A Morbidly Sensitive En The empress of Austria spent a week at Bournemouth recently, exasparating almost to frenzy the antagonism between the two rival hotels, and finally selecting, not the asthetic and more fashionable Bath, but the quieter Excter. When, a few days before her arrival, she intimated her intention of taking up her abode in the last named house it was summarily cleared of all its guests, with the exception of one unoffending old maid, who had occupied a top bedroom for seven months, took all her meals in [the privacy of her chamber, and was warranted not to show obtrusively on the stairs. The empress, her daughter Valerie, and a large ever they order wholesale, and in order suite filled thirty-six rooms for a week. The empress, spare, tall, erect, has retained much to work along and keep their heads above of the far famed beauty which made the Princess Elizabeth, of Thurn and Taxis, the most admirable woman of her time. Her magnificent hair, as luxurious as ever, is almost untouched by time, and she seems to disclaim every artifice of toilet and appearance. She dressed plainly, unbecomingly, almost shabbily, rose early, walked out alone with the lady like proprietress of the hotel at half past 6 o'clock p. m., took long walks on the sands, indifferent alike to wind, sunshine or rain, coming home sometimes drenched to the skin, visiting the pier only when all the inhabitants were safely housed for their meals, giving no trouble, and apparently satisfied with everything. She had been so cruelly mobbed at Cromer, on the east coast, that she had become morbidly sensitive about being stared at, and, to avoid observation, resorted imprudently to a device more likely to attract attention than to shun it. She sallied forth in the coldly inclement weather with a large fan, which she held up before her face whenever she suspected the passersby of scanning her features.-The Argonaut.

A Change in the Buttons.

There is nothing more noticeable to me than the wonderful change in the buttons that women wear that has taken place in two years. Berhaps I notice it more on account of being in the business, but it is so radical that any one would perceive it if he cost you only 35 cents. O. P. Smith & had his attention called to it. Formerly the Co., Druggists. buttons were fancy and large; now they are small, plain and cheap. When merchants can sell manufactured buttons for three cents a dozen it reduces the profits of the manufacturer. Style has decided that buttons shall be small and plain. In consequence, it is very seldom that a woman pays more than twenty cents a dozen for the buttons she uses on her dress, and the majority use five cent and ten cent buttons.

But this style will not last long; it will get around to the old price where it was profitable to manufacture buttons. Two years ago the style was to wear novelties, and the buttons used on dresses never cost less than fifty cents a dozen. The size of the buttons began to increase, and it was not uncommon to see buttons two inches square on cloaks. Many ladies paid as high as $2 apiece for battons. They were made in fancy shapes, and there are few ladies who have not pretty collections in their scrap bags. They will be useful some day, for the fashion in buttons is always changing. Our trade fluctuates ac-cordingly. With improved machinery it is now easy to make a cheap, plain button. Bone is the principal material for these buttons, and vegetable ivory is also used, as well as composition .- Globe-Democrat

Coal is Cash.

The undersigned coal dealers, doing business in the city of Hattamouth, deem it to the best interests of the public, as well as of the dealers, to sell coal strictly and exclusively for cash.

Coal is a commodity that is, and should be, sold on a very close margin, too small, in fact, for the dealers to trust to the delays and uncertainties of collections, The dealers are required to pay spot cash for coal. The credit system entails a serious loss each season, by reason of the amount of bad debts necessary to be at one time detained under arrest at the sur charged off to profit and loss, and in the additional expense required for bookkeepers, collectors, etc.

By dispensing with the above formidable items of expense, dealers can afford to sell coal at lower prices, and they feel assured that this will commend itself to the thinking public.

For the above reasons, therefore, the coal dealers have decided to sell for cash only, very simple, good natured man, who always kept two tame lions in his house (a fact), and as long as he receives occasional presents of corn and goats, prevents the wild lions from doing any mischief.

ON AND AFTER JULY 11, 1888. This means just what it says. TIMOTHY CLARK.

It is curious to note that the lions here are good tempered (perhaps because they find abundance of food), and they are also much admired, as was shown by the following incident: "One day," he says, "we came upon a lion caught in a pitfall, whereupon Chief Lotter was fetched, and he pushed into the pit branches of trees to enable the lion to get out; this it did, and after giving us a roar of acknowledgment, walked off unharmed.

"Another chief is said to possess the power of keeping the g..... away from the pitfalls. One of our men told me this chief was tion for a few hours, the consequence being that no game came near the station for about eight days, so that a present had to be sent to the chief to appease him. Chief Chulong's wife is also famous for her power over the numerous crocodiles which make their home in Khor Gineti."-Christian at Work.

Prizes of the Ocean.

Sperm whales, the monsters of deep water, are the richest prizes of the ocean, yielding spermaceti from their brain cases, ivory from their lower jaws, rich, yellow oil from their sides, and (when diseased) the almost priceless ambergris from their entrails. Next in value comes the right whale, the inhabitant of the Arctic, in whose mouth whalebone is substituted for ivory. The upper jaw is furnished with this substance, a great pile of which lies high on the beach at Herring cove. It is, perkaps, ten inches across where it joins the jaw, and reminds one more of a great comb with tangled hair attached than anything else. The "teeth" are closely set, and are three feet and more long, tapering to a point and terminating in rope like fila-

While the sperm whale feeds on squid at the bottom of the ocean, the right whale speeds along with open mouth, engulfing huge quantities of water and greater or less quantities of the animalcules and small fish on which it subsists. When his cavernous mouth is full he closes it, blows out the water through his spout holes, and with the aid of his tongue swallows the little creatures which have become immeshed in the curious attachment of his upper jaw .- Cor. A Horrible Death Sentence.

We mentioned the terrible sanctions by which the Chinese secret societies enforce their laws, which, of themselves, make them dangerous subjects, and The Liverpool Post furnishes a remarkable illustration. According to a report from the American minister at Pekin, a man belonging to an association of gold beaters at Toochow recently took more apprentices than one. This is forbidden. so the local trades union took up the matter and condemned the man to be bitten to death. and the sentence was literally carried out. One hundred and twenty-three men had a bite at him before he expired. It would not strike the childlike and bland Chinee that there was anything specially horrible in such a form of murder.-London Spectator.
