HUSKIE WHALE HUNTERS.

HOW THEY KILL THE LEVIATHAN AND THEN BLOW HIM UP.

The First White Men to Visit Liverpool Bay-Unpleasant Ways of Testing Courage-The Huskie Women-Facts Gleaned from Lord Lonsdale's Note Book The reporter took the note book and gleaned the following facts: "On Aug. 2," writes Lord Lonsdale, "we determined to make a trip to Liverpool bay. I persuaded a Huskie to put on civilized clothes and to take out his 'taberettes,' with a view of dispieces of serpentine, shaped like buttons-one very large and one small. The larger one is worn on the left of the under lip, close up to the mouth, and the smaller one on the other side. The Indians prize them very highly and value them at $50 each.) The clothes he put on I had given him beforeclothes he put on I had given him before-hand as payment for guiding us to the Huskie settlement. As we rounded the point into Liverpool bay I hoisted the Union Jack and my white ensign, and my man hoisted the Hudson Bay company's flag, and thus be-decked we sailed around the point and into full view of the wooden and canvas town of the Huskiewaux, distant about five miles.

A ROYAL WELCOME. "We no sooner hove in sight than I saw with the glasses all the Huskies come flocking down to the beach. Four men put out in kiacks to meet us as an advance guard. Three of them were armed with bows and arrows and knives, and the fourth carried a fan. About 400 yerds behind there can fully 300 others. We could see that there was a great commotion among them. As we advanced so did the kiacks, but when we were 300 yards from them they suddenly stopped paddling and would not come any nearer. I called and hailed, but all to no purpose. I saw they were distrustful, so I told our Huskie to hail them.

"As soon as he spoke they recognized his voice, and I halloed: 'To-go-to-chi-nack' (the said three notices thereof at least ten days before the time of holding such election, and at least one copy of the question and proposition so to be submitted and above set forth shall be posted up in a conspicuous place at each of the several places of voting during the day of such election. of voting during the day of such election. and sent them off to tell the others, which they instantly did, apparently in great glee. We went slowly on purpose, to give them a good chance of having a talk with their pals. There were about 175 men and 250 women and children now wait-and more respected than the present chief) then came in in very smart clothes. When the room was full the chief made a speech, to which all listened with marked attention He told them (so I learned through our interpreter, himself a Huskie, taken from his tribe when a boy by the Hudson Bay company) that the chief told them to welcome us; that we were the first white men who had ever visited them. He had heard that white men were brave, 'but if they are so brave,' continued he, how is it that they have not come to us before? Still, said he, 'I think they must be brave, and we will try them.' They then showed us how a man was killed by them. Four men seized the victim. Two held him by the shoulders, another placed his hands against his back and the fourth pulled his head back, when another man would draw a knife across his throat, and all was over."

CAPTURING THE WHALES. CAPTURING THE WHALES.

The Huskies then tried to intimidate Lord Lonsdale by rushing at him with their knives and then putting their hands over his heart to feel it beat. "While in the middle of this interesting performance," said Lord Lonsdale, "we heard a man calling 'Hoo-roo-e-c-ooo!' (or that is what it sounded like to me), which immediately threw everybody into confusion. Everybody rushed out, and the chief called upon me to follow. The interpreter told me we were going to a whale hunt.

"The cry still came at intervals, and I found out afterward it came from senti-nels who had been placed to watch for the coming of the white whale. The Indians wait until they come into the shallows, and then attack them

"The chief put his two young wives and myself into an O-me-ach (a large flat bot tomed boat made out whale skins), and we rowed in the direction of the cry. The women are not allowed to put their foot into a kiack, because of an Indian superstition which says that the art of hunting leaves the man who owns the kiack if such a thing should happen.

"We all rounded the corner in silence and there, moving up toward the shallows, were ten white whales. The Indians in their kiacks extended in skirmishing order, at the same time keeping up a rolling sound with their mouths and splashing the water.

"The whales were gradually driven into shoal water, and then began the attack. First ope man in his kiack would make a missioners of Cass county, Nebrasks, and seal of said county hereto affixed this 9th day of May, A. D. 1889. to the end, so it will float if it should fall out of the whale. The line and order kept by the Indians was something wonderful. They never got in each other's way, and no two men would ever make a rush for the same whale. Each man carried but one harpoon, and when these were all exhausted they attacked the mammals with their spears. When they were all killed they rese porcupines more than anything else.

"The women's part of the work then came in. They first gathered up all the harpoons and then pulled out all the spears. As each spear was withdrawn a blow pipe was pushed into the wound and the men blew into it, after which the opening was tied up. When every wound had been treated in this manner

HIGH HATS IN THEATRES.

A Manager Attributes the Nulsance to Imperfections in the Playhouse. Some people contend that the evil of high hats is aggravated considerably by the defects of our theatres, where sufficient slope is not given to the rows of seats, said a well known New York manager. In an ideal playhouse each spectator should be able to have an uninterrupted view of the stage. It was so in all the Roman amphitheatres, and also on the Greek stage, owing to the height of the platform where the performers moved and breadth of the space given to the chorus, who occupied the ground we cover with orchestra and stalls. Some of the newly erected theatres in this city are much better off in this respect than the older houses. By way of contrast, look at the conveniences proposed in a new London playhouse. The visitor will find his as needed for wet and slippery roads, or allotted seat a center of convenience and comfort. On cold nights he is to have a these Shoes and you will have no other. hot water bottle to his feet. He will drop a penny into a slot on the left, and J. M. Schnellbacher, out will pop a bill of the play. By delivering a shilling into an aperture on his right he will obtain an opera glass. Books of the words can be secured by turning a handle behind him. There will be a place for his hat, another for his umbrella, a third for his top coat. By pressing a button he can send a telegram; touching another he can call a cab He will went nothing, in fact, but the acts he can ask her how the baby is these details, but such are the general impressions to be gathered from various paragraphs which have appeared respecting the new place of amusement erected by an eminent dramatist for a success ful manager.

We live in hope that one-half of these agreeable attractions and sweet boons may be realized, for the play going public has been long taught by bitter experience not to expect too much. Even in some places where the electric light flourishes, the ventilation leaves much to be desired. In fact, we are not quite sure but that the gas "sunlight" of other theatres does not greatly tend to purify

Sometimes, on winter nights, the theatres where concrete and iron are used instead of wood for partitions and seats, where they ought to applaud with warmth and enthusiasm. In time all these raw defects of imperfect reforms and all these lingering evils of the old regime will disappear, and we hall as a sign of the millennium the crowning mercy of a bonnet for ladies that can be folded up at theatres and will no longer vex the souls of men .- New York Star.

Buried Alive.

An instance of buried alive is reported from Syracuse. For one such case which. through extraodinary circumstances, Horseshoeing A Specialty comes to light, it is only reasonable to assume that there are many known only to the all seeing eye and hidden from all human ken in the depths of an unviolated grave. Rare as are these evidences of a second death, a thousand times more terrible than the first, they are sufficient to engender the earnest hope that some means shall be reached whereby burial before death shall be impossible. Either some enactment whereby it would become a penal offense to inter a body that did not betray certain unmistakable evidence of absolute death, or some application of electrical appliance to the coffin and its contents. There are no mechanical difficulties in the way to prevent electrical communication between every recently buried body and the office or residence of the cemetery official or watchman. Nor is it impossible to construct an electrical appliance of such delicacy that the slightest movement in the coffin would sound an alarm that would lead to averting the worst fate which can possibly befall man born of women, or woman or children beloved of man. Electricity has long been made to summon men to the distant room of a great hotel when a fire is in its first stages. Surely it is possible for the same subtle servitor to tell of the frantic movements of the wretched mortal entombed ere the vital spark of life has departed?-Pittsburg Bulletin.

quote Solomon as say ag: "Spare the rod and spoil the child." What Solomon said was: "He that spareth the rod hateth his son." But the word "rod" in that connection does not necessarily refer to corporal punishment. It simply means paporal punishment. It simply means parental authority and guidance. The same debrew word is used in Psalm xxiii, where David says: "The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want. "His rod and his staff they comfort me."
