The administration sent to England to buy blankets for the United States Army. Just as good, if not better, blankets could have been bought at home.

Douglas county politics is fully vindicated by the uncover of the Omaha Bee. If that paper is not for McShane we have missed our guess.

Uron a final poll the democrats in Indiana find themselves short some 20,000 votes. In New York the republicans are sanguine and give their figures with an assurance born of absolute knowledge.

When the men who carried muskets in the crimson days of war, had their little pensions vetoed by this presidential star, then they quietly decided that they'd work for his defeat, and that little mark kept shrinking in a way quite hard to beat.

The ticket sticker or paster is recognized in politics as the most reprehensible and dishonest means invented to deceive the honest voter. It is a crime against the election laws of many states; yet, we have a democratic politician in this state seeking to crawl into office by means of the paster.

PASTER MCHSHANE.

The desperate attempt of John A. McShane and his literary bureau at Omaha to gain republican votes is both disgusting and amusing. Whenever a great statesman (?) descends to the personal level of the dead-beat ward worker in politics, by issuing pasters for tickets for himself, you may put it down that he will only lose votes instead of gaining by such silly means.

We will pay the above reward for any case of liver complaint, dyspepsia, sick headache, indigestion, constipation or costiveness we cannot cure with West's Vegetable Liver Pills, when the directions are strictly complied with. They are purely vegetable, and never fail to give satisfaction.

LORD SACKVILLE DISMISSED.

Ten days ago the country learned that the British Minister had undertaken to tell American citizens how to vote. It took the President all that time to find out that something had to be done about it. At last he has done what was demanded from the very first by a more astute and devoted Democratic leader, the Editor of "The Sun."

A prompt rebuke administered the instant Lord Sackville was discovered meddling in our election might have caused people in their satisfaction with such a maintenance of the Executive dignity to overlook the fact that the British Minister was electioneering in Mr Cleveland's interest, because he knew it was the interest of Great Britain.

The real importance of the incident lies in the conclusive proof of the English feeling and judgment it furnishes, and that is not in the least affected by the president's tardy action. From the outset of this campaign the republicans have declared that the administration's policy was a British policy, and that it received warm approval by such intelligent free traders as the English, because they knew it to be in their interest.

Just as soon as Mr. Cleveland's party found out that this opinion was hurting them, they denied it; denied that they favored free trade, and denied that the English were on their side. Yet Mr. Cleveland's message on the tariff was received with an outburst of English approval. The Mills bill had an equally warm welcome in England.

Mr. Cleveland's recommendation received the unanimous support of the English press, and his retaliation message was treated with good natured indifference as a necessity of the home canvass. And now the British minister says in substance to English voters on Pacific coast who claim to be disturbed by that message that it means nothing, and that when the president's re-election is secured he will again favor English interests.

CLEVELAND A DEMAGOGUE AND COWARD.

The cowardly demagogue was fully exemplified in the character of Grover Cleveland when he weighed Sackville West and British influence against the Irish vote for ten days and then slapped his friend, the Minister of Mr. Salisbury's Government, in the face. The result can only be that, the Irish will be disgusted with his cowardice, and the English with his treachery and dishonesty. It is a pitiable spectacle to see the president of this great nation insulting a foreign power, which is known to be most friendly to the policy he (the president) has advanced, touching our revenue affairs with that foreign nation, simply for the purpose of gaining a few votes in a national election.

While it is true Sackville West unwittingly showed the hand of his government to be upholding Mr. Cleveland; and that he done so in a private way with a supposed fellow countryman. The matter could upon no fair grounds be the subject of international inquiry and action. The uncalled for action of Mr. Cleveland parades both of the demagogue and coward and is inexcusable.

A large manufacturer of cloaks puts the case this way: "As long as the tariff remains at anything like the present figures, we will do our manufacturing in this country, and pay our hands from $2 to $5 for making a cloak. If the tariff is reduced to a free trade basis, we will have our garments made in Berlin, where we can get the work done from 50 cents to $1 each."
