always in stock. Nov. 26, 1888.

Sherwin & Williams' mixed paints, the best in the market, at Frick & Co's. drug store. 8 ct.

Women Suffrage Defeated.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 15.—In the hours of representatives this morning the bill granting to women the right of suffrage, was defeated by a vote of 192 to 7.

Cheated The Hangman.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 15.—Fritz Anschlag, the German who was to have been executed Friday for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock in January last, committed suicide last night by taking strychnin, and died shortly after midnight.

If They Can Count Them In.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Representative Thompson, secretary of the democratic congressional committee, told a Star reporter this afternoon that he thought the democrats would certainly have a majority of one or three in the next house.

Wants Fees Abolished.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—First Auditor Chenoweth in his annual report to the secretary of the treasury recommends the abolition of the system, as applied to United States attorneys, marshals and clerks, and the adoption instead of just and reasonable salaries.

Army Transfers.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 15.—General Nelson A. Miles received formal notice from the war department at Washington last evening, of his transfer to San Francisco, to take command of the division of the Pacific, vice General O. O. Howard who goes east to assume command of the Atlantic.

Another Papal Receipt.

DUBLIN, Nov. 16.—The Irish bishops have received another papal receipt. It orders them to actively execute the former receipt, which instructs them to denounce the plan of campaign and boycotting. It also orders them to direct priests to preach against agitation, and to forbid them to take part in boycotting and plan of campaign movements, which they must oppose with all means in their power.

Woman's Congress.

DETROIT, Nov. 16.—At the morning session of the woman's congress, reports from the vice presidents and various committees were made, embracing the moral, industrial and educational condition of women in the several states. According to these reports the general condition of women is advancing steadily. Some comparative statistics on the question of the labor of men and women were presented, but they were of a fragmentary character. The report of the treasurer shows that all bills have been paid and there is a comfortable balance in the bank.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Nellie Reid Cady, of Iowa, read a paper on organization among women.

WHAT ON EARTH

is the reason people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGG'S BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and ever bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing. For sale by O. P. Smith & Co., druggists.

—Don't go to Omaha when you want to get your beautiful parlor and bed room sets but go to Henry Boeck's furniture emporium where you can get everything in the furniture line that will go to make your home beautiful and comfortable; and above all you can get it cheap. Remember that he who sells most can sell cheapest.

HOW CAN PARENTS

allow their children to cough and strain and cough and strain say: "Oh! it is only a little cold" and keep giving them cheap and dangerous medicines, until they are down with lung fever or consumption, when they can be so easily relieved by BEGG'S CHERRY COUGH SYRUP? It has no superior, and few equals. For sale by O. P. Smith & Co., druggists.

If you want anything in the jewelry line, go to H. M. Gault. He will sell you good goods at low prices and guarantee them as represented.

For Rent

Part, or all of my house to small family. Cor. 6th and Day streets.

Mrs. J. A. BUEHL.

COUGH! and COUGH! and COUGH!

What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGG'S CHERRY COUGH SYRUP positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. Sold by O. P. Smith & Co., druggists.

The Street Gamblers of China.

One never failing source of amusement was watching the street gamblers. You see a man, generally the most innocent looking of Chinamen, if one Chinaman can be said to look in any way different from another, unless in size, walking along with what looks like a rather large umbrella. He stops in what he thinks to be a convenient place, always near a corner, sticks this machine on the ground, which in some ingenious way becomes a gambling table, marked into squares and spots. In an instant he is surrounded by a crowd of all ages, and the game goes merrily on.

Suddenly a cry of police goes up and in an instant man and table have mysteriously disappeared and the crowd has scattered. I believe the law is strict against gambling, but the police seem about as efficient to stop and prevent it as are the police of our country. I never could get to understand the game, but it seems to be run on the good old principle that the odds should be in favor of the bank, as the bank seemed always to win. After watching the game for several days, I came to the conclusion that the person who raised the cry of police must be a confederate, as it was always done when the stakes were quite large, that is, for that game, as only pieces of copper were placed on the board, and in his anxiety to get away the man would not wait to hand back to the players their money, but would disappear, money, table, and all.—Samuel F. Farrar in Chicago Journal.

The Detectives of Berlin.

The detectives of Berlin are the nearest approach in stolidity to those of London. There is really very little crime in the German empire, on account of the extraordinary sciences that are imposed and the strict military discipline that prevails throughout the empire, and which has its highest development in Berlin. On this account the most experienced and capable detectives are taken out of the criminal service as rapidly as possible, and promoted to the official department. Their duties consist solely in watching socialism and guarding eminent Germans from bombs and dynamite. Bismarck, for instance, never travels without the protection of at least two of the crack officers of the detective corps, and when he takes a ride in the park, or even ventures on a short official visit to one of the departments, a man precedes and follows him. The emperor, I may remark in passing, is never guarded by detectives, but his personal staff hover about him in a fashion that renders any interference from nihilists or socialists well high impossible. As to the skill of the German detectives, it cannot, I think, be compared for a moment with that of the police of Paris or New York.—New York Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Peccant Idea About Religion.

A student deeply versed in ecclesiastical matters recently advanced a very peculiar idea while conversing with a friend. He said that the established religion of a country owed its principal doctrines less to faith than to the conditions of its climate and surroundings. He cited the beautiful religion of the natives of India, who would not eat anything that had once lived, because, while all could take away life, only One could give it. He argued that a religious belief like that could only have its origin in an intensely hot climate like that of India, where animal food is not necessary to sustain life. Among the Laplanders such a religion could never obtain, because it was absolutely necessary for the inhabitants of so high a latitude to keep the warmth of the body up to a certain heat. Nothing but animal fat could do that.—New York Sun.

A Rope Walker's Confession.

If I myself do not feel nervous, I am afraid the many persons I have carried on my back across the rope have felt a trifle perturbed, save when they have been professional assistants. In reality there is nothing in the world for them to be afraid of. All they have to do is to sit perfectly still, refrain from clenching too tightly around the neck and leave the rest to me. When I am carrying any one over for the first time, I chat to him continuously on any indifferent subject I can think about, and try in this manner to relieve his anxiety, and I always caution him against looking downward when in mid air. Somehow, though, he never seems quite happy, and I always detect a gasp of relief when the end of the rope and the platform are reached. More than once the victim has devoutly exclaimed, "Never again!"—J. B. Blondin in Lippincott's.

Dissipation of Vital Energy.

Truly did Emerson designate dissipation as the greatest evil in life. He did not mean dissipation in the narrow and common sense of excess of drinking. He meant dissipation of all sorts—the dissipation of vital energy in the pursuit of trivial objects, social dissipation, waste of time, waste of money, waste in general. Social dissipation is one of the most harmful forms of dissipation, because it is so insidious, apparently so innocent. We are commanded to love our neighbors, but we are not commanded to call on them two or three times a week. The amount of time consumed in superfluous and purposeless social intercourse in this world is something positively appalling.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE GLOWING COALS.

The glowing coals are redly bright, And deepen the soft shades of night That in the sheltering corners hide Their fitful forms, in haste to glide From out the ruby rays of light.

And as I look they fade from sight; Vague forms of thought, forgotten quite Instead seem hovering beside The glowing coals.

And dreams of boyish fear and fright, In fancy's colored hues bedight, Stream down the drowsy mental tide; Till fact and fancy both subside, And in one dull, deep slumber, unite The glowing coals.

—N. B. in Rochester Post-Express.

The Locomotive Engineer's Anxiety.

The passenger runner's greatest concern is to "make time." Some trains are scheduled so that the engine man must keep his engine up to its very highest efficiency over every furlong of its journey in order to arrive at destination on time. A little carelessness in firing, in letting cold water into the boiler irregularly, or in slackening more than is necessary where the right to the track is in doubt for a few rods; that sort of a score of similar circumstances may make five minutes' delay in the arrival at the terminus and necessitate an embarrassing interview with the train master. A trip on a crowded line may involve watching for danger signals every quarter of a mile and the maintenance of such high speed that they must be obeyed the instant they are espied in order to avoid the possibility of collision.

The passenger runner finds himself now and then with a disabled engine on his hands, and two or three hundred passengers standing around apparently ready to eat him up if he does not remedy the difficulty in short order. Often in such cases he is in doubt himself whether the repairs necessary to enable his engine to proceed will occupy fifteen minutes or an hour. This, with the knotty question of where the nearest repair engine is, causes the brow to knit and the sweat to start, and to the engine runner proves an experience which he long remembers.—B. B. Adams, Jr., in Scribner's Magazine.

The Young Emperor of Germany.

The emperor, during these maneuvers, has handled his troops with the slightest extraneous assistance that I could see, giving his orders quickly and sharply, and, as the events proved, with no reason to recall his words. I speak only of what appears on the outside, and cannot say that he does not just as anxiously consult every source of strategic knowledge on the eve of his campaigns. Of course he knows the immense importance of impressing an army with the fact that its chief is a clear thinker, reaching his conclusions rapidly and applying them with immediate effect; and while all the world is regarding his every motion in a spirit of not altogether friendly criticism, it is likely that he is going to furnish the picture of a nominal military chief whose steps are only taken while leaning on the arm of an older servant.—Fountain Bigelow in Army and Navy Gazette.

The Cat's Quiet Nerves.

Life has always something in reserve for the cat. She is a mine of resources, and in consequence she is ever serene and hopeful. She can endure all night exposures, the fatigue of the hunt, the unevenness of her diet. Eight extra lives, each one compounded of similar exposures and fatigues and irregularities, are hers. How do I explain this? It is all due to her attitude toward the world, to the composed state of her nerves, and this to her peculiarly blissful accomplishment, her purr. Herein she is strong against the onslaughts of time and the ingenuity of the small boy. She drinks, camel like, when fountains offer, slips with a quiet thrust of her claw through grasping fingers, nerved alike for deprivation and sudden attack by the quiet hour purged away by the kitchen fire.—G. O. Shields in Harper's Magazine.

Natural Gas That Kills.

There is a peculiar spring near Ashland, Ore., that emits gas that is sure death to all animals that nature. At one time it was frequented by the Indians as the great medicinal depository, where all diseases, no matter how complicated, were cured. Lizards, snakes and frogs die almost immediately when placed in contact with this peculiar gas. There is a spring at Soda Springs, I. T., from which the water has ceased to run, but which emits a stream of carbonic acid gas, and all about its orifice lie continually the bodies of birds which have been killed by the fumes.—New York Telegram.

Air from Steam Radiators.

In speaking of artificial heat the Manufacturer and Builder says that it is a mistake to suppose that steam heat is any "moister" or in any way different from other kinds. Air warmed by passing over a steam radiator is in no way different from that warmed by a stove or hot air furnace. In fact, the air is more likely to be impure in a room heated by a hot air furnace, from which a current of fresh air is constantly flowing.—Rural New Yorker.

Nearly everybody in England writes with a quill. You find them pat for public use in courts, in banks, in telegraph offices and postoffices—in fact, everywhere where people must write. If a man prefers to use a pen or a pencil he must carry it with him.—The Argonaut.

The London school board propose to drop the study of Latin and substitute modern languages.
