LATEST reports from Hayti state that Hippolyte, the rebellious leader, is about to wrest the presidency from Legitime.

STEAM engines, dynamite and men have combined their strength to clear up the masses of rubbish near the stone bridge at Johnstown.

THE HERALD notes with pleasure that the Plattsmouth city schools are likely to be greatly benefited by the conference of the present Boards of Education.

PLATTSMOUTH'S Fourth of July celebrations have heretofore gone pretty much by default. An energetic, lively rousing dispensation of enthusiasm on that day would do the STAR CITY good.

SYRACUSE, this state, still claims recognition as a part of the woolly west. The reported sight of a bear in the woods near there has roused the populace till the blood of '48 pulsates through their veins.

THE destruction of Seattle, the great seaport of the Puget Sound country, by fire, has dissolved at least $7,000,000 worth of property into ashes.

THE IMPROVEMENTS, both public and private, which Plattsmouth is now taking upon her, bring out the public spiritedness which must be manifested in any city that has a hope for the future.

THE SIOUX Indian reservation will doubtless soon be thrown open to settlement for the white people. For years the question has been agitated and this spring the government has prepared papers and made its offer to the Indians for possession.

THE generosity of the American people towards their fellows in distress at Johnstown and in the Conemaugh Valley is grand to observe, and the subscriptions received from foreign countries awakens a spirit of friendship and common regard for people of all nations that nothing else can do.

ACCORDING to the election returns Cass county will no longer have to stand the chagrin that she has borne for so many years because of the accommodations afforded her officers, courts and records.

with it. Cass county has nobly redeemed herself now, but the movement has long been needed and the time is at hand when it is imperative, and it is done. It is a matter much to be rejoiced over throughout the county that enough people have realized the county's need and voted to have it supplied, and every true spirited citizen ought to lay aside all prejudice and abide by the voice of the ballot.

ARMY SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

About two years ago a few earnest army chaplains, seconded by some religious bodies, began an agitation having for its object the abolition of Sunday inspections and drills in the army.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, JUNE 7, '89.—The following order of the president is published for the information and guidance of the army:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, June 7, 1889.—In November, 1862, President Lincoln quoted the words of Washington to sustain his own views and announced in a general order that, "The president, commander-in-chief of the army and navy, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath, by the officers and men in the military and naval service.

THE truth so concisely stated cannot be too faithfully regarded, and the pressure to ignore it is far less now than in the midst of the war. To recall the kindly and considerate spirit of the orders issued by these great men in the most trying times of our history, and to promote contentment and efficiency, the president directs that Sunday morning inspection will be merely of the dress and general appearance without arms, and the more complete inspection under arms, with all men present, as required in Par. 950, A. R., 1889, will take place on Sunday.

BENJAMIN HARRISON. By order of the Secretary of War. J. C. FELTON, Adjutant General.

A CURE FOR SUICIDE.

A Claim That Self Destruction Is Proof of a High Civilization.

An increase of suicide is not necessarily a proof that the world is growing more unhappy. On the contrary, it may mean that the general state of society is improving. Men and women do not kill themselves because their material condition is unbearable, but because some mental state leads them to prefer the sleep of death, no matter "what dreams may come," to the perplexity and moral tension of existence.

Suicide is a malady of civilization—a characteristic, it may be said, of an advanced and even prosperous state of society. In the United States, where, in the five years between 1882 and 1887, 8,226 persons took their own lives, only 270 of these deaths were attributable to destitution. It is to "end the heartache," and not to escape unbearable material conditions, that people take their lives; and this heartache or world weariness is quite as distinctly traceable to the increased sensitiveness of organization on the part of a cultivated generation as is the delight in progress, in society, in art, in music and in literature, that is also characteristic of this epoch of the world.

But though society can do nothing to restrain suicide, the individual being supreme in at least this respect, something may be done, and effectively, too, by the individual who finds the urging to self destruction strong within him. If no consideration of the hereafter gives such a one pause, it is in his power to put himself in health harmony with nature, if he will, by obeying the philosophical injunction to "look outward and not in;" to admit to his life the light of nature—first comprehending that nature is not a thing exterior to him, but that it is himself and he is nature—and not forever shut himself within the darkness of a partial and selfish view of life; and, examining in this light his condition, to determine whether the lethargy and despair which impel him to suicide are not of his own making, and whether the natural gifts of hope and health are not still within recovery.—Boston Transcript.

Valuable MSS. at the Vatican.

There are said to be in the library of the Vatican 20,000 MSS., a large portion of which are Greek and Oriental. The famous MS. of the Greek Bible, the "Codex Vaticanus," has hitherto been so jealously guarded that even professed scholars have not been allowed really to examine it. It is now, however, more accessible. Looked at merely as a piece of writing, the MS. is singularly fine; the letters are clear, distinct and well formed, and there is plenty of space between the lines, so that the reading of it becomes, with a little practice, by no means difficult.

Another treasure, also to be found in the same case, is the palimpsest copy, discovered by Cardinal Mai, of Cicero's "De Republica." The most interesting fragment is the complete success with which the ancient underlying writing has been recovered. It is hardly possible to believe that the clear, well defined letters before you have been covered up by other writing for perhaps a thousand years. Another treasury of valuable MSS. is that on Mount Athos. The total number of MSS. in the twenty libraries on this mountain is 5,579. Professor Lambros is cataloguing them, and expects to find among them many things of unique interest to the biblical student.—New York Telegram.

Luck in Shoes.

It is supposed to be unlucky to put either shoe on the wrong foot, nor must one put the left shoe on before the right, unless one wished to bring about some direful calamity. Augustus Caesar, it is said, put on his left shoe first, and before nightfall he narrowly escaped assassination. Dr. Brewer says that plucking off the shoe among the Jews, smacking the pipe among the Indians, thumb licking among Scotch, breaking the straw together among the Teutons and shaking hands among the English are all ceremonies to confirm a bargain. The Jewish custom of plucking off the shoe or sandal is frequently referred to in the Scriptures. In the story of Ruth it is recorded that a compact which Boaz made was sealed by a shoe being drawn off. One of the verses reads: "Now, this was the manner in former time in Israel concerning redeeming and concerning changing, for to confirm all things a man plucked off his shoe and gave it to his neighbor; and this was a testimony in Israel."—Providence Telegram.

Poison in Eels.

It appears from a communication made to the Regii Lincei at Rome that eels and murena possess a poison similar to that of vipers. In them it is not found in the mouth, and they have no organ for inoculating their enemies with it. So it is usually without any effect upon man, because in the eel eaten by him as food the poison is destroyed by the heat of cooking, and also because, as is the case with the venom of the viper, it has no effect upon the digestive ways.—New Orleans Picayune.
