PENNSYLVANIA experienced a slight earthquake Friday. Wamamaker is evidently shaking up persons and things in the postoffice department.

THE new Attorney General is a namesake of the first President Harrison; and there are several other reasons, it may be added, for believing that he will turn out to be a decided improvement upon Pan Electric Garland.

THERE never was an inauguration where such good feeling existed between the outgoing and incoming parties. May we have always such good feeling between rival parties and then indeed it will be Government "of the people by the people."

If there is any truth in the report that the Nipic which is a United States man-of-war has been blown up by a German torpedo off Samoa, you will soon see an American fleet of iron clads, built on the largest plans, competent to take care of itself, and it will all be done so quick it will astonish Bismarck a good deal. When Uncle Sam wants to make some speed he is a rusher. Although the Nipic is a wooden vessel and also the other two vessels we have in the Samoa waters, they are equal to the German force in those waters and by the time Germany gets a better fleet there Uncle Sam can get one or two there also.

THE following from the Oskaloosa Herald gives the editors some idea of what they are created for, their fate and final doom:

"The work of an editor in party harness is found in the fitting of men for public station. Some reflect credit on the workers, but the majority of the editors find the creatures thus made very early turn on them and, if possible, betray them on their interests on the first occasion. The more fellows an editor has out whose clay he is helped to put up, the more certain he is of enemies and of men ready to assume the role of Judas without even the excuse of the thirty pieces. Editors are for work and to talk taffy—not to sit with the elect in the Sanhedrim."

THE HAYTI REBELLION.

The fact that Hypolite went under very quickly after the 4th of March and that Collector Magone is still holding a vessel belonging to the Legitimate government loaded with arms for Hayti, indicate pretty clearly that Mr. Bayard was encouraging the insurrection on that island which accounts for his wonderful promptness and energy in seizing the American vessel that tried to run Legitime's blockade, in order to carry arms and troops for the insurgent army.

It is to be hoped the friendly relations between the United States and Hayti will be restored now that the republicans are in power in Washington. The new administration has no prejudice to gratify in the destruction of the Haytian government and establish the rule of anarchy and brigandage there simply because it is a colored man's country.—Lincoln Journal.

PRESIDENT HARRISON.

The representative of the principle of Protection to American industry has entered upon the duties of his office as President amid the hearty good wishes and hopes for the success of his Administration of the great mass of his fellow-citizens. Even within the short time which has elapsed since his election many, very many, of those who have opposed him have become convinced that the idea of which he is now the official exponent are those under whose influence the progress and prosperity of the Republic can best be assured, its honor best maintained, and its interests best advanced.

The views and sentiments expressed in his inaugural address are worthy of the man, the office, and the occasion. They show that the President possesses a clear knowledge of the responsibilities of his position, and fully understands the requirements of the country. His utterances give assurance to all that during his term of office the affairs of the nation will be conducted in such manner as will reflect credit upon American statesmanship and rebound to the benefit of the whole people. Aided by the wise counsels and hearty support of the great and generous patriot and statesman to whom he has confided the control of the State Department and his worthy colleagues in the Cabinet, President Harrison will without doubt avail himself of opportunities whenever presented to carry out the wise and patriotic policy indicated in his address, increase the respect entertained for us by foreign powers, and promote the welfare of our citizens of every section and element.—Irish World.

"Wine, Women and Song," but the greatest of these is, "women." "Wine is a mocker," and song is good to "soothe the savage," but women respond to every active power and sentiment of the human mind when in good health. But when afflicted with disease you will find them, tantalizing, coquettish, cross, and hard to please. For all "female complaints," sick headache, irregularities, nervousness, prolapsus and other displacements popularly known as "female weakness" and other diseases, peculiar to the sex, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the great world-famed remedy.

"COMANCHE JACK'S" RECORD.

In His Lifetime He Has Shot Thirty-one Men and Helped Hang Seventeen.

In this western city on the streets and in the hotel lobbies every day one meets with many of the most noted western characters of the day. Bret Harte would here find many subjects for wild western history that would throw some of his previous creations of fiction into the shade. The Indian territory is near by, where there is employed a large number of brave and hardy men as deputy United States marshals who appear periodically in the largest city most convenient to their working place, so that Wichita is often called upon to entertain visitors of almost as much notoriety as "Billy the Kid" or Jesse James. Chief among this number is Deputy United States Marshal Jack Stillwell, now stationed at Fort Reno, I. T. Jack, or rather "Comanche Jack," as he is familiarly known, is a handsome looking chap, with a laughing blue eye, curly hair slightly tinged with gray, for this noted borderman is just 50 years of age, about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches in height, and of massive build. He is also the acknowledged crack pistol shot of the west, and even in the days of that Kansas cyclone known as "Wild Bill" who never missed a shot, Jack Stillwell ranked high.

The number of men killed by Jack is variously estimated at from twenty-five to thirty-one, and it is known that in addition he has aided in sending seventeen other men over the valley of death by means of the hangman's noose. Even in this country, where "killers" are to be met with every day, "Comanche Jack" Stillwell is a curiosity, and is pointed out to strangers with a strange mixture of awe and pride.

By this it must not be understood that this gallant deputy United States marshal is a desperado who goes about glorying in his bloody work. On the contrary, he is rather retiring in his disposition and only when he has been drinking boasts of his deeds. When desperate work is to be done or a bad desperado is to be taken Stillwell is always the man who is detailed to accomplish it. The territory desperadoes and cut throats all know and fear the intrepid officer, and are aware of the fact that if he goes after them he will get them, dead or alive. Many are the traps that have been laid to kill him, but he is as cunning as he is brave, and has always managed to evade the snares that would have ended the death of a less accomplished plainsman.

Brought up as he was among the Comanche Indians, Jack has never exercised the right of franchise, and at the age of 50 has never cast a vote. He speaks the Comanche and several other Indian languages as well as the Indians do themselves, and during the sitting of the United States court in this city it is always an amusing sight to see the Indians, dressed in their primitive way, following the great "White Chief," as they call Jack, about the streets. He calls them his "menagerie" and says they are a lot of dirty, thieving wretches for the most part, as well as the most accomplished liars in the world.—Wichita (Kan.) Cor. St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

She Whipped the Masher.

A small crowd of men and women, just out from the theatres, witnessed an odd street fight on Washington street, near the Adams house, on Saturday night. As usual there was a crowd of loungers, who are to be seen in that locality at all hours of the day and night. They were leaning at passersby in their usual fashion, when a gentleman with two ladies made his appearance. One of the women was separated from her companions by an accident, and a would be masher approached her with his face wreathed in smiles. He was clad in a long yellow ulster, and wore a derby hat. As he lifted his hat and was about to accost her, she wheeled around like a flash and hit him a smart slap on his face, with the words:

"What do you mean by insulting me, sir?" She didn't stop there, either, for as the man rushed upon her and attempted to strike her in a most cowardly manner, she took a true pugilistic attitude, and his blow glanced harmlessly off. Before anybody could interfere, she had thrown her muf into the sidewalk and was delivering blows thick and fast upon her antagonist, who, although he tried to strike back, could do little. A powerful blow with her right hand finally laid the young man on the sidewalk amid the cheers of the crowd. He picked himself up and walked off at a rapid rate, while the young woman joined her companions, not at all the worse for her adventure, seemingly.—Boston Cor. New York Tribune.

WHAT IS LOVE?

A Passionate Poetess Descends on a Most Mysterious Subject.

Love is the essence of every existing thing; the root of life; the recompense for death. It is the all creative spark, the vital force of the universe. There is power to achieve in the mere utterance of the word—love. I think God said: "I love the earth," and lo! the earth sprang into being. Love is the natural element of all things. The illimitable oceans of space are composed of the waters of Love. Whoever loves most widely and warmly is most in harmony with the universe. Love is the key to success. To love your work is to excel in it. To love observing or aim is to eventually obtain and attain it.

Love is at once an ecstasy and an agony. It is the bridge whereon we are compelled to walk continually to and fro, between heaven and hell, but ever back to heaven. When the bridge breaks or its timbers rot away, then are we precipitated into hell, and unable to find the door to heaven again; for the only way to go is over the bridge of Love. He who loves greatly hates feebly. All strong emotions proceed from and derive their strength from Love. If Love uses his own force there is nothing left for Hate. It is only when Love grows indolent and sleeps that Hate is enabled to steal his garments of strength and sally forth to do evil. But even then he has not his elder and divine brother's power; for he was sired by man, and Love was fathered by God.

God espoused nothing and said, "I love," and Love was born to rule the universe. Afterward nothing conceived and bore by man a misshapen creature, called Hate; but at one glance from the divine eyes of his nobly born brother he falls vanquished at the feet of Love.

To love is to become wise with the wisdom of ages, yet to become as a little child in humility and subjection.

To love enables us to lead an army into the jaws of death, and to serve as a menial at the feet of one so loved.

To love is to know happiness but not contentment, rapture but not peace, exhilaration but not satisfaction; for contentment means inertia, peace means stagnation, and satisfaction means satiety, and these three cannot exist where love is. Love and action are co-existent, and there is no repose where love is, but there is rest, even in its restlessness, ecstasy in its misery, hope in its fear, joy in its sorrow, and sweet in its bitter.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Once a Week.

Pat's Prompt Reply.

Echo was a mountain nymph in the old poetic days, but modern realism has changed her into an Irishman. At least the guests of a Georgia colonel must have concluded so. Col. Ogechee has a very remarkable echo on his place a few miles from this city; one, in fact, which would clearly repeat whole sentences.

The gentlemen to whom this assertion was made were interested, but incredulous, and arranged to accompany Col. Ogechee home the next afternoon to test the wonderful echo. The colonel found, on getting home, that in the heat of the discussion he had claimed more than the facts justified. Determined not to be beaten, he called his Irish laborer.

"Pat," says he, "some gentlemen are coming home with me to-morrow afternoon to hear the echo. Now, I want you to go across the river before time for me to arrive, so you can answer back whatever we may call out."

"You mane for me to play licker, sorr?" asked Pat, grinning.

"That's it exactly," said the colonel.

"Now do you thoroughly understand that you are to answer back exactly what we say?"

"Oh, yis, sorr; ye can depend on me entirely."

Next afternoon the colonel took his friends to the river bank, and all were ready for the experiment.

Making a speaking trumpet of his hands, the colonel roared:

"Are you there?"

Back came the echo with startling distinctness:

"Yis, sorr; O've been here since four av the clock."—Savannah News.

A Costly Wager.

At the New York assizes, in March, 1812, a trial came on in which Rev. B. Gilbert was plaintiff and Sir Mark Sykes, baronet, defendant. It appeared that the baronet, at his own table during a dinner party, in the course of a conversation respecting the hazard to which the life of Bonaparte was exposed, had offered, upon the receipt of 100 guineas, to pay 1 guinea a day as long as he (Bonaparte) should remain alive. Mr. Gilbert suddenly took up the offer; but, finding that the sense of the company was against making a serious matter of a bet proposed at a moment of conviviality, he said: "If you will submit, Sir Mark, to ask it as a favor, you may be off." This the baronet refused to do. The 100 guineas were sent by Mr. Gilbert, of which Sir Mark acknowledged the receipt, and he had continued paying the guinea a day for nearly three years. At length he declined further payment, and this action was for recovery of the sum still due upon the contract.—Chambers' Journal.

A Busy Clergyman.

Mr. Spurgeon, the well known London preacher, has a beautiful residence at Beulah, Upper Norwood, with extensive grounds and handsome conservatories. His correspondence averages 500 letters a day, and he employs three secretaries to answer the communications which come to him from all parts of the world. The enormous revenues of the Metropolitan Tabernacle are entirely devoted to the various philanthropic movements in which the reverend gentleman is interested, as the ample income derives from his books and sermons is more than sufficient for his utmost needs.—Philadelphia Times.
