jaws of the porpoise. The jaws are hung up in the sun, and the oil drops down into a vessel, each pair producing about one-half pint. Watchmakers and others using a very fine oil take it in preference to all other, and it commands a big price. The blubber oil gives a good light, and for years was burned exclusively in the light houses along the coast. In a good season an Indian will catch nearly two hundred porpoises, each yielding about three gallons of oil; but most of them fall a good deal below this, as they are not over partial to labor, and than go out again. The custom is to get a few gallons of oil, go to the nearest market and sell it, then "rest" till forced by necessity to make further exertions. The porpoise's flesh is much like pork when cooked, and is a staple article of

HOW THEY ARE CAPTURED. The bravery, skill and endurance demanded of the porpoise catchers in their work is almost unknown to the outside world. In the morning, when the men are going "porpoisin'," the women and children turn out to see the canoes off. Each boat has two men, and when a storm comes up while they are out, or they are unusually late getting in, there is great anxiety among those on shore. It takes years of training to make a good porpoise hunter, and the big boys begin by going out with the experienced men. No matter what the water's condition.

contemplated the start is made. In calm weather the blowing of the porpoise can be heard a long way, and guides the Indians in the right direction. Shooting is the most successful method of killing the fish. Long, smoothbore guns with big charges of the powder and double B shot are used. As the fish is floating, swimming and diving about the water, first on the surface and then below, the canoe is paddled as near as possible. Then, as the porpoise lifts himself to dive, the gun's charge is let fly. There is seldom a failure to make a sure shot, but the fish is speared to stop his floundering about in the dying struggle. It is then landed in the canoe by grasping the pectoral fin with one hand, sticking a couple of fingers in the blow hole and dragging it over the side. In still water. this is easy, but when a high sea is running the undertaking is hard and dan-

Sharks are plenty, and their fins are almost always visible cutting the water as soon as a porpoise is wounded, the blood attracting them. No end of sto-ries are told of men having had their arms bit off by the sharks while they were reaching into the water to secure a porpoise, but old fishermen scoff at such a thing, and pay no attention to the dread ocean monsters as they almost rub their noses against the sides of the canoes.-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Novel Advertising.

Original and "taking" advertising dodges are cropping out every day. I witnessed the latest in the vicinity of the city hall yesterday. Two well formed young women, bearing between them a small banner which set forth in golden letters and catchy phrases the merits of a certain rat poison and ladies' face pow-der, were the features of the new dodge. Each young woman, besides wearing bewitching smiles and long, luxuriant golden hair, was adorned in attractive costume. Over their shoulders and crossing their bosoms diagonally were red, white and blue ribbons. Rosettes emblazoned with the national colors and the spread eagle were pinned to each shoulder.

A broad brimmed straw hat, fastened with lettered ribbon, sat jauntily on their heads. Each carried a small satchel, which contained alluring handbills and samples of the advertised wares. The advertising couple walked slowly down Broadway, attracting universal atten-tion. They distributed their handbills right and left. Accompanying each hand-bill was a "sample." Many gentlemen and ladies stopped and questioned the young women relative to the article advertised, and in each instance the inquiring one was met with a smile, a ready, effective enswer, and an extended hand, which held out a sample and the inevitable handbill. The scheme 'caught on."-New York Star.

A Surprised Clergyman.

The following incident is related on the authority of W. L. Bright, M. P.: "Mr. Bright went into an agricultural district one day, and he had to walk from the station a long way into the village. On the way a clergyman who was driving in a dog cart came up to him and the two men passed the time of day. The cler-gyman offered to drive Mr. Bright into the village, and Mr. Bright accepted the offer. The clergyman was a Tory and he had been reading a speech Mr. Bright had made the previous night, and turning to Mr. Bright he said: 'Have you seen the papers to-day, sir?

"'Yes,' said Mr. Bright. 'What's in

"'Why, that rascal John Bright has been making another speech.' "'And what was it about?' asked Mr. Bright.

"'Why, so-and-so and so-and-so,' and he went on to relate the incidents of the speech. They discussed the topic and Mr. Bright said:

"'Well, it is just possible that Mr. Bright may have been right and that he was only expressing his honest convictions. There may be something in it.' "'Oh, no, there can't be,' said the irate clergyman. 'If I had him here I'd feel just like shooting him.' "Neither revealed his identity, but before they separated the clergyman invited Mr. Bright to go to his church next morning, and Mr. Bright promised to

Not Real Live Frogs,

A good story is told concerning the proprietor of the Hotel Bellevue and one of the well known wits of the Clover club. It appears that some time ago a private dinner was ordered in the hotel, at which frogs' jegs a la poulet was to form an important course. On the day of the dinner, by some piece of ill luck, it was found that the supply of frogs had failed, and the question of where to obtain any more became an important one. In this emergency, as the proprietor of the hotel was bewailing his hard fate. our Clover club friend approached and asked what was the matter. He was told the sad state of affairs,

The Work of Modern Chemistry. Some years ago, in the course of a conversation with an eminent mathematician, I asked in all seriousness whether he could give me a definition of mathematics that would convey to my mind even a faint idea of the object in view in Horseshoeing A Specialty

"It is impossible to give such a definition—as impossible as it is in the case of hemistry." "But," said I, "I think I can give a definition of chemistry which would have some value;" and then, with would have some value;" and then, with the think, I suggested a definition of the case of the c nition of mathematics." I have frequently thought of this subject since, and have wondered whether it is possible to convey to the minds of those who are not chemists a clear idea in regard to the work chemists are doing. The difficulties are great-as great, I suppose, as in the case of mathematics, for chemists are no longer engaged in the study of familiar phenomena, but are dealing with matters which lie far beyond the limits of ordipary observation.—The Popular Science

A New Aliment from Wheat, According to Le Genie Civil, Dr. Dujardin-Beaumetz recently exhibited at the Paris Academy of Medicine a new alimentary substance - "fromentine"which is obtained from wheat by the aid of special millstones. Fromentine is the embryo of wheat reduced to flour and deprived of the oil which it contains. The substance contains three times more nitrogenous substance than meat, and a strong proportion of sugar. Thus, the Can supply every demand of the trade amount of nitrogenous matter in it is 51 per cent., while that of the richest meat. mutton, is but 21 per cent., and the proportion of digestible substance reaches 87 per cent. of the total weight.
