MUDLINGS.

Little drops of water
Fall on this mighty planet,
And mingle with the sun
That hides our Sioux Falls Granite.

Main street is paved.

"Mr. Todd, you are wanted across the street at the bank."

"Yes, I was just waiting for the mud to dry up so I could get over."

"Bring me a cable," said an alderman, as he stood on Mumm's corner, "I want to fathom this cavern."

"What's your idea in that?" asked the little rivet as it gurgled over the pavement to the hole.

"I'm going to have it up in the council Monday." And the pavement sighed as it realized the age of waiting for repair had only begun.

"I understand you are going to Washington, Phil?"

"Yes."

"How soon?"

"I expect to start next week if the flat boat can run on the street to haul me off."

"Do you favor protection?" asked the sewer of the pavement.

"Yes, but for revenue only; all this surplus should be done away with."

"I am completely surrounded with tracks," said the depot, "and that makes so many frogs."

"I can more than sympathize with you," replied the opera house, "for I am full of tracks and endure a great deal of croaking."

"I'm more aristocratic than you," sneered the sandbar.

"You base and awful thing, how dare you speak so ill?" retorted Main street.

"But, I have a fifty thousand dollar appropriation, and you haven't got fifty cents," was the sandbar's reply.

A Burlesque.

The following burlesque upon the custom of publishing a "card of thanks" is from the pen of Walt Mason: "Mr. Absalom W. Pedigree desires to thank his friends and neighbors for their unremitting kindness in the dark hour of his bereavement, following the loss of his beloved wife. Special thanks are tendered to Rev. Jimaiong for his exquisite prayer at the grave, which was worthy of T. De Witt Talmage; also to Mr. Bones, the undertaker, who conducted the funeral in an admirable manner from beginning to end; also to Mr. Allover the florist, whose present of a beautiful floral wreath served greatly to assuage the grief of a sorrowing husband. And thanks are given to the mourners, one and all.— Their conduct was thoroughly in keeping with the occasion, and it was due in a large measure to them that the funeral was made one of the social successes of the season. The anguished widower would also express his gratitude to Mr. Phippen, the urbane and genial proprietor of the marble yards, who has agreed to furnish a handsome monument at reduced rates. ABSALOM W. PEDIGREE."

PERSONALS.

Judge Vanatta was in Omaha today.

Hon. F. E. White was in Omaha last night.

J. B. Strode came in from Lincoln last night.

Geo. Brinklow left this morning for Denison, Texas.

Mrs. John McCarthy, of Nebraska City, was in town today.

Byron Clark went to Lincoln this morning on legal business.

Fred Carruth and Guy Livingston were Omaha passengers last night.

Mrs. May Kennedy, Miss Burkel, Mrs. Capt. H. E. Palmer were Omaha visitors this morning.

Mrs. Wm. Walker returned to Sidney, Iowa, last night, after visiting in this city and Greenwood.

Miss Lily Stockton returned to Omaha last night after visiting a few days at the home of C. E. Westcott.

J. L. Farthing left this morning for Grand Island and Kearney on business for the Cedar creek stone and gravel company.

A. F. Coon of David City, deputy oil inspector of the state of Nebraska, who was left over from the last legislature, was in the city last night attending to official inspections.

Wolf Premiums Paid.

Cass county laid out 42 big silver dollars yesterday and today as bounty on wolf scalps. Yesterday Mr. Deles Denier, of Avoca precinct, brought to the county clerk's office the scalps of seven young wolves, which brought him $3 each. This morning Deputy Dickson was again a little bit surprised to have seven live young wolves presented: this time by L. D. Curtis of Liberty precinct. This litter was only of a few days' experience in this world and had not yet opened their eyes to see light. The story of their capture was that Mr. Curtis was driving over the prairie and found one of them on his way, and proceeding a few hundred feet farther found six others huddled together. The whole litter was bagged and brought in for the bounty, and killed.

The Peddler's Tricks.

People who know that there is a corporation ordinance forbidding peddlers from standing on or outside the curb of any of the city streets often wonder how the long lines of howling hawkers manage day after day, without apparent molestation, to bother the streams of busy people that approach the Brooklyn bridge along Park row every evening. A similar state of things exists in Fulton street, and in a less degree on several others leading to the ferries. But if one watches these fellows for half an hour together he will see them suddenly, with one accord, cease their jabber, snatch the underpinning from their little stands and trundle them over to the other side of the street. The cause of this is the approach of the august policeman on his beat. Haughtily he comes along, twirling his little club with dexterous jerk. Out of the corner of his eye he observes the watchful row of peddlers over the way, but they are not on his beat, and he passes on over his half mile tour. It will be thirty minutes before he comes back again, and the hawksters know it. Before he is out of sight the caravan has waded across the street once more, and the interrupted trade in figs, oranges, bananas, candy, combs, collar buttons and "pigs in clover" goes briskly on.—New York Tribune.

What Constitutes a Pretty Girl.

Form is most important. Coloring and a fine skin will not make a fine face strictly beautiful unless the features are regular and the head and face of perfect contour. The eyes should be set horizontally, having neither an upward nor downward inclination, not too far apart nor too close together. The nose should be placed at even distance between the eyes, joining the forehead in a subtle curve, the lower portion straight, to emphasize the surrounding curves of the cheeks and lips. The "mouth like a Cupid's bow" is very beautiful.

The distance from the eyes to the tip of the nose, and from there to the chin, should each be one-fourth the length of the face; the mouth should be set at one-third the length of nose and chin; the chin should taper slightly to form an oval outline of face.

Nevertheless, with features which do not come up to the ideal, a girl will be considered "pretty" if she has smooth, clear skin, bright, animated eyes and good teeth.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mistakes About Shakespeare.

A great many mistakes are made in some of the modern productions of Shakespearean plays. A common one is an effort to attain an imposing effect by means of numbers on the stage. This is a great mistake. Take the mob, for instance. The tendency of an audience is to look at the mob and not at the actor, who should be the central figure. The same way with a ballet, or any other means of crowding a lot of people into view of the audience. A country dance, or something of that sort, may be conveniently worked in in some of the plays, but Shakespeare wrote for actors and not for crowds, and the most successful productions of his plays are those given by companies selected with an idea as to the abilities of each and every actor for the part to be presented. Shakespeare was not at all a spectacular writer.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Poisonous Decorations.

Cretannes of the cheap sort used for decorating rooms turn out to be as arsenically poisonous as green wall paper. Out of 44 samples recently examined in London, none were free from arsenic, 3 had only faint traces of it, 21 had larger traces, 19 were classed as very bad, and 9 were called "distinctly dangerous." One specimen yielded 19 1/2 grains of white arsenic to the square yard. The greens and blues were the least harmful, while reds, browns and blacks were heavily loaded with poison.—Herald of Health.

Uncle Cuffy at the Menagerie.

Showman (before the cage)—This is the famous female ostrich that lives on old nails and iron.

Uncle Cuffy—De laws a mussy! Dat de ting I yerry 'bout to de mass meetin! De female suffridge! I sho' I ain't gwine wote for dat bud, for he set down in my kitchen, an' eat up all my cookin' 'utensils. But I glad I see um' anyhow.—Texas Siftings.
