CITY CORDIALS.

A large number of the boys are enjoying good skating today where the sand does not interfere, but their space is somewhat limited.

Christ. Streich and Wm. Dorsen were arraigned before Judge Clifford yesterday and fined $3 and costs each for fighting on Christmas day.

Tomorrow evening a meeting will be held in the Presbyterian church. All who are desirous of having a revival in this city should be present.

Judge Russell issued marriage licenses today, to Conrad Vallery and Miss Louisa Neman also to Mr. Wm. H. Bogard and Miss Mary E. Carlisle.

The advance man for Haladay's minstrels is in the city today making preparations for the appearance of that company at the Waterman on Saturday evening next.

Mr. C. H. Peterson the proprietor of the ferry, informs us that the river is about blocked today, and should another night as cold as the last come on tonight the river will be entirely blocked and he will be obliged to cast anchor.

The new electric motor line between Omaha and Council Bluffs apparently has a charm for Plattsmouth people, the city being represented there by Messrs. C. H. Smith, L. C. Mercer and Harry Houck, who all have lucrative situations.

Daniel Creemer, a young man who informed the police that he was on his way to Iowa from the west, was arrested and lodged in jail for being drunk. He was brought up before Judge Clifford yesterday morning and fined $3 and costs. The police found $181 on his person, of which some roughs had attempted to relieve him.

The twenty-third annual meeting of the Nebraska State Board of Agriculture will be held at the State University chapel, Lincoln, commencing on Tuesday, the 15th day of January, 1889. All persons and other kindred associations interested in the welfare of the society and cause of agriculture generally, are most cordially invited to attend, and with their presence and counsel aid in the work of advancing agriculture in the state. This is the business meeting of the board.

As a well dressed young man leisurely sat in the office of Skinner & Ritchie this morning, he apparently was deeply interested in thought on some subject, when a venerable old gentleman crossed the street in that vicinity in the direction of his office, when all of a sudden an idea flashed across the young man's mind which caused him to ask, "Is that Mr. Russell?" Upon being informed that it was, he asked, "Is that the place where you get the licenses?"

We have made arrangements whereby we will receive new subscriptions to the Forum with a subscription to the WEEKLY HERALD for $5.00. The price of the Forum alone is $5 a year. It is "the foremost American review" of living subjects, and among its contributors are 200 of the leading writers of the world. It gives authoritative discussions of each side alike of every leading question of the time. The New York Herald says of it: "It has done more to bring the thinking men of the country into connection with current literature than any other publication." This is an exceptional opportunity for every reader of the HERALD to secure the Forum.

Last evening at a regular meeting of Rebekah Lodge, after initiation of candidates, the remaining part of meeting was taken up by the presentation by Bros. Bates and Larson of a very neat secretary for filing books and papers of the lodge, then following this a very neat set of officers jewels were presented as a Christmas present from the Brothers of Odd Fellows. The regalia which were ordered two weeks ago and were expected here for this meeting did not come, causing a disappointment. The brothers retiring from the room one at a time only to return from the anti room as soon as Gavil announced lodge closed, bringing with them cake, sandwiches and hot coffee, serving a lunch to all that were present—each brother wearing large white aprons, and smiles larger in proportion. The entire party leaving at a late hour for their homes well pleased.

A Democrat Pants for his Pants

On Christmas day the startling information was forwarded to Mr. Erdr Murphy of Cedar Creek who was then in this city enjoying the luxuries brought to bear by that day, from one of his fellow citizens named Vet Draper who was, judging by the impression the dispatch would make upon a nervous man, in sore distress and that the whole city of Cedar Creek, which had so long harbored him, had then shunned him and he had been turned upon the streets that cold Christmas day in such a predicament as we will later relate. He requested Fred to send the sheriff immediately, and he, thinking that a lion had broke loose in the town or a band of outlaws had struck it unaware, started in pursuit of Sheriff Eikenbary, but upon learning that he was absent from the city, sought the whereabouts of deputy sheriff Miller, whom he informed of the distress of his friend at Cedar Creek. The deputy then prepared himself for the worst, attaching himself to several bulldog guns, a couple of pairs of handcuffs, and all necessaries to face an army of cowboys, started on his way, thinking of the dangers he might encounter before his return and that he might never return—the unkindest thought of all. The road seemed a long and tedious one as he drove along that cold day while the wind whistled through his whiskers and his thoughts were the saddest.

When the deputy arrived at the lonely burg, the darkness was fast creeping but with little trouble he succeeded in finding the troubled man, who, when questioned as to the source of his annoyance, answered that some one had stolen his (Draper's) pants. Draper is a staunch democrat, and nine people out of every ten can guess accurately the quality of the material in democratic pants since election day.

Cleveland has made many of his followers wear overalls, and we do not state that this was the only kind Draper possessed but we know of many democrats in that predicament at present. It is yet a mystery how he navigated without going to bed until the deputy had spotted the thief and returned the heaviest part of his apparel. Whether he attired himself in a bed quilt and started in company with the deputy in search of the thief, we know not, but the two men, after learning that their victim was enjoying himself at a ball, proceeded thence.

Mr. Draper spotted a pair of pants in the ball room which he recognized as his, when he and the official approached the man who wore a mountain houser strapped to each hip for protection. The officer then asked Mr. Draper if the pants were his and he answered, "They look like mine." "But I want you to say whether they belong to you." The embarrassed democrat who scarcely knew what he had said or what he should say, then replied: "I don't know, they look like mine." The officer then told him if he would say that the pants belonged to him that he would arrest the fellow, but the deputy was obliged to throw up the job and return home dissatisfied with the fruitless attempt to do his duty. All overalls look alike, and we do not condemn the man for not claiming the pants. Moral—Mark your overalls.

20 per cent discount on Silk Handkerchiefs Mufflers and all winter Goods at S. & C. Mayer's the leading Clothiers. 61 Success of Hallen & Hart in "Later On" at Heuck's.

"Later On," a musical and farce comedy by H. Gratton Donnelly, which Hallen & Hart produced Sunday afternoon and evening for the first time in Cincinnati at Heuck's theatre, achieved a decided and well-merited success. Seldom has a musical farce by an American author been directed with more laughter and enthusiasm. Form the time the characters were thoroughly introduced the fate of the play was never for a moment in doubt, and the interest first awakened was held in firmer and firmer grasp until the final fall of the curtain.

Fred Hallen and Joe Hart have one of the strongest musical companies that has visited Cincinnati. Hallen & Hart have every reason to be satisfied with the talents of these people, which were fully appreciated by the enthusiastic audience last night. Applause was abundant and encores numerous. Mr. Hart as "Jolly Todd" is well suited to that character, and his ability as a comedian was made manifest. His banjo production in the last act was a special feature of entertainment. Mr. Hallen, as "Jack Plunzer," acted, sang and danced most effectively, and his little terpsichorean in the last act was applauded to the echo. The charming medleys, beautiful marches, the superb dancing, and Hallen and Hart as the drum majors, completely captured the house.

The company and play have scored a triumph, and they will be very successful here and elsewhere, for they cannot fail to please.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The citizens of Plattsmouth will be allowed the rare opportunity of seeing this excellent company tonight at the Waterman opera house in "Later On." This city should surely afford a good house tonight, as no one can say that the town has been outshowered of late. Seats on sale at J. P. Young's book store.

"Why freeze or starve?" is the pointed question asked by the manufacturers of "Garland Stoves;" and we would add: Why buy a poor imitation when for the same price you can get the genuine Garland Stove? Sold by O. P. Smith & Co.

GOD KNOWS. D drops and dies in morning light—The rose that yesterday was whole; Ah, whither, on the wind of night, Is borne the fragrance of my soul? It sinks upon the ocean zone—The wind that smote the tender rose; Ah, whither has the fragrance flown, And what shall give my soul repose? It breaks upon the rocky shore—The vast, tumultuous, grieving sea; Ah, never, never, never more Can love and peace come back to me! It soars far up the lonely sky, It faints in regions of the blest—The endless, bitter human cry—And only God can tell the rest. —William Winter.

A New Axle Box. Some Prussian railways are experimenting with axle boxes fitted with bearings of vegetable parchment in place of brass. The parchment is strongly compressed before being used, and it is thoroughly dried to prevent subsequent shrinkage. An emulsion of water and oil, any of the mineral oils, is used as lubricant. The parchment soon becomes impregnated with oil, and is able to go a long time without a renewal of lubrication. Superiority to metal is claimed for it.—Chicago Herald.
