

MAKING BERRY BOXES.

INTERESTING DETAILS OF A CALIFORNIA COAST INDUSTRY.

Cutting a Big Log into a Single Shaving. The Great Blade at Its Work—Forming the Angle of the Box—Making the Bottom—The Last Step.

The thin sheets of wood which form the sides and bottom of a berry box are nothing more nor less than small pieces cut from a great pine, fir or whitewood shaving, and bent and fastened together in the shape of a box.

In a severe sprain of the ankle immerse the joint as soon as possible in a pail of hot water, and keep it there for fifteen or twenty minutes.

Baked potatoes must be eaten as soon as they are done. When they are taken from the oven they should be put into a napkin or towel and the skin broken, so as to allow the steam to escape; this will keep the potato mealy.

The superior advantages of wearing wool next the skin are easily apparent. Its adaptability to the requirements of the difference in climates and the changes in seasons is superior to any other dress material.

In pressing flat embroidery, lay the article wrong side up on a damp cloth. Ribbon or raised work should be laid right side up and tacked in position to avoid wrinkling, in which position it should be left to dry.

For a standing offering to chance guests lemonade and cake cannot be surpassed. Fruit cake will gather richness if kept for months, and lemons are not impossible even in the warmest weather.

A room with a low ceiling will seem higher if the window curtains hang to the floor. Lambrequins may be used to extend the curtains to the ceiling, thus carrying out the effect.

Never have dark carpet and walls in a room that is deficient in light. Only apartments open to the outer light will stand gloomy tones in decoration.

To soften water for washing nappies, cloth, dishes, etc., use one teaspoonful granulated lye to four gallons of water and dissolve thoroughly.

Silk dresses should never be brushed with a whisk broom, but should be carefully rubbed with a velvet mittica kept for that purpose only.

To keep the lips soft and in good color, bathe them occasionally with alum water, followed by glycerine or camphor ice.

When you find a copy that is pure and cuts your skin, continue to use it. Frequent changes are bad for the complexion.

To prevent a shiny skin, use a little camphor in the wash water. Never use face powders; they are delusions.

To restore crushed velvet, hold it over the spout of the tea kettle and let it steam well, then comb up the nap.

The foot of a coarse cotton stocking is superior to a sponge for bathing purposes.

A teacup of lye in a pail of water will improve the appearance of black goods.

We approve legislation by congress to prevent alike unjust burdens and unfair discrimination between states.

Public Land Legislation. We reaffirm the policy of appropriating the public lands of the United States to be homesteaded for American citizens and settlers not aliens.

The restoration of the public domain for the use of actual settlers, which was begun under the administration of President Arthur should be continued.

Every white man who has served under the explorer Stanley speaks of his remarkable taciturnity. In the years he was found in the Congo state stations to keep all his plans to himself, and his assistants seldom got an inkling of them until they were ordered to carry them out. Lieutenant Coquilhat gives a curious instance of this characteristic. Quite contrary to his usual custom Stanley one day offered Coquilhat his choice in the directorship of one of two proposed stations that were to be started at Lulanga and Ba-Ngala. He told the lieutenant that Lulanga was the center of a large and friendly population, while the Ba-Ngala, though the most important tribe on the river, were audacious and irritable and his life would be in danger among them unless he acted with great discretion. Coquilhat told his leader to put him where he could be most useful. Stanley said nothing more, but Coquilhat soon after received marching orders. Up the river they started on their little steamer, and though Coquilhat wondered greatly what station he was to take in charge, Stanley did not drop the slightest hint. It was not until after several days' traveling, the steamer passed a small town without stopping that Coquilhat knew such a fortune as the station he had been appointed to. He had been ordered to take charge of the station at Lulanga. Stanley had been so taciturn that Coquilhat had not known what station he was to take in charge until he was ordered to go to Lulanga.
