CITY CORDIALS.

—Mrs. J. L. Urah and family left this morning on a week's visit in Omaha and Lincoln.

—A party of young people gathered at the home of George and Clara Palmer last evening, and were highly entertained.

—A "breakfast picnic" was given this morning by a number of young ladies of this city, who spent the morning out in the suburbs.

—A local Y. M. C. A. conference at Weeping Water tonight and tomorrow will be attended by several representatives of the Y. M. C. A. of this city.

—The fruit market is well stocked now with all the early fruits of the summer, and the quality is generally excellent. Nebraska is the milk and honey district of America.

—Next Monday and Tuesday Platts-mouth will be treated to great games of ball between Platts-mouth and Norfolk. Games called Monday at 4 p. m. and Tuesday at 3 p. m.

—The men's gospel meeting at the Y. M. C. A. hall at 4 p. m. tomorrow is a very befitting place for young men to spend an hour on the Sabbath day. Special attention is given to singing. All men are invited and welcome to come.

—In district court today the cases of Smith vs. Dodge and Storts & Her vs. P. Gering were heard. In the former case Beeson, Folk Bros. & Root represented plaintiff and S. F. Thomas, defendant. In the latter case Byron Clark represented plaintiff and M. Gering defendant. After hearing these cases court adjourned over till June 28.

—If anybody wants proof of Cass county's ability to produce rich crops a day's trip in any direction or over any precinct in the county will be proof of indisputable character. The crops of all kinds are now advancing rapidly, and those farmers who have time to look to will find the harvest a heavy one. There were laid upon our table today some timely heads plucked from Walter Jenkins' farm, near Eight Mile Grove, by E. L. Hanlin, full ten inches in length, the heads were full and of best appearance.

—It may sound a little queer but it is a fact, that last evening the scribe sat at the desk loading the "hook" to meet the somewhat embarrassing call of "copy" on the morrow which was sure to come a large dude bug of the species fygarondthelamp came in at the door, and in the light of the gas lamp seated himself upon the inkstand and taking a pen from the rack proceeded to comb his whiskers. It was evidently going to the cricket ball and expected to dance with the lady bug, for nothing else could have induced such an affectionate dressing of itself. This also demonstrates the fact that Nebraska keeps to the front and is not slow to catch on to the fashions of Paris.

—Eight Mile Grove leads the county this week on runaways, two quite serious ones being reported from the same locality. On Wednesday evening Samuel Fitzell, who rents Samuel Richardson's farm, started to return home from cultivating in the field. He had two teams of horses and one of mules, the mule team being ahead. One of the horses became frightened and with its mate ran wildly ahead on the mules, throwing themselves and one of the mules. In the fall one of the horses broke a leg, making an unfortunate accident for its owner, Mr. Fitzell. About the next day Mr. J. P. Ruby hitched a young colt to a cart and started out to break the colt. In passing Mr. Richardson's farm a calf frightened the colt and getting away from Mr. Ruby ran through a wire fence and across a corn field. The fence cut the animal very severely.

—Events every day transpire to prove Cass county's excellent qualities on the stock and grain line. The following from the South Omaha daily Drover's Journal has the full weight of truth: "Wiley Black, of Platts-mouth, one of the first patrons of this market, was here today with two loads of fine steers that topped the market at $4.20. Mr. Black handles a large amount of stock, and generally sends in top loads. The cattle were fed by L. C. Todd, of Nehawka, Cass County."

—If there is any young school boy in town that desires to establish a fine collection of Nebraska insects he would have a hard time to go out in the woods and catch them but if he will sit out in the shed with the doors open and a light burning brightly on one of these warm evenings he will have bugs of every description size and habit about him in an abundance that will keep him busy laying them away as they light upon the pins he has placed for them and push themselves down over them.

—THE HERALD always likes to bear the right side of everything and also likes to give all the news. Last night some observations were taken on the line of insects that fly at night. Many specimens were observed and some peculiar features and insects noted, but to give an outline of strange antics and performance seen would take a volume, suffice it to say, however, that the mosquito, that small insect of the genus culex—having a sharp pointed proboscis, by means of which it punctures the skin and sucks the blood of the weak and helpless or unprotected—was at hand with a song of aad harp upon its wings. Within its breast was a never satisfied and elastic stomach which it never misses an opportunity to fill without the least bit of introductory ceremony—other than its proboscis.

—The ladies of the second ward redeemed its reputation this morning in an applaudable manner. Mr. Philip Batchelor, familiarly known as "Philip Batch," a German farmer who lives about three miles south of town, was hauling manure. At the corner of Ninth and Walnut streets his wagon, which was heavily loaded, sunk into a rut and his team was unable to proceed. "Batch" used his whip freely but the horses were unable to move the load, and after working himself up into an exasperated state of mind, language of a profane nature was poured out at the team with a stream of lashings. The loud and foul language echoed throughout that peaceful neighborhood and horrified the modest housewives. After looking and listening some time they sallied forth in a body and captured the man, team and all. One lady took the whip, another the reins and the rest of them took "Batch." He protested vigorously at their interference, but respected them enough to cool down his temper and words, and yielding to their firm command climbed upon the wagon and threw off a part of the load. In beating the horses "Batch" broke several pieces of timber upon them. The ladies were present in sufficient number to have given him a sound thrashing, but accomplished the work of a humane society and police officer in a ladylike manner.

Horse Thief Captured

The chase after horse thieves in this country yesterday was quite exciting. The one from Hamburg, Ia., was caught last evening in Louisville in the livery stable where he had just given orders to have his horse fed quickly as he wished to go on. Marshal Dunn and Ed Fitzgerald were after him. He went through here in the morning and his captors started after him in the afternoon. When arrested in the livery barn he was completely surprised as he had no idea any one was following him, or had any trace of him. He was armed with a large navy revolver and belt, with "E. R. S." rudely engraved on the handle. His name is E. R. Smith. Dunn and Fitzgerald had him mount again and retrace his steps to this city where he was jailed. Sheriff Davis of Fremont Co. came over yesterday, but learning Smith was being traced up by Dunn and Fitzgerald, remained here till they returned, and took him on to Iowa today. The saddle on the stolen horse was the property of Wm. Jiradet, whom Smith was working for. The Missouri Valley thief has not, as yet learned, been captured. W. D. Jones and Chas. Rutheford went clear to Nebraska City in search of him but did not catch him. Officers from Missouri Valley are also in pursuit of him and think they will catch him in the act.

BROWNS AND CLERKS.

They Cross Bats at the Ball Park With Hard Luck for the Clerks.

Yesterday afternoon, the Browns met the town clerk nine at the Ball Park to have a game, but there was also another motive that prompted to call the game. The boys in the spirit of true American friendship and fellow sympathy caught the Johnstown fever and desired to raise money for a contribution to the sufferers in the Conemaugh Valley, and to start this contribution was the use to which the gate money was put. The boys had a boys' game; the gate receipts were not large but if money will be subscribed to make it $50 it will be forwarded. The following is the kind of a game the boys played:
