Free Trade ys. Protection. EDITOR HERALD:-We hear a great deal about free trade and protection in this election campaign, but the average voter knows but very little about the practical working of the free trade doctrine. Perhaps a slight allusion to the practical working of free trade right here at home may set some men and women to thinking. And first of all we will give C. Whopper a nut to crack, who fills what little space there is for reading matter in his paper principally with free trade slush and flings at protection. But he is not consistent in his teachings-he frequently has an article in his paper denouncing persons who go to Omaha, Chicago and other places to buy their goods. This he should stop or stop preaching & Co., is taking in Barnum today. free trade. It is all right for men who believe in, and vote for free trade to go to Omaha to buy goods and pay the tariff or tax in the shape of R. R. fare (pro vided the R R does not violate the Interstate Commerce Law by giving them a pass). But what is the effect of this pol-Just what protectionists are preaching. It not only ruins the business of our merchants and compels them to sell higher than they otherwise would, on account of the loss of the trade that goes from them and into the hands of foreign merchants. And the merchants are not the only loosers by this free trade policy. Every man who owns property in the city is injured; every mechanic and laboring man who has a home in the city or intends to make it his home is injured by this practical working of free trade.

Suppose every person in the city and surrounding country were to do their trading in some other city, how long would it be until you had no merchants in the city, and how long would it be until you would be but a country village | circus. without a store or shop in it? If this be true of small cities and villages, how much more strongly does it apply to us as nation.

Gentlemen, practice what you preach. If you believe in free trade, buy your goods in Omaha, Chicago, or other cities and let your own city that you are trying to build up, go to the dogs. I may have hit some protectionist in th foregoing, and if so, all I have to say is if the shoe fits wear it. HOME PROTECTIONIST.

Little's World.

Wonderful, sublime, beautiful, startling, were a few of the many expressions we heard issue from the lips of a number of the immense audience coming from Boyd's Opera House last evening after the performance of the "World," which has had such extensive advertising, and we are pleased to say that Geo. O. Morris, the manager, presented all and more than he advertised in the way of scenery and company. The harbor scene was realistic, and the sunset effect pleasing, the the deck scene was imposing, and at the conclusion we rise involuntarily from our seats in amazement as we actually witness the horror of a sinking ship in mid ocean and watch the angry waves eager to engulf it. At the conclusion of this truly wonderful piece of stage mechanism we looked at each other and for then one mighty round of applause at this perfection of stage machinery; the raft scene was grand, in this we see the castaways lashed to a frail raft and tossed about by the wayes; already the horrors of the situation has temporarily desustained .- Omaha Bee.

Miss Mary Anderson is much annoyed by "the pestilential nuisances who write for autographs," but has now hit upon an effective plan for dealing with them. She has had a specimen of her writing lithographed, and her manager sends each applicant a copy thereof, with a printed card saying: "Miss Anderson desires me to inclose you her autograph as you request, with her compliments, and to say how sorry she is that the matter has not had her attention ere this."

Oliver Thorne Miller is now 50 years of age, gray haired, stout and jolly. She first began writing for the amusement of her children, then for their instruction in natural history. Five years she has devoted exclusively to the study of birds, of which she keeps a room full, her writing desk standing in the middle. It is with a bobolink on her shoulder, a bluebird taking his bath in her tea cup, and an oriole cribbing from her back hair for its nest, that Mrs. Miller pens the studies from bird life introduced to us in "Bird Ways" and in her new work, "In Nesting Time."

A Mrs. Pratt, in Louisville, the widow of a well known Presbyterian divine, is making quite a little fortune out of beaten biscuit, such a she used to regale her guests on in happier and more prosperous days. They are "home made" under her personal supervision, white as snow as to crumb and golden brown as to crust, just such as you may have eaten in many a Tennessee and Kentucky house where the divine art of making them is still possessed by the negro cooks. Mrs. Pratt sells her biscuit at fifteen cents a dozen, and the demand for them for luncheons, parties, picnics, etc., has grown so that she employs several people besides the original "aunty" who helped her make the first batch she sent on trial to the Woman's Exchange.

Vernon Lee is the young English woman upon whom the mantle of George Eliot is supposed to have descended. If her future fulfils the promise of her present she will leave George Eliot behind in the Sherwin & Williams' mixed paints, the race. Probably no literary woman of best in the market, at Fricke & Co's. drug any time has or has had an early record to compare with that of Vernon Lee. She is only 25, and she has written sev eral large volumes on mediæval literature, involving years of research; she has contributed for at least eight years to the leading English reviews; she has published three or four volumes of essays, several short stories, and a re-markable novel called "Miss Brown," which was the literary sensation of the day. Vernon Lee—her real name is Violet Paget—lives in Florence with a lame and musical brother. She is very plain, decidedly masculine in appearance, and is fond of sitting with her legs crossed and of smoking cigarettes. The reading world has been waiting patiently for new work from her pen.
