THE LESSON OF THE LEAVES.

Oh thou who hearest on thy thoughtful face
 The weary calm that follows after grief,
 See how the autumn gales each loosened leaf
 So sure repose in its own destined place.
 Ah, not forever whirl they in the race
 Of wild fortresses round the gathered sheaf,
 Or, hurrying onward in a rapture brief,
 Spin o'er the meadows into trackless space!
 Some hollow captures each, some sheltering wall
 Arrests the wanderer on its aimless way.
 The autumn's passive beauty needs them all,
 And winter finds them warm, though sore and gray.
 They nurse young blossoms for the spring's sweet call,
 And shed new leaflets for the burst of May.
 —Thomas Wentworth Higginson in The Century

Nevada Miners Dyed Green.

A contract has been let on the Martin White mine, at Ward, Nev., and work is to be resumed forthwith. A queer phenomenon is connected with the working of the Martin White ore. The ore is very base, and it is necessary to roast the whole of it. During the roasting process no deleterious or disagreeable fumes are observable, yet the hair and the beards of all the men engaged about the works are soon dyed a bright and permanent green. Even the eyebrows of the workmen are as green as grass. The mines of Nevada mines ores of various kinds are smelted and roasted, but at none of them is either the hair or beards of the workmen changed from their natural hue. It is said there is less arsenic in the ore of the Martin White than in that of many other mines. Old smelters say arsenic has no such effect on the hair, and all declare that the emerald hue imparted to the hair is due to the presence of some unknown and mysterious metal or mineral. White, light and sandy beards and hair take a grass green, whereas black or dark brown hair is dyed a deep bottle green. The hair is not injured by its change of color. It retains its original softness and strength.

The Man of Real Force.

Contrary to general belief, then, the man of real force is never a bully, is never arbitrary or unjust, is never passionate, though he may be, and generally is, aggressive, and may, as occasion requires, give exhibitions of temper that is, nevertheless, kept in perfect control. Force of character brings with it self reliance and an imperious manner. Just as the really courageous man remains cool in the presence of danger, the self-reliant man keeps his temper under provocation because he feels confidence in himself. The coward grows excited and loud mouthed to conceal his real feelings. The arbitrary man, accustomed to force his views upon others, loses confidence in and control of himself when he fails to make his usual impression. It is at such a moment that real force of character begins to tell; it is then that the self-contained and self-respecting man dictates his terms and asserts his power.—Baltimore Sun.

The Seaworthiness of Monitors.

The seaworthiness of the monitors has been thoroughly tested. The old Monitor, which rounded Cape Horn in 1855 and behaved admirably in the long seas of the Pacific ocean. Soon after the civil war the old Miantonomoh made a cruise to Europe, encountering heavy weather. The seas would come over bow and stern four feet deep at times, but pass off quickly without even preventing the use of her guns. She rolled but 7 degrees, while the two ships accompanying her rolled 20 to 30 degrees. In the report of this cruise by Assistant Secretary Fox we find: "A vessel which attacks a monitor in a seaway must approach very close to have any chance of hitting such a low hull, and even then the monitor is half the time covered up with three or four feet of water, protecting herself and disturbing her opponent's fire."—American Magazine.

Agriculture of the Ainos.

The British consul at Hokkaido states that the Ainos—who are a remarkable tribe of small, hairy people, originally living by hunting and fishing—have been in great straits since the occupation of their fishing grounds by the Japanese in 1869. Since 1883 efforts have been made to relieve their distress and to teach them farming, and in 1886 about 800 acres were cultivated by them. In their chief home, in the Island of Yesso, the Ainos are estimated to number 14,000 individuals, with 3,600 houses. They are supposed to be gradually disappearing.—Arkansas Traveler.

First Fiddle to Somebody.

In the grand orchestra of life everybody is anxious to play first fiddle. Nay, almost everybody does play it; for although the first fiddle absolute may take precedence of all the rest, yet every second fiddle is first fiddle to somebody. As "fleas have smaller fleas to bite 'em, and so on ad infinitum," so every man who ticks a superior has an inferior to tickle him. If it were not for this pleasant arrangement we should have no social harmony, and it is only when this system of relations is disturbed that we experience discords and crashes.—New York Ledger.
