THE majority will rule the next house of representatives, Messrs. democrats and the republicans have the majority. The wise democrat will lie low and make no boosts as to what his party will do, or what it will prevent the republicans from doing, next winter.

plans to keep its claims for statehood before congress and the people. One of its arguments is a remarkable one, and may be cited as a telling rebuke to fashionable jokes about ignorance and illiteracy in sparsely settled districts in the far west. Of Wyoming's population over ten years of age only 2.6 per cent are unable to read. Comparison with a few states and nations gives flattering results for the ambitious territory. Thus in New Mexico the percentage of illiterates is 60.2, in South Carolina 48.3, in the United States 13.4, and in England 13. No state in the union can approach Wyoming's figures, and its closest rival among the territories is Dakota, where the percentage is 3.1.

LIEUTENANT Schwatka has reported the discovery of a large tribe of cliff dwellers in the unexplored regions of Northern Mexico. It has been the opinion of archaeologists that the cave dwellers or cliff dwellers of this continent ante dated the mound builders and that the race is extinct. Leiutenant Schwatka himself has explored the district in Arizona and New Mexico in which the deserted habitations of the cliff dweilers are found, and he was greatly surprised to come upon several thousands of living cliff dwellers in the wild regions of the Sierra Madre Mountain. He turned aside from the object of his expedition to inquire into the habits of these peculiar people, and he brought to light some facts that will be of great interesting to the archaeolegists of the world. His discovery makes it clear that the descendants of the ancient cliff dwellers, driven from their more porthern habitation, retired into the mountain regions of Northern Mexico, where they have been living, undisturbed, for centuries, following the simple habits and primiries customs of their ancestors, about whom there has been so much speculation.

STOP IT.

The following from the Salt Lake Tri bune of Thursday doesn't indicate that * that journal extends a very warm wel come to the cattle in human form brought over from the slums of Europe through the preselyting efforts of Mormon missionaries:

"One hundred and fifty victims of dirt, delusion and despair arrived vesterday from England under the herdership of eighteen holy elders, just in time to be naturalized and vote in the August election. About one-third remain in Salt Lake."

When will congress stop this kind of immigration? It is fully as undesirable as an influx of anarchists would be. Every person who goes through the endowment house takes an oath to obey without question the mandates of the Mormon priesthood. He swears that he will endeavor to avenge the death of Joe Smith, that he will do all in his power to overthrow all governments conflicting with that of the kingdom of God, 1. c., the rule of the Mormon priesthood. A man cannot unite with the Mormon church orginization without becoming a sworn enemy of the government and of American institutions. This is the reason why that in Utah the Free Masons and Odd Pellows never admit into their societies a member of the Mormon church, for the of those organizations rest . miscences.

upon a basis of solid patriotism—fealty to the government of our country. Let congress call a halt upon this sort of immigration.-C. B. Nonpareil.

IMPORTANT TO THE CITIZENS.

A Traveling Man Creates Creat Excitement in the Empire House INDEPENDENCE, IOWA, Oct. 14, 1888. Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich:

GENTS: Your Mr. Brooks came here tonight and registered as agent for Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and as he did so it awakened in me an interest never before realized in a guest at my house You will not wonder at it when I tell you the story. For years I have been greatly afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism, the pain and soreness of the joints at times being almost unbearable; could move about only with the aid of crutches. In addition to this my stomach became badly diseased, and neuralgia set in, which threatened to end my day. A traveling man stopping with me gave quite a history of your Syrup, and the peculiarities of its combination, which induced me to try it. I have taken six bottles and no act in my life affords me greater satisfaction than in writing you I am a well man.

It will be a pleasure for me to answer any communications, for I believe it to be the best remedy ever formulated.

HIS THREE SONS.

A Old Farmer Tests His Boys to Decide Which Shall Have the Place.

Once upon a time an old man called his three sons to him in the dusk of the evening, and in a faltering voice said to them: "My boys, in a little while you will have no father. I am standing on the shore of the river of death and soon I must launch my boat upon it. Now, I have, as you know, a splendid WYOMING is adopting well-devised farm, upon which one man can thrive, but as there are three of you I have been sorely perplexed as to which should have it. I have therefor decided to give each of you $2 that you must spend to-morrow, and to the one making the wisest purchase shall the farm be given. Come to me to-morrow evening at this time and tell me how you have each expended your money. Now, good night, and heaven bless you all."

On the following evening the three sons assembled before their father. "Reginald," said the latter to the eldest, "what did you purchase with your two dollars?"

"Father," returned the son, "I pondered long that I might make wise use of the money, and at last I bought a pair of strong

"Well done, well done; the journey through life is rugged and hard, and the thorns are thick upon the way. You have shown pru-dence and forethought and I love you the better for it. And what did you buy, Au-

"I too, thought long and deeply," responded the second son, "that I might not purchase anything trivial or foolish. Since the cap that I wear is worn and ragged, I bought a hat with a wide brim, which I show to you, my father."

The old man regarded him with a glance of pride and affection, and said: "You too have lone well, Augustus; often in this world the row is fevered and the sun rays beat fiercely mon the aching head, and your hat will com--t you. I rejoice that my sons are so filled ith wisdom. And you, Theophilus, what lid von buy?"

"My father," answered Theophilus, "I didn't onder worth a cent. As soon as I left you ast evening I blew in my stuff for five tickets o the baseball games."

With tears of joy streaming down his furwed face the venerable man embraced heophilus, and murmured in a voice hourse ith emotion: "Had I a farm as large as exas, with a windmill on it, it would be

And then Reginald and Augustus moved ally away into the gathering gloom, and while the one tried to keep the flies off himelf with his hat the other kicked himself everely with his boots. - Nebraska State

Tolstoi's Bleak Study.

The great Russian novelist, Tolstoi, writes in a study as bare, bleak, cold and nnadorned as are the steppes of his native clime. There is neither carpet on the floor nor draperies in the window, nor flowers, nor paintings, nor brie-a-brac. There is scarcely even any furniturean old lounge, pushed against one wall, an immense table in a hopeless litter of papers, periodicals, manuscripts and books of reference, near it a chair, and in an opposite corner a second table, also covered with pamphlets, but these assorted and arranged in piles. The room is divided into two compartments by an unpainted wooden partition which runs half way up to the ceiling and from which depend two wooden rakes-used by Tolstoi in his garden, and in the corner stands a wooden spade-above it, hanging from some wooden pegs, Tolstoi's great, caped overcoat. Evidently the famous writer plunges so deeply into the subject of his writings as to be oblivious of his surroundings.-Pittsburg Commercial.

Henry Irving's Supper. A desire to see more closely the man who has given us such pleasure is natural and excusable. So much may be urged in excuse for the numbers that often beiege the stage door of the Lyceum, their object being a nearer sight and perhaps a word from the hero or heroine of the evening. "Oh, Miss Terry, it is so kind of you to peak to us! We do admire you so! We have been waiting so long! When do you think that Mr. Irving is likely to leave the theatre?"

"That is more than I can say. I don't think he has begun his supper yet." "Oh, do tell us what he has for supper!" said a shrill voice.

"Well," said naughty Miss Terry, very gravely, "let me see. To-night-well, to-night, I think it is tripe and onions." Tripe and onions! Charles I, after his pathetic parting with his children-when tears coursed each other down his faceeating tripe and onions!-Frith's Remi-

Protection of Animals.

The protection of wild birds, fishes and quadrupeds from extermination has made good progress in the British Islands of late years; but in most other parts of the world the unscrupulous greed of men who make the capture of wild creatures a source of profit is rapidly reducing the numbers of many species, and threatens, if not stopped by the strong hand of the law, to lead to their utter extinction. The most hopeless case appears to be that of certain marine animals, which can only be protected by international agreement, of which there is no sign at present. The whaling and sealing industry of this country and America threatens ere long, if carried on as has hitherto been the case, to extinguish the race of whales and seals in the northern seas. Among birds the great auk has been hunted to death, while in the southern Pacific islands certain birds, like the dodo and the gigantic moa, have ceased to exist within comparatively recent

In the North American continent there are races of wild animals which were abundant twenty years ago, and are now on the point of extinction. Instances of the kind are the bison, or American buffalo, and the alligator of the Mississippi. Crocodile leather has become so fashionable of late that the capture of alligators in the great river of the United States has been pursued as a regular in-dustry, and with such energy that the creature is almost extinct. The valuable fur bearing animals of Siberia and the Hudson's Bay territory have also been hunted and trapped within the past generation with such success that the supply is now obtained with increasing difficulty every year. The last instance comes from Australia, where kangaroos have been hunted for their skins so unmercifully that the most valuable varieties are palpably approaching extinction. The kangaroo skin trade has become so alarmed that it is urging on the Australian legislators the necessity of a close time for these animals, if they are not soon altogether to disappear.-London Standard.

The Berlin Marriage Market.

The published return of the marriages celebrated in Berlin during the year 1887 is rather more interesting than statistical documents of the kind usually are. Only 122, out of the 15,209 marriages, took place between near blood relations. Of these, 113 were between first cousins, and 8 were between uncles and nieces. The remaining marriage was that of a nephew with his aunt. Among those who were married were 2 boys of 18 and 27 girls of 16 or under, together with 10 widowers of from 70 to 77, 1 divorced woman of 73 and 1 widow of 75. The two last married men of between 45 and 50. In 12,365 cases bachelors married spinsters; in 881 cases bachelors married widows or divorced women, and in 1,441 spinsters married widowers or divorced men; while in 522 cases widows or divorced women married widowers or divorced men. Two widows and 1 divorced woman took bachelors as their fifth husbands, and 6 widows and 2 divorced women took as their fifth husbands men who had been previously married, while 8 widowers or divorced men married spinsters after having already buried or got rid of four wives apiece. In many cases there was a considerable difference of age between the contracting parties. As many as 34 women were 30 or more years younger than their husbands; 42 were from 25 to 20 years younger; and 123 were from 20 to 25 years younger. On the other hand, in 4,700 cases the woman was older than her victim. In 84 marriages the difference was between 15 and 80 years; in 1 marriage it was 31 years, and in another it was as much as 40 years. In Berlin, as elsewhere, the young man's fancy seems to lightly turn to thoughts of love in the spring rather than at any other time, for the favorite matrimonial month is April. But after April, October sees more marriages than any month, and also more suicides.-London Globe.

Precious Potatoes.

During the civil war the Federal soldiers suffered severely at times for want of fresh vegetables, and the sanitary commission made it part of its business to supply the lack. Appeals for antiscorbutics, such as potatoes and onions, were sent far and near, and finally came to be spoken of familiarly as "scurvy circulars."

The response was immediate and hearty, and soon the agents of the commission were distributing the precious stores-five potatoes to a man, perhaps, or three potatoes and an onion. How welcome they were may be judged from the fact that, after eating them, the troops were exhilarated very much as if they had been taking stimulants.

A German lieutenant came into the commission's depot at Nashville.

"Do you keep sauerkraut for the soldiers?" he asked. The attendant pointed to an open barrel. The lieutenant grasped some of the precious preparation, and gazed at it with moistening eyes.

"You Germans eat sauerkraut, don't you?" said the agent. "No," he exclaimed, the tears by this time dropping from his cheeks; "we swallows it!" Probably few of the men ever realized before that a few onions and potatoes, or a little sauerkraut, might make all the difference between living and dving. Whatever we may think of the theory that men should live altogether upon vegetables, it is very certain that they cannot live altogether without them. - Youth's Companion.

It has been frequently stated that steam is driving sailing vessels off the seas. It appears that about one-half the tonnage of the world is in vessels propelled by wind, and even in England 45 per cent. of the tonnage is in sailing
