B. & M. Time Table.

Table with 2 columns: Direction (GOING WEST, GOING EAST) and Time/Station. Includes routes like No. 1 to Omaha and No. 3 to Omaha.

All trains run daily by way of Omaha, except Nos. 1 and 3 which run to and from Plattsmouth daily except Sunday.

Arrival and Departure of the Mails.

Table of mail arrivals and departures from Plattsmouth postoffice, listing times for various routes.

Mail should be deposited fifteen minutes before the above time to insure dispatch.

REPORTS from all parts of the country show that copious rains have dispelled all fears of drought and vastly improved the prospect for a bountiful harvest of wheat and corn.

THERE are a larger number of cottages and fine dwelling houses being built and almost completed this spring than has been built in this city for the past three years, and the contractors tell us they have more contracts for houses than they have not been commenced, than they can build this summer.

PLATTSMOUTH GROWING.

PLATTSMOUTH has got a growth this spring that is a real boom and it is not a flash in the pan but a steady growth and one that will last and increase in strength as time advances.

The work on the Electric Lamp Manufacturing building has been commenced, and will be pushed to completion as fast as possible.

The excavation for the new $40,000 hotel is about completed and a number of buildings are now waiting for brick, which have been commenced and work stopped for want of this material.

The Catholics have contracted for a fine building that will use 10,000 brick which will be commenced as soon as the material can be procured.

THE LATEST SOUTHERN OUT-RAGE.

There seems to be no room for doubt in the matter of the reported election outrage of Monday last at Lafayette, in Louisiana. It is definitely certified that a band of armed white men surrounded the polls and threatened to kill any colored man who should attempt to cast a vote.

The Sheriff tried to protect the colored voters and to enforce the law, but he had no support, so was obliged to close the polls and appeal to the governor for assistance. This is not a story of the past, it will be observed. It is a thing of the present, and cannot be put aside with the familiar plea that we should let bygones be bygones.

We are now living in the year 1889, nearly a quarter of a century after the close of the war, and still it is possible for an election to be prevented by the arbitrary interference of a gang of ruffians, determined that only such votes shall be cast as they see proper to permit. The facts are distinct and conclusive. It is useless to search for any explanation except that of direct hostility to the idea of honest and peaceful government; and it is equally idle to say that the occurrence is a mere local accident, having no force as an indication of southern sentiment.

The melancholy truth is that the same thing might easily have happened in any other part of the south. It is by such means that the power of the democratic party is maintained throughout all that part of the country. Whenever it is necessary to resort to intimidation, fraud and violence to keep the colored voters away from the polls and prevent the success of the republican ticket, the white democrats are ready to do the miserable work, and public sentiment in the community is sure to endorse and defend the proceeding. It is not true that the colored man's right to vote is recognized in any southern state. On the contrary it is systematically scouted and resisted.

The political leaders are all committed to the theory that the whites are justifiable in suppressing the colored vote by any process that can be made to accomplish such a result. We may as well face the issue squarely. It can profit us nothing to deceive ourselves in a case where the testimony is so clear and complete. The time may come when it will be possible for all classes of citizens to vote freely and safely in the south; but that time has certainly not yet arrived, nor are the signs of its approach very encouraging. Possibly a way may be found to hurry it somewhat during the next four years. That is the hope, at least, of all good and patriotic citizens; and it remains to be seen what the new congress, co-operating with a republican president, will do toward the solution of the grave and difficult problem.—Globe Democrat.

TRUTH IN DEATH.

But He Regretted It, and Added a Falsehood at Last.

We had a man named Burrows in our mining camp, and he was without doubt the most notorious liar Nevada will ever shelter. His fame as a liar spread for a hundred miles around, and men used to stop at our camp to get a look at him. He wasn't a wicked man, and he had no malice about him, but he was a natural born liar. He lied about his father, his mother, his wife, brothers, sisters, and everybody else, and for every hour in the day he had a new falsehood. He had a claim of his own and was fairly industrious, and so we had no excuse to drive him out, although his lies were continually kicking up ill feeling among the men. One day a lot of earth and rock caved in on him and inflicted fatal injuries, and a number of us knocked off work to be with him in his last moments. We would have thought the shadow of death would have brought a change of sentiment, but it did not. Lying there with only an hour of life left to him, he told us that he had buried a large amount of plunder. We all knew that he was from Ohio and had never seen any ocean, but he stuck to it. One of the men finally felt it his duty to say:

"Burrows, you have only a short time to live. You had best spend that in preparing for eternity."

"I've allus been good," he quietly replied. "Yes, but you are an awful liar, you know."

"Yes, I suppose so. I've told a million of them, haven't I?"

"No doubt of it."

"And every one has been laid up agin me?"

"Very likely."

"And my chance is rather slim?"

"Rather."

"Well, boys, it's my way, and I can't change at this late day. Just as that cave in came I struck a nugget as big as my head. It would value up a clean $15,000. If you'll be kind enough to pull it out and sell it and send the cash to my wife I'll die feeling better."

He went off soon after that, and we said to each other that he had given us the greatest yarn of all. No one took his claim, which was accounted a poor one, and it lay for three months before one of the boys dug into it one day for the pleasure buried and forgotten. He hadn't got the pick when he came across a lump of gold which balanced $13,280 in coin, and every shilling of the money was sent on to the widow, as directed. It got there to find that there was no widow, but six months later went to a sister. In his dying hour Burrows told the truth about his find, but, alas! he repented of it, and lied about having a wife.—New York Sun.

A Dog Story.

A week or two ago the porter of the Bristol Royal Infirmary was disturbed one morning about 6:30 by the howling of a dog outside the building. Finding that it continued, he went out and tried to drive it away; but it returned and continued to howl so piteously that he was obliged to go out to it again. This time he observed that one of its paws was injured. He, therefore, brought it in and sent for two nurses, who at once dressed the paw, and were rewarded by every canine sign of gratitude, including much licking of their hands. The patient was "retained" for two days, during which time he received every attention from those inside the house, and from the neighbors outside, who quickly heard of his case. As no one appeared to claim the dog, he was sent to the Home for Lost Dogs in the city, where so interesting an animal was, of course, not long in finding a purchaser. The dog was one of those called "lurchers."

I have myself called on the porter of the infirmary for confirmation of the foregoing, and am assured by him of its truth. How did an apparently friendless dog know where to go for surgical aid? The case differs from that of the dog which took its friend for treatment to King's College hospital, in London, for I understand that the King's College dog had previously been taken to the hospital for treatment itself, but in this case there is no such clue.—London Spectator.
