiest and quickest mode of suicide. The physician supposed he was securing incidents for a scene in one of his plays, and explained the subject to him patiently. Finally Mr. Marsden said: "I have it. A big dose of chloral, then stop up all the crevices and turn on the gas," and this is just what he did. He offered the physician $10 for his advice, but it was refused on the ground that no professional service has been rendered.

Against Food Adulteration.
A grocers' conference has been called in the interest of purer foods. It meets on Coney Island in July. It seems at last that adulteration has gone so far that the grocers are afraid to eat what they sell. Besides, the better class of retailers find it impossible to obtain honest articles. There will be at least five thousand exhibitors of materials, and it is believed the discussion will not only be practically valuable in throwing light on hidden ways, but that there can be brought to bear a heavy force on manufacturers to put more honest articles on the market. No proposition of more importance will come before any of our in Paris the other day, discussed the qualities of blondes and brunettes, the differences in their love, their role in private life and in history, linked with the philosophy of beauty, and the question, which was the superior type of woman, the Parisienne or the Georgienne? He ignored entirely the red headed girl.

A Queer Thing About Owls.
A Kingston man has made an addition to his collection of birds, a large owl, lately caught at Hurley. "Owls are deceptive birds," said a citizen the other day. "I had one, a few years ago, with which I played a trick on the public. I kept the owl in a cage. It was an attraction, and many people saw it. One day the bird died of 'cold poison' and a taxidermist stuffed it. I then put it back on its perch in the cage. People who had seen the owl alive said that they could see no difference in its appearance, and they would come and admire the bird just the same. That is the reason why I say an owl is a peculiar bird. Dead or alive they look about the same."—Kingston Freeman.

NOT THE LITERARY CAPITAL.

A Mistaken Idea Corrected—New York Not Kind to Journalists.

New York is not, never was, and never will be the literary capital of the United States. In fact, this country has no literary capital like London and Paris. But New York, with its vast wealth and great commercial importance, is constantly attracting young and ambitious men who wish to push their fortunes in one way or another. Among others, come the young men of literary tastes who rush to the metropolis, full of bright hopes of fame and fortune. Alas! how few, how very few realize their hopes!

A mistaken idea exists among outsiders as to the high prices paid by the New York newspapers, both to their regular staff writers and to their special contributors. The crowding to the metropolis is so great that the supply of journalists by far exceeds the demand, and consequently, the pay is very small. On the morning newspapers, fifteen to twenty dollars a week is the regular salary of the reporters, while the afternoon papers pay only ten and fifteen dollars. The managing editors of some of the afternoon papers receive such small salaries that they are obliged to eke out a living by doing hack work for literary syndicates. Stories are constantly going the rounds of the press about the extravagant prices paid by The New York World for special articles. It was said that Henry Ward Beecher was paid $300 for a regular column article published in the Sunday edition. Now I happen to know that the article in question was furnished by a newspaper syndicate at $7 a week. Eight dollars a column is the amount which The World pays for special articles; The Herald pays $6, The Tribune $10, and the afternoon papers only $5. Outside of the contributions of their regular staff the New York dailies print very little matter except what is furnished by the numerous newspaper syndicates. Neither fame nor fortune is made by the average New York newspaper man. His name is unknown outside of the region of Printing House square.

Except two or three veterans, the New York correspondents of the city of town newspapers receive very small pay—$3 a letter of 3,000 words being more than the average writer is able to get $3, but the atmosphere of New York is material, not literary. A commercial spirit pervades Fifth avenue as well as Wall street. A money standard prevails everywhere, and literary talents do not receive any recognition, while the successful stock speculator fills the newspapers with his operations. Few prominent literary men reside in New York, and they find very little congenial companionship, for there is not a literary salon in the city where congenial spirits can meet in social intercourse.

New York is neither the place to make money by literary work, nor the place to do literary work in. Life in New York is not conducive to study, culture or meditation. For a city inhabited by, or adjacent to, nearly 5,000,000 people, it is astonishingly deficient in libraries. Persons who wish to shine as fixed stars in the firmament of literature, should avoid New York as a permanent residence; and those who wish to make a living by literary work alone will not find New York a good field.—Eugene L. Didier in The Writer.

Sponge Industry of the Bahamas.
Off the Neapolitan coast and in other parts of the Mediterranean, where these elastic articles are found, diving is the approved method of getting sponges. In the clear, white water of the Bahamas, however, cranes are used. Cranes are long poles, varying in length from twenty to thirty-eight feet, with curved prongs at one end, and are employed to detach the sponge from the rock to which it clings and to convey it to the surface, where the fishermen, so clear is the water that, with the aid of a water glass, a pulley or box, with a glass bottom, fishermen can easily distinguish sponges from other forms of marine plant life at the depth of fifty or sixty or more feet. When first taken from their fastnesses sponges appear and feel like pieces of raw, soft liver, being slippery, elastic, ugly and repulsive. In color they range from dirty purple to dull chocolate.

Having been brought to the deck of the fisherman's schooner the sponges are washed, rubbed and dried. They are then strung on strands, a dozen to a strand, and are washed down with buckets of sea water three times a day until the schooner reaches one of its caws. Craws are large, flat submerged stockades of saplings, generally sapolillas and unfamiliar sub-tropical growths, bound together with manilla and palm-leaf fiber. The catch is deposited in these, and kept under water until the vessel makes its final round and draws its dows preparatory to taking them to Nassau.—Cor. New York Sun

What to Do with Suspicions.
There are many suspicions that need crushing in the bud. We fancy our friend is cool to us; we imagine some one has slighted us; we suspect our neighbor of having spoken ill of us. Most likely we are mistaken, and in any case, we could never profitably search into their matter. Our trust in our friend, or our own self respect, should lead us to put away such thoughts, to abandon such suspicions. Some one has, perhaps, dropped a poisonous word of scandal into our ears. Let us banish it from our thoughts with scorn. Circumstances may tend to cast suspicion on one whom we honor; let us continue to trust him in our heart of hearts. We may fear that some one has committed a fault which, however, does not concern us in the least, and in which we are not called upon to interfere; let us expel the idea as an unwelcome intruder. In one of these two ways every suspicion may be [rightly] dealt with. If as a warning it has a mission to perform, it will do its work; if it is an unworthy or idle conjecture, it will be dismissed. In either case it will pass away, as all suspicions are meant to do. As transient guests of the mind they may be useful in establishing the innocence which should be brought to light, or in proving the guilt which should be purged away. But as permanent inmates of the mind their influence is most pernicious.—Philadelphia Ledger.

TORNADO POLICIES.

The present year bids fair to be a disastrous one from tornadoes and wind storms. This is fore-shadowed by the number of storms we have already had—the most destructive one so far this year having occurred at Mt. Vernon, Ill., where a large number of buildings were destroyed or damaged. The exemption from tornadoes last year renders their occurrence more probable in 1888.
